ATTEMPT TO NULLIFY ACT OF HARDING IS CHARGED

Effort to Deport "Political Prisoners" Said to Be Due to Insistence of Labor Department on Misinterpreting His Intention.

WARRANTS TWO YEARS OLD RELIED UPON

Attitude of Late President in Granting Amnesty to Five, Who Resist Being Sent Out of Country, Declared to Be Clear.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Disaptch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—The Department of Labor, which administers the Federal immigration laws, has reached back into its files nearly two years for deportation warrants on which to banish from the country five of the "political prisoners" whose sentences were commuted by President Harding on the day he started his Alaskan trip.

In the order freeing these men from the Leavenworth prison, nothing was said about deportation. Their sentences were commuted on two conditions:

First, that they should be "law abiding and loyal to the Government of the United States," and, second that the President should have the right at any time, without further ado, to send them back to jail if he deemed they had violated the law.

Deportation Stayed.

Notwithstanding the plain inference that the President did not intend these men should be deported, they were hustled to the jumping-off place at Ellis Island, under orders from acting Secretary of Labor E. J. Henning, and probably would be out of the country by this time if deportation had not been stayed by habeas corpus proceedings.

The five men, all of whom were members of the Chicago group of I. W. W. prisoners, are: Rilchard Brazier, who has been ordered returned to England; Joe Graber, to Russia; Peter Green to Czecho-Slovakia; Don Sheridan, to Scotland, and James Slovick, to Russia.

Originally, there were six against whom the department, in apparent nullification of one of the last official acts of the late President, produced deportation warrants. The Scotch forehandedness of J. A. MacDonald proved his undoing. Prior to his release, in order to be ready if freedom ever came, MacDonald had procured a British passport, so that he might go back and visit his people in Nova Scotia. His possession of this passport enabled the American immigration authorities to send him out of the country immediately. In the case of the five others, there was a delay while the authorities were figuring where they should be sent and arranging with foreign Governments for the necessary papers.

"Ought to Be Hanged."

This delay proved a Godsend. The men had expected to be granted the 60 or 90 days respite under bond which is customarily allowed to a deportee. Assuming that the bail would be the $1000 usually required in such cases, friends of the prisoners had made arrangements with a bonding company on that basis. To their surprise they were informed by the Department of Labor that the bond would be $2500 for each man.

An officer of the Joint Amnesty Committee of Washington, which has led in the movement for the release of the "political prisoners," was told by an attache of the Department of Labor, in reply to a protest against the size of the bond, that the men were I. W. W.'s and "ought to be hanged."

The bond was not reduced. While protests were pending, Acting Secretary Henning put a summary end to the discussion by ordering the prisoners direct from Leavenworth to Ellis Island. During the period between the commutation order and the transfer to the island, friends of the prisoners assert, the men were held virtually incommunicado.

Aug. 7, deportation was prevented for the time being by issuance of a writ of habeas corpus by Judge Luther M. Goddard of the Southern District Federal Court of New York. The writ was obtained by Attorney Isaac N. Shorr, employed by the General Defense Committee of the I. W. W. Under it, the Government is required to produce the five pris-

FIERY CROSSES BLAZE AT 260 PLACES THROUGHOUT OKLAHOMA

Signalize Drive by Klan Against Lawlessness and as Memorial to Harding.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Aug. 18.—Fiery crosses blazed simultaneously at 260 places over Oklahoma tonight signalizing a statewide drive by the Ku Klux Klan against lawlessness and as a memorial to the late President Harding.

"While the signal flashed over the State has nothing to do with the military rule in Tulsa County or other places, the Statewide campaign has been started because of the many acts of lawlessness attributed to the klan," State Klan officials said.

ONE OF MOTOR-BOAT PARTY MISSING AFTER IT CAPSIZED

Edwin Weiss, 23 years old, a mechanic of 5325 McKissock avenue, is believed by police to have been drowned in the Mississippi river near the foot of Carrie street at 6:45 o'clock last evening. He was with a party of five men in a motor boat driven by George Knight of 2110 College avenue when the boat overturned throwing all of them into the water.

Rowboats put out from the Missouri side and rescued those who were clinging to the capsized boat. When the rescue party reached shore it was found that Weiss was missing. Knight explained he had invited the party for a ride and in attempting to evade a floating log had put the wheel over too hard, and the boat capsized.

SHOT AND KILLED BY BOY OF 13

Man Threatened Nephew, Who Was Exonerated at Inquest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINN CREEK, Mo., Aug. 18.—Clarence Scott, 42 years old, was shot and killed by his nephew, Ezra Hopkins, 13, six miles east of here late yesterday. At the inquest it was testified that Scott had threatened he Hopkins boy, his two brothers and his father, E. E. Hopkins. He accused the boy of killing a turkey, which he denied. Scott tried to entice the elder Hopkins away from the boy and when asked why he had a shotgun said it was to protect himself and pointed it at Hopkins.

Hopkins seized the weapon, which was fired almost in his face. Ezra Hopkins then shot Scott with a target rifle. The verdict was justifiable homicide.

AUTOMATIC PHONE INSTALLATION SOON TO BE BEGUN HERE

123,613 TELEPHONES IN EXCHANGES HERE

Installation Will Require About Two and Half Years, but Will Probably Be in Use in 1926.

Installation of automatic telephone equipment in probably two downtown exchanges, and preparations to handle an estimated increase of 93,000 telephones within the next five years, are planned by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., to keep pace with expected growth of the city, telephone company officials announced yesterday.

The entire St. Louis exchange, which takes in also East St. Louis and Granite City, had a total of 123,613 telephones on July 1, last. Based on past records of growth, and expected development, company engineers estimate this total will be increased to 216,600 by the close of 1928.

This increase will include approximately 37,000 telephones being absorbed in the merger of the Kinloch with the Bell system, exclusive of duplications.

E. D. Nims, president of the Bell company, recently stated the company had expected acquisition of the Kinloch system to provide facilities to meet all demands through 1924. "This has not proved out," he said, "and we will have to add to our program very largely to care for the demand now apparent. I do not believe citizens of St. Louis realize the rate of growth of the city, as indicated by the telephone demand."

Dial Calls Will Be Used.

The machine switching, or automatic equipment, will be an innovation in the city. It eliminates the operators at the exchange to make the connections. The patron calling a number makes his own connection by use of a numbered dial. This dial is revolved to mark off the number desired, as one would turn the combination knob of a safe to release the lock, and the connection is completed automatically. The Main and Olive exchanges would be the first equipped with automatic telephones, it was said.

This installation would require about two and a half years, it was said, and the equipment probably would be put in use some time in 1926. Six months would be required for the engineering work, it was stated, one year for manufacture of the equipment, and one year for installation.

The machine switching equipment is not carried in stock by manufacturers, a Bell official said, but will have to be designed and manufactured to meet local requirements.

Cost of equiping two exchanges is estimated at $4,500,000. Installation of such equipment in outlying exchanges would follow later, it was said, and it was estimated 10 to 16 years would be required to complete such installations in other exchanges.

Advantages of such equipment were summed up with, "you are your own operator. Night or day you can get through a call as fast as you can manipulate the dial and you do not have th want to get an operator at a rush hour, or at slack hours at night."

Numerous factors enter into the expected increase of 93,000 telephones in the next five years including population increases, business development, higher wages paid workmen who formerly were not telephone users, and increasing demand for faster communication.

Estimates of the engineers do not include total population increases, but only the increase of potential telephone users. Hundreds of negroes and laborers arriving in the city weekly are not included in the estimates. At present the Bell company has 13 telephones to each 100 of population. When the Kinloch merger is completed this ratio will be increased to 16.2 to each 100 population.

Proportion of Telephones Low.

The city ranks low in the ratio of telephones to population, compared to other cities. The ratio in Omaha, Neb., is 28 to each 100; Chicago, 22.3; Minneapolis, 24.2; Los Angeles, 22.7; San Francisco, 25.2; New York, 18.2; Boston, 20.9; Cincinnati, 18.5, and Philadelphia, 13.2.

Merger of the Kinloch with the Bell now is under way and probably will be completed about June 1, 1924. Figures prepared by the traffic engineers indicate an increase in telephone calls daily when this merger is completed. These figures show a present average daily total of 970,000 telephone calls for the Bell

U. S. AND CANADA PLAN PARLEY ON LIQUOR SMUGGLING

International Conference to Be Held Early Next Month at Some Point Near the Border.

CLOSER CO-OPERATION TO BE WORKED OUT

Refusal of Clearance Papers to Rum Vessels Bound to American Ports to Be One Subject.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—An international conference to work out plans for closer co-operation between the Canadian and American Governments in prohibiting the smuggling of liquor into this country will be held early in September at some point near the border convenient to both the Dominion and United States delegations.

Arrangements for the conference have been practically completed and are to be formally announced soon. The American representatives will include Assistant Secretary Moss of the Treasury, who has charge of prohibition enforcement and the customs division. Other members of the group to be sent from Washington will include a State Department official and a customs export of the Treasury Department.

Two Chief Subjects.

The two chief subjects to be dealt with are understood to be those involving the issuance of clearance papers by the Canadian Government to vessels with liquor cargoes destined to the United States and border smuggling. Both questions have been under discussion since June between the two Governments, much of the correspondence having passed through the British embassy here to Ottawa, but no satisfactory solution to either has resulted.

The conference was suggested by the Canadian Government after the receipt by it early in June of a communication from the Washington authorities suggesting that Canada assist in preventing the exportation of liquor into the United States.

American prohibition officials feel they are entitled to a certain amount of co-operation from foreign Governments whose vessels are permitted to clear for the United States carrying cargoes of prohibited contents and which can enter this country only through smuggling or other unlawful means, in violation of the customs laws. It is their belief that an arrangement to avoid such practices between the United States and Canada can be worked out, once they meet the Dominion authorities in friendly and frank discussions such as are now hoped for.

Changes in Law Necessary.

The American delegates will enter the conference realizing, however, that Canada cannot quickly amend the existing practices relative to the issuance of clearance papers to vessels with illicit cargoes bound for American ports. The Canadian Government informed the State Department when the question was last mentioned that it was unable under the laws prevailing in the Dominion to deny clearance papers to such ships.

This statement was made in response to a communication addressed to the British Ambassador here and transmitted by him to Ottawa, in which the Washington Government pointed out the difficulties experienced in enforcing the prohibition laws of the United States along the Canadian border. It also was said by the State Department in this communication that the Canadian authorities permitted small boats to take on liquor cargoes and make their departure for American ports, thus complying with Canadian laws prohibiting the sales of liquors to persons in Canada, but allowing their exportation to the United States.

Smuggling to Be Considered.

It is realized by officials here that before the situation complained of can be remedied in a satisfactory manner, it will be necessary for the Ottawa Parliament to enact new legislation. Should the conference work out a plan and new laws be enacted by the Canadian Parliament, it is assumed they would apply to vessels on the Great Lakes and inland waterways as well as on the coasts.

BABY KIDNAPED IN NEW YORK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Peter McKenzie, whose husband is foreman for a trucking concern, placed her baby carriage containing her 3-months-old daughter, Lillian, in a line of baby carriages outside a 5 and 10 cent store today and went inside to make purchases.

When she came out in a few minutes the baby carriage was still there but Lillian had disappeared. The police believe some childless woman took the baby.

MARINE TORPEDO LAUNCHED FROM FRENCH AIRPLANE

Total Weight of Machine, With 600-Horsepower Motor, Is 7200 Pounds.

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Aug. 18.—The first successful demonstration of the launching of a marine torpedo from an airplane has been conducted at the French aviation field at Villacoublay. The Kevassieur apparatus was used with a torpedo weighing 100 pounds.

The demonstration was made in the presence of Chief Engineer Bontieron of the French air service and Naval Engineer Laurent. A 600-horsepower plane with four-bladed propeller took off easily with the torpedo hung between the wheels below the fuselage.

The total weight of the plane and apparatus was 7200 pounds, but the machine rose easily to a height of 4000 yards in seven minutes. Then it descended and skimmed for some distance at an altitude of only 20 yards and at a speed varying from 50 to 100 miles an hour.

The torpedo was released along its whole length by pressing a lever. The missile fell horizontally and with the speed imparted it by the speed of the plane, sped along the ground, straight as an arrow, for 250 yards before stopping.

JEWISH EDITOR FILES $200,000 LIBEL SUIT AGAINST FORD

Herman Bernstein of New York Says Action Is "For Public Service."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Herman Bernstein, editor of the Jewish Tribune, today made good his threat to sue Henry Ford, when papers in a libel action for $200,000 damages were filed by his counsel, Guggenheimer, Untermyer and Marshall.

Bernstein was one of those who journeyed overseas with Ford on the peace ship and Ford has been quoted as saying that on that voyage Bernstein told him most of what later appeared in the series of articles against the Jews in Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent. The suit started by Bernstein today is nominally to clear himself of the smirch which he declares came thus on his name.

It has been explained, however, that once Ford is put on the witness stand he will be so questioned as to reveal what was behind his attack on the Jews. In a letter to Ford last month, announcing his plans to bring suit, and inviting Ford to name counsel in New York upon whom service of the papers could be made, Bernstein wrote:

"It is high time American people get a true picture of the manner of man you are, and I feel that in prosecuting this suit I am performing an important public service."

The summons and complaint filed today are directed against Henry Ford and the Dearborn Publishing Co., publishers of the Dearborn Independent. Of this, Bernstein declares Ford is president and owns all the stock.

BOXING BOOM IS OVER, OPINION OF GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

Says $1,000,000 Would Be His First Bid for Reporting Dempsey-Firpo Match.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18. — George Bernard Shaw, a man of pronounced opinions—some of which are right—is now of the opinion that the "boxing boom is over."

It is recalled that it was Shaw's opinion just before the Dempsey-Carpentier fight of 1921 that "The real odds are 50 to one against Dempsey." It was his opinion just after the fight that "Dempsey was morally knocked out in the first round, also in the second."

Shaw's latest opinion was voiced in answer to a question as to what he would ask as an honorarium for coming to the United States to report the approaching match between Dempsey and Firpo. He replied from Glen Gariff, County Cork, Ireland:

"Say $1,000,000 free of American income tax as a first bid. I think the boxing boom is over; the Carpentier-Dempsey fight was its summit, and subsequent disappointments have turned its descent into a degringolade (tumble).

"If I were an editor I should seize the moment to write down boxing instead of writing it up. The cat is jumping the other way."

Paid admissions to the Carpentier-Dempsey fight, it may be added were 75,820. Two years later for the Firpo-Willard match, a distinctly inferior attraction, they were 75,712.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 18.—Dr. A. Ross Hill of Kansas City, former president of the University of Missouri, declined to comment today on a report that the Oklahoma Board of Regents had agreed to offer him the presidency of the University of Oklahoma.

According to an Oklahoma City dispatch to the Kansas City Star, the choice of Dr. Hill is said to have been approved by Charles J. Wright of Tulsa, president of the board, and the salary fixed at $12,000.

SUIT FOR RECEIVER TIES UP WORK OF BUILDING CONCERN

Officers of Federal Home Building Corporation Announce Suspension of Building Operations Pending Hearing of Case.

CONTRACT HOLDER SEEKS A REFUND

Suit of H. W. Felter Over $1902 Payment Causes Application for Receiver, Says Company's Official.

All building operations of the Federal Home Building Corporation and acceptance of payments on contracts were temporarily suspended yesterday, company officers announced, pending a hearing of a suit filed Friday in Circuit Court by H. W. Felter of 5174 Easton avenue, asking appointment of a receiver. The case is set for Aug. 30.

Circuit Judge Mix issued no order in the case except one directing the defendants to appear on Aug. 30 to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed.

"We are accepting nothing and paying out nothing until we have a hearing," E. J. Barrett, vice president and general manager of the company, said. He said a request would be made for a re-setting of the case on a date earlier than Aug. 30. The company will resist the receivership action.

The construction forces of the company are being retained and men in the drafting and architectural departments would continue work Barrett stated, but other activities will be held up. The company occupies extensive offices in the Tower Building. Barrett said salesmen had been notified they could receive applications for contracts, but to accept no payments on them during the suspension.

Barrett declared Felter, since filing the suit, had made an offer of settlement if he were refunded the $1902 which Felter says was paid in negotiations for a building contract. This deal was the basis of the suit, Felter alleging the contract had proved unsatisfactory and charging the corporation refused to return his initial payment. Barrett said this payment would not be refunded at present, due to the fight to be made on the receivership sought. He explained the company contract requires a written demand be made, and the company has 90 days in which to pay it.

Said to Have 400 Contracts.

Publicity statements were issued recently by the company that it had contracted with 400 St. Louisans to build them homes costing a total of $3,500,000. The company began business Feb. 28, last. Initial cash payments on contracts range from 10 to 12½ per cent, payable when the contract is signed, and on this basis it is computed the company has collected more than $350,000.

As has been related, Felter, a hardware dealer, made these allegations, substantially as follows: That he paid the company $1902 at the time he applied for a contract for the construction of a building with the reservation the corporation would draw up and submit a contract. In the event the contract was unsatisfactory, his first payment was to be refunded. The contract submitted was declared unsatisfactory, but the corporation declined to make the refund.

Other allegations made by Felter were that unduly high salaries were paid to officers, and that though the corporation had contracts for buildings for 2500 persons, it is proceeding with the construction of a relatively small number. He states a belief the corporation is insolvent.

Felter's Version Denied.

Barrett denied Felter ever made a formal demand on the company for return of the money. He declared the contract had not been completed, pending inclusion of changes sought by Felter. Barrett indicated the company might institute a counteraction against Felter, alleging damages.

A summary of building operations given by the company follows: Five houses completed; 50 about to be started or in various stages of construction; plans and specifications drawn for 185 houses, and estimates and preliminary plans being made for 165 others.

The prospective home builder executes a contract based on actual cost, plus 10 per cent, it was said. The initial cash payment is 10 to 12½ per cent of the total. When the house is turned over to the contract holder he executes a first deed of trust, due in three years, for approximately 60 per cent of the balance, and a second deed of trust for the remainder, to be paid in 30 monthly payments over a period of two and one-half years. These pay-

COOLIDGE TAKES RIDE ON HORSE, BUT EAGER PHOTOGRAPHERS MISS HIM

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE today for the first time since he became chief executive went horseback riding, the form of recreation it appears that he will adopt.

Leaving his hotel apartment after a conference late in the day with members of the United States Coal Commission, the President asked to be driven to the White House stables where he told attendants he would like to see the horses. Several were brought out, including "General," the chestnut bay gelding which had attracted his attention several days ago on his first visit to the stables.

Soon afterward "General" had been saddled and the President, wearing his business suit, mounted the horse and was off for a ride around the speedway bridle path running along the Potomac River.

Mr. Coolidge, in taking his ride today, either wittingly or unwittingly escaped some dozen news photographers who ever since it became known that the President was going to take up horseback riding, had been getting up at daylight so as to get a picture of him taking his first ride.

They will witness a specially staged performance of Moliere's "Malade Imaginaire," which will become, in German, "Die Eingebildete Kranke." (The Imaginary Illness.)

The guests who have been asked to sit together at Reinhardt's table Monday include Chancellor Seipel of Austria, Director Gemier of the Paris Odeon, Sir Arthur Collins, director of the Drury Lane Theater, London; Maximilian Harden, Paul Geraldy, President Michael Hainisch of Austria; Romain Rolland, Louis Untermyer, Lord Berners, Marie Jeritza, Baron Popper, Lady Diana Manners Cooper and Capt. WOMAN, AGED 60, FOUND DEAD WITH MAN BENDING OVER BODY

Roomer Held for Coroner's Inquest; Couple Said to Have Been Drinking.

Police answering a call to 3333 Morgan street at 11 o'clock last night, found the body of Miss Edna Luthmar, 60 years old, proprietor of a rooming house at that address. They were told by Mrs. Kate McBride, a roomer, that she discovered the body in the doorway between two downstairs rooms, and that David Cross, 41, also a roomer, was bending over Miss Luthmar, trying to speak to her. There were no marks of violence on the body, beyond a bruise on one hand, apparently suffered several days ago.

Mrs. McBride said Cross had been attentive to Miss Luthmar for some time and had frequently threatened her life if she received attentions from other men. Cross, who was held for the Coroner, denied having been near the body. He asserted he knew nothing of the death until Mrs. McBride called out to him. He and Miss Luthmar had been drinking, Cross said.

MELLON BACK FROM EUROPE

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, returned from Europe last night on the Aquitania. He said the trip was undertaken solely for recreation and that at no time had governmental business intruded. Reports that he had discussed the reparations situation with Premier Poincare were not true, Mellon said.

Asked if he intended to remain in the cabinet, Secretary Mellon said his understanding was that President Coolidge desired him to remain, at least for the time being. Until he has talked with the new President he will not be in a position to say whether he will remain a member of Mr. Coolidge's official family permanently, he explained.

DA VINCI PAINTING TO PARIS

It will be compared by experts with a similar painting under the same title which hangs in the Louvre in Paris in order to ascertain which is the real old master and which is the copy. The painting brought from America is insured for $500,000.

MUSSOLINI EXPECTED TO OFFER RUHR PROPOSAL

Italian Premier Reported to Favor Linking Interallied Debts With the Reparations Problem as Plan Giving Only Ray of Hope for Solution of Question.

NEW SUGGESTION BY HUGHES ANTICIPATED

Poincare to Make Three War Memorial Speeches Today, in Which He Probably Will Touch on German Situation.

BY FERDINAND TUOHY.
Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Aug. 18.—Premier Poincare will make three war memorial speeches tomorrow. At the chief of these, at Charleville he is expected to concentrate on Chancellor Cuno's fall, Stresemann's advent and what France hopes in the way of an industrial Ruhr deal and reorganization of German finances under the Socialist finance minister, Hilferding.

It is improbable that the Premier will refer more than casually to his latest reply to Premier Baldwin which the Belgian cabinet is now considering.

Mussolini May Act.

Never will there have been such an orgy of open diplomacy as at the end of this week, when it will literally rain blue, white and yellow books from the various allied capitals, including, it is said, even Rome. Premier Mussolini, despite the violent anti-French tone of his smothered press, is reported as preparing to emerge from the wings and press for linking interallied debts and reparations as the only plan that gives a ray of hope.

Furthermore, Secretary of State Hughes is said to be about to retread the stage in like manner with an offer to participate in an impartial expert committee to assess Germany's capacity to pay if invited by all involved.

Speculation on Coolidge.

French publicists seem quite at sea over the United States. Many today report President Coolidge as against isolation of France, quotations from leading New York journals critical of Baldwin having had the effect of making Frenchmen believe the United States takes their side.

At the Foreign Office, when the Premier's representative was asked as to what France intended doing about her American debt, the view was expressed this was not at present a part of practical politics. There is no intention of sending a second Parmentier mission to Washington.

The French are genuinely encouraged over the World Court's decision against Germany's stopping a vessel at the Kiel Canal. The decision is interpreted as affirming that Germany cannot evade her obligations under the Versailles treaty.

Compromise With British Anticipated in France.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—A certain amount of optimism is felt in official circles and shared in part by the press, that the present negotiations with the British will end in a satisfactory compromise, although there is apparently nothing tangible on which to base such feeling.

One official who has been closely connected with the reparations question said he was hopeful, because he felt the justice of the French cause was so patent that the British must finally see the situation in its true light. Another pointed to the great danger to European peace and and the economic welfare of the continent likely to result from a breakup of the Entente. He thought that neither Great Britain nor France would want to take responsibility for a rupture in the face of such an ominous future.

Opinion Largely Shared.

This opinion is largely shared, but no one can be found to venture an opinion as to the source of the concessions necessary to bring about an agreement.

It is learned on good authority that Premier Poincare's reply to Lord Curzon maintains France's minimum demand for 26,000,000,000 gold marks out of the class A and B reparation bonds and enough from

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE IN HONG KONG TYPHOON FEARED

Reports of Casualties Coming in Slowly—Many Believed to Have Met Death at Sea.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SINKS IN HARBOR

Only One Sailor From L-9 and Two Persons From the Ming Sang Known to Have Been Saved.

By the Associated Press.

HONGKONG, Sunday, Aug. 19.—Efforts to ascertain the number of lives lost in the terrific typhoon which struck here yesterday have virtually proved futile, although it is now feared many more met death at sea than was at first thought. Reports of additional casualties are coming in slowly, and it may be many hours before an accurate estimate can be made of the storm's toll.

A steamer, a victim of the typhoon, was observed ashore near Tingchau Island, near here, today, one of a large number of vessels wrecked by the storm. Wires are down all over the island and coast of the mainland. At Kowloon, just across the channel, it was reported that six Chinese had been electrocuted by a falling live wire.

The storm struck at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, sweeping the waters into a seething menace that flung several ships into their depths and tossed others into havens of refuge. Many Europeans were among the victims, it is feared.

The British submarine L-9 and the Steamer Ming Sang of British registry, sank in the harbor. Only one sailor is known to have been saved from the submarine and there are but two reported survivors from the Ming Sang, both European officers.

In the city, business has been suspended and police and soldiers have been massed along the water front.

It was the worst storm experienced here since 1906. Following observatory warnings, ocean-going steamers and small craft sought shelter last night. Bomb fire signalized the approach of the storm center this morning. Within an hour the wind was blowing with hurricane force and the harbor was tempestuous.

Steamer Goes Down.

The steamer Ming Sang whistled long blasts of distress. A blue tunnel towboat made a heroic attempt to reach the stricken vessel. The high running sea made the rescue impossible, and the Ming Sang went down. Except for the two officers reported saved, all aboard are believed to have perished.

The Ming Sang, owned by the Indo-China Steam Navigation Co., was of 1650 net tonnage.

The British submarine L-9, parting from her moorings, drifted westward and sank off the Hongkong Club. One sailor swam away, holding fast to a small yacht buoy, until another buoy was thrown from the endangered Japanese steamer Ginyo Maru and the British bluejacket was pulled safely aboard.

The Ginyo Maru and another vessel, the Sekino Maru, had drifted from their moorings. The Sekino Maru was brought up alongside a pier, to which she was able to moor undamaged. The Ginyo drifted toward the Royal navy yard sea wall, where she grounded astern, slightly damaged.

The liner Empress of Australia cleared from the wharf at Kowloon, a suburb, last night, moored in midstream and successfully outrode the typhoon.

The French mail liner Andre Lebon was swept, dragging her anchor, a considerable distance, and came perilously near fouling the Empress of Australia.

The British naval oil tanker Karku, a naval tug, and the Chinese-owned steamer Haldis went ashore.

Wind Velocity 130 Miles an Hour.

The lowest point reached by the barometer was 28.66.

At 10:13 a. m., the wind blew 130 miles an hour—said to be the highest velocity on record. After that the barometer rose rapidly.

An eye-witness to the sinking of the British steamer Ming Sang told of the gallant attempt by a party ashore—comprising sanitary and revenue officers, a Norwegian seaman and one Chinese—to rescue the crew. While the storm was at its height they volunteered to improvise a life line with a rope at the pierhead and to carry it out to the sinking vessel. At this moment 12 of the officers and crew of the ship could be seen on the poop deck. The next moment the Ming Sang keeled over. The crew, washed overboard, clung to wreckage, but a strong tide carried the men away to their doom.

When the terrific wind struck the shore, big trees were uprooted, and, in several places, flung against the boundary walls, which collapsed. In the business district sign boards were blown to pieces and wall hangings were torn off.

Hong Kong is a city of more than 500,000 inhabitants. The bulk of the population is Chinese. It is a British possession and garrisoned by several thousand British troops. The city is on the Island of Hong Kong and lies off the southeast coast of China. It is separated by a narrow channel from Kwangtung Province and is situated on the east side of the mouth of the Canton River. The city of Canton is located about 1000 miles up the river to the northwest.

Kowloon, another British possession, a city much smaller than Hong Kong, is located on the mainland across the channel from Hong Kong. The two cities are connected by ferries.

CLOSED SHOP AND CHECKOFF SYSTEM ASSAILED IN BRIEF BY BITUMINOUS OPERATORS

U. S. Coal Commission Informed That Continued Resistance Will Be Offered to Unionization of Present Open Districts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Attorneys fo rthe bituminous operators' special committee today submitted to the United States Coal Commission a voluminous brief condemning the United Mine Workers of America, the checkoff system and the closed shop. The commission was invited to visit the nonunion coal fields of West Virginia and satisfy itself that conditions there were not as bad as private investigators had painted them.

Continued resistance will be offered by the mine companies to efforts of the United Mine Workers of America to unionize districts now operating as nonunion, the commission was informed.

The companies are convinced that contracts with that organization are in the interest neither of the operators nor the miner, but tend to stifle efficiency and individual initiative and to create a relationship based not on mutual confidence and sense of responsibility but on mutual hostility.

"They are convinced," says the document, "that to contract with that organization is to put the economic future of their fields which have no local markets at the mercy of wage agreements dictated by international officers of the United Mine Workers of America who have a deep-rooted hostility to this field and whose primary interests are elsewhere.

Object to Union Principles.

"Wisely or unwisely they object to the principle of being compelled to employ only members of that organization and to being forced to collect by the checkoff for that organization such dues and assessments as it sees fit to impose on each worker in their mines."

After reviewing the struggles between employer and labor in the West Virginia fields since 1890 including the great strike of 1902, the Paint and Cabin Creek "wars," the Winding Gulf conflicts of 1917 and the "March on Mingo," with its attendant warfare, the brief cites six reasons why the operators propose to resist unionization of their mines.

"The eight-hour day is universal mong non-union miners.

"The earnings of miners in non-union fields are at least as high as those in union fields.

"The arnings of non-union miners range far in advance of farm laborers and other unskilled workers.

"The miner is more clearly his own boss as to whether he will work when the mine is running, how long he will work and how he will work, than almost any other class of laborers.

Housing Conditions.

"The housing and living conditions of the miners are those of a progressive industrial community and compare favorably with mine communities the country over in union and non-union fields.

"The miners of southern West Virginia, far from being held in subjection and kept from unionizing by force of arms, have themselves taken up arms to resist forcible attempts of the United Mine Workers of America to impose unionization on them and in the defense of their right to work."

Twelve "average communities in the Mingo County Fields" are discused to demonstrate that living conditions are not as they have been set forth by other purveyors of information. It is told that some miners in Logan, Pocahontas and Winding Gulf earned $4,000 each in 1921. Housewives used electric clothes washers, irons, fans, toasters and ranges at small cost. There were good water upply systems, good schools, good churches and good doctors, the bituminous operators' special committee maintained.

"The living conditions were superior to those found in non-company owned towns," was the conclusion.

Decline in Strength Alleged.

Operators contended, further, that the miners' union, after having struggled until 1919 to invade the West Virginia fields, had lost ground rapidly since then. Three reasons for the decline in union strength were cited:

"1. The arbitrary exercise of control by the central organization of the United Mine Workers at Indianapolis in disregard of local economic needs and conditions.

"2. The policy of compelling the closed shop and the collection of the checkoff.

"3. The actual violence and defiance of the authority of the Government of West Virginia, which has accompanied the union's campaign."

the class C bonds to pay the French war debt to Great Britain and the United States while it rejects the proposals for a re-estimate of Germany's capacity for payment and for reference of the legality of the Ruhr occupation to the International Court at The Hague.

Difficult to Find Basis.

This being so, say the political experts here, it is difficult to find a basis for the optimistic dispatches received from London unless the British Government is disposed to make concessions that have not come to the knowledge of the French.

Among the great majority who expect that the discord will persist after this last exchange of notes, many express the hope that the British cabinet will avoid any action tending further to irritate France and thus leave matters in suspension until the present tension has passed.

While Premier Poincare's summary of the French position in the note which will be delivered to the British Government Monday treats of the inter-allied debts at some length, he does not, as reported in some quarters, make payment of France's debt to the United States dependent upon recovery of a similar amount on the Class C reparation bonds from Germany, it was said at the Foreign Office today.

The French attitude is that the war debt to America shall be paid and that in order to pay it France must get from Germany an equal amount out of the Class C bonds, but this does not mean that if France fails to collect from Germany, she will repudiate her own debt.

The war debts are considered in French official circles as less pressing than the question of reparations and smoothing out the troubles of the entente, as final solution of the reparations problem, it is held, will make possible earlier settlement of the war debt. France consequently considers the negotiations for funding her war debt to the United States as in abeyance for the moment.

Premier Poincare's reply to the last British note, sent to Brussels last night, is 10,000 words long, the original all written in his own hand.

The first half consists of the British case and French replies to it, point by point. The second half comprises a recapitulation of the French reparation plan of last January, including the old "productive guarantees," plus some new clauses to satisfy Belgium.

Austen Chamberlain Pleads for Saving of Entente, "Hanging by Thread."

By the Associated Press

MANCHESTER, England, Aug. 18.—Addressing the members of the West Birmingham Unionist Association tonight, Austen Chamberlain, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared "The entente is hanging by a thread and any clumsy handling of the reparations questions at this moment may snap that thread and undo the work of the last 12 or 15 years."

He characterized the Government's latest note to France as inconsistent, illogical and futile, and pleaded for caution in a situation which he said was fraught with peril for Great Britain, the allies, Europe and the world.

"Germany is almost at the brink of disaster and threatened with revolution," Chamberlain added. "She is in peril of starvation because of the reckless finance in which she indulged. The entente is in jeopardy and I plead for caution and foresight in saving it."

COMMISSION TO INTERCEDE IF COAL CONFERENCE FAILS

Would Fix Responsibility and Make Recommendations Necessary to Prevent Anthracite Strike.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — Reporting to President Coolidge this afternoon, Chairman John Hays Hammond and George Otis Smith of the United States Coal Commission formally notified him that negotiations between anthracite miners and operators would be resumed Monday in Atlantic City and the commission believes a strike will be avoided.

The conference with the President was brief. Following it the commissioners issued a statement, saying the proceedings at Atlantic City would be closely watched and if the differences were not composed the Government would intercede, "fix what it believes to be the responsibility and make such recommendations as under the circumstances and law it may deem appropriate."

Commission's Report.

This warning that the commission would again act if the disputants fail to agree was contained in the following report left with President Coolidge.

"The United States Coal Commission, in the discharge of what it believed to be its function, having obtained knowledge that the conference between the operators and miners in the anthracite region had come to a deadlock and that negotiations had been discontinued upon the 27th day of July, 1923, and that no steps have been taken by either party to reconvene the conference, requested the parties thereto to appear before the commission at the Pennsylvania Hotel in the City of New York on Wednesday, August 15 at 3 o'clock p. m.

"At said date and hour the parties appeared and the commission took up with them in turn in executive session the condition which caused the deadlock and the question in controversy."

(Here the commision included the letters given out Friday in New York and which were exchanged between the commission and the operators and miners.)

"The commission does not believe it would be in the public interest, or helpful in the negotiations about to be resumed at Atlantic City, for it to report the details of the statements made by the several parties before it in conference. The commission will keep in constant touch with said negotiations and has the promise of both parties that it shall be informed day by day, by the secretary of the joint conference, of the progress made, or attempted to be made, in reaching a solution of the question involved in keeping the mines open.

"Will Fix Responsibility."

"The commission ventures to express the hope that a prompt agreement at Atlantic City may render unnecessary any further report on this subject, but if there shall be a failure to negotiate a new contract at Atlantic City before Aug. 31 or a failure to agree upon some method of keeping the mines open until a contract shall have been agreed upon, the commission will report the facts, fix what it believes to be the responsibility and make such recommendations to you as under the circumstances and the law it may deem appropriate. In the meantime, if the reports received from Atlantic City shall lead the committee to the conclusion that an emergency report is necessary, the same will be promptly made."

Chairman Hammond said, as he left the Presidential suite in the New Willard Hotel where the short conference with Mr. Coolidge took place:

"It would be suicidal for either party to be responsible for the suspension of the industry and I have too high a regard for both the operators and the miners to believe that either would permit such an egregious follow. And yet such things have happened."

SPAIN REPORTED TO HAVE LOST 140 MEN IN MOROCCO

Sanguinary Battle of Provincial War Raging Near Tiffernan, According to Messages.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Aug. 18.—Spain has lost 140 men in one of the most sanguinary battles of the Moroccan war at Tiffernan, according to private messages received here from Morocco. The firing is continuing along the entire battle front.

Violent fighting is going on in the African province, the Under Secretary of War reported today. To the right and left of the battle line the Spaniards are holding their ground against the attacks of the Moors, who are equipped with latest modern arms, but the center of the Spanish front is losing ground. The commanding general who arrived at the battle line, the Under Secretary of War added, is doubtful whether the Spanish troops will be able to hold the ground.

MARIE WAINWRIGHT, ACTRESS, DIES AT 67 AFTER OPERATION

Had Long Career on Stage—Played for Time in Leading Female Shakspearean Roles.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 18.—Following an operation performed yesterday, Mrs. Marie Wainwright, native of Philadelphia and one of the foremost actresses of a generation ago, died today. The funeral will be held here Monday morning with services in St. Peter's Cathedral and burial in Dunkore Cemetery.

Mrs. Wainwright, who was 67 years old and known on the stage as Marie Wainwright, came to Scranton two weeks ago to visit her cousin, Dr. J. M. Wainwright. She became ill while here and was removed to a hospital.

Marie Wainwright had a long career before the American public and for a time appeared in the prominent female Shakspearean roles. For many years she was associated with Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth, William Gillette, Wilton Lackaye and others. She had also appeared in "Capt. Applejack" at the Cort Theater, New York, until a few months ago when her health showed signs of breaking.

She was the daughter of the late Commander Jonathan Hayhew Wainwright, U. S. N. and Marie Page Wainwright. Mrs. Wainwright's first husband was William Slaughter and later she married Louis James, the actor. She is survived by one daughter, Gertrude Wainwright of New York City.

ELECTRICAL UNION SUSPENDED

Electrical Workers' Local Union No. 1, which has about 450 members engaged in the building trades and repair work, has been suspended from affiliation with the Building Trades Council, the central body of unions in the building trades, for failure to abide by the rules of the Council.

The suspension grew out of a dispute between the electricians and elevator constructors in the reconstruction of the Planters' Hotel Building, both claiming the right to operate an electric elevator for hoisting materials. President McNamara of the Building Trades Council awarded the work to the elevator constructors and the electricians did not accept his decision. The suspension means that electricians' representatives cannot sit in the councils of the central body or be represented by council officers in any matters.

PARLIAMENTARY RACE IN FREE STATE ACTIVE

Only Three Seats Uncontested—Sister of Michael Collins Runs in Dublin.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Aug. 18.—The nominations for the Free State parliamentary elections furnish no surprises. On the average, there are less than three candidates for each of the 153 seats, grouped in 30 constituencies.

The Republicans carried out their decision to increase their list of candidates and these number more than 80. Each candidate was required to deposit £100 ($500), but the Republicans did this seemingly without difficulty.

The only constituency uncontested is that of Trinity College, where the three present members, Sir James Craig and Professors Alton and Thrift, are not opposed. There are only two instances of double candidacies—Professor John McNeill, Minister of Education, standing for Clare as well as the national university, and Dr. Michael Hayes, Speaker of the Dail, for Dublin City south and the national university.

Michael Collins' Sister Runs.

The Republicans put forward two candidates for the three national university seats in Professor Stockley, one of the present members, and Prof. Hugh Ryan. Michael Collins' sister, Mrs. O'Driscoll, is a candidate for Dublin City north. She is an ardent supporter of the Free State.

Joseph McGrath, Minister of Labor, had announced his intention of retiring from public life, but under pressure from President Cosgrave consented to nomination for North Mayo in opposition to Patrick Rutledge, Deputy of Eamonn de Valera and now "Acting President of the Republic."

In Waterford, Mrs. Cathal Brougha, widow of the Sinn Fein Minister of Defense, killed after the Four Courts fighting in 1921, is the only Republican candidate considered to have a good chance of success. Maj. Redmond, son of the Irish constitutionalist leader, also is expected to secure an electoral quota in Waterford.

Nineteen candidates were nominated for the eight seats in Donegal, 16 for the four seats in Cavan, and 18 are contesting the Leitrim-Sligo constituency, of which six are Government supporters, five Republicans, five farmers, one laborite and one independent.

Cosgrave to Be Active.

Louth has five nominees, including three members of the late Dail and Frank Aitken, former Chief of Staff of the Irish Republican Army under De Valera.

Numerous election meetings have been called for Sunday.

The meeting announced for tomorrow in O'Connell street, Dublin, will be held, despite the capture of De Valera, who was to have been the principal speaker. His son will deliver his address and will be supported on the platform by a son of Erskine Childers.

FORD LAUGHS WHEN SHOWN BENSON ARTICLE ABOUT HIM

Doesn't Deny Statements Attributed to Him But Says They Signified Little.

By the Associated Press.

ESCANABA, Mich., Aug. 18.—Henry Ford laughed today when given a copy of a newspaper containing an article by Allan Benson, a magazine writer, which states that Mr. Ford wishes to become President.

When he was asked if he had indicated to Mr. Benson the name of a man whom he would make Secretary of the Navy if he were to become President, Mr. Ford said:

"I do not remember of ever saying any such thing, although I might have done so without having attached any great importance to it."

Continuing, Ford asked the correspondent:

"Would you like to be Governor of your state?"

The correspondent indicated that he had no desire to become the chief executive of his state.

"Undoubtedly you wouldn't, but that wouldn't stop you from naming some man whom you thought would fill a state position well, and saying that if you were the Governor you would appoint him. You could make a remark of this kind without even desiring to be Governor."

After a night spent on a foggy lake coming to Escanaba, from Traverse City, Mich., the Ford party, including Thomas A. Edison, Harvey Firestone, and their wives, arrived in the Bay this morning and left for Iron Mountain in the caravan at 10 o'clock.

ATTEMPT TO NULLIFY ACT OF HARDING IS CHARGED

Misinterpretation Alleged.

The hearings were first fixed for Aug. 14, but have been postponed. The Government bases its case on deportation warrants issued against the prisoners Nov. 9, 1921, while they were confined at Leavenworth. Hearings, at which the prisoners had counsel, were held at the prison by Immigration Inspector C. H. Paul, who found that the men were aliens and, because of conviction of violating the Espionage act, were subject to deportation. Accordingly, the warrants were issued by Henning, as Assistant Secretary of Labor, directing that they be deported at the expiration of their prison terms.

In support of the assertion that Henning is now seeking to give belated effect to these warrants, completely misinterprets the amnesty position taken by the late President, the Joint Amnesty Committee points to the following letter written by Henning to Miss Elizabeth Gilman, a member of the committee.

"Replying to your letter of yesterday regarding alien prisoners at Leavenworth who accepted deportation as a condition of commutation, I beg to say that deportation of these men is beginning today. Personally, I know very little about the matter, except that the purpose of their release from Leavenworth is deportation and that is taking place as rapidly as possible. If there was any intention of these men being at [illegible] at all, it has not been brought to [illegible] attention by any order of the President or the Department of Justice."

Did Not Accept Deportation.

In the first place, it is pointed out, the five men did not accept deportation as a condition of commutation. On the contrary, two of the men, Graber and Green, specifically declined to accept release on that condition when it was offered to them by the President on Dec. 31, 1922. Is it reasonable to believe, it is asked, that the President, having before him their declination of that date, was merely repeating that same offer six months later, when he said nothing about deportation.

The point is stressed, moreover, that where the President, in his order affecting 28 of the political prisoners, meant that deportation should follow release, he said so specifically. This he did in the cases of two prisoners of the Sacramento group, Harry Grey and Vincent Stantilli, who were ordered released on condition that they be sent back to countries from which they came.

There was no such special stipulation in the cases of the five men now held at Ellis Island, all of whom were lumped with those to whom commutation was granted on the condition that they [illegible] themselves to obey the laws of the United States.

Would the President have [illegible] these men to obey the laws of the United States, it is further asked, if he had marked them for deportation?

In short, it appears to the Joint Amnesty Committee that the Department of Labor has gratuitously stepped in to execute a two-year-old order that may, in a strict technical sense, be valid, but morally was countermanded by the President's action of June [illegible].

When this view of the matter was laid before Acting Secretary Henning by Amnesty workers, he indicated that he desired the case to go to a court decision.

RANGERS PUT ON TRAIL OF FLOGGERS THROUGHOUT TEXAS

State Forces Investigating Series of Kidnapings and Whippings During the Last Few Nights.

ACTING GOVERNOR ORDERS INQUIRIES

Arrest of Potter County Sheriff Reported — Girl, 14, Reported to Have Been Lashed in Bowie County.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 18.—Texas rangers tonight were dispersed over the State investigating a series of kidnapings and floggings during the last few nights.

Reports of floggings have reached the State executive offices fro Texarkana, at the northeast corner of the State, to Amarillo in the Panhandle, more than 500 miles away; at Wichita Falls in the north central portion and at Port Arthur on the gulf.

Acting Governor Davidson today ordered a detachment of rangers to Port Arthur, where two men were kidnaped in front of the police station last night, flogged and turned loose. Davidson said he would probably order rangers to Wichita Falls, near where Lonnie Davis, a farmer, was seriously lashed with a wet rope by five unmasked men Wednesday night. Rangers permanently located there were ordered to Amarillo, but undoubtedly will be recalled, the Acting Governor said.

Sheriff Arrested.

Ranger Capt. Frank Hamer today reported from Amarillo the arrest of Sheriff Less Whitaker of Potter County on charges of conspiracy to commit a felony and of having been an accomplice in an assault with a prohibited weapon. The rangers were ordered to Amarillo in connection with the flogging of E. E. McDonald Wednesday night.

Reports from Texarkana have reached here of the alleged whipping of Miss Ollie Tucker, 14 years old.

Excitement following floggings at Amarillo, Wichita Falls and Port Arthur apparently had died down tonight, according to reports to Acting Gov. Davidson. No official report had been made of the alleged flogging of Miss Tucker as court records in Bowie County showed Leonard Johnson had paid a fine for the alleged act. Johnson was shot and wounded Thursday by M. M. Tucker, Miss Ollie's brother, and Johson's brother, Clarence, killed.

No Late Disturbances.

No further disturbances were reported this evening, Lieut.-Gov. Davidson announced.

Information reached the Governor's office that Clay and Carl Dunn of Port Arthur, originally reported killed, had been found at their homes suffering from effects of floggings. Ranger, Capt. R. W. Aldrich left here today for Port Arthur to join Ranger Capt. Roy Nichols from Marshall, in investigating the Port Arthur case.

Ranger R. W. McCormack has been detailed to investigate the beating of Lonnie Davis at Iowa Park, near Wichita Falls. Z. W. Davis, brother of the flogging victim, made the request for rangers. Davidson said he had talked over the long distance telephone with the Wichita County Sheriff today.

Ranger Kountsman has been sent to Canyon City to replace Capt. Hamer during the Rayne murder trial there. Capt. Hamer will be free, Davidson announced, to return to Somerville in time to continue the investigation into the killing of Otto Lange by disguised persons on July 2. Hamer is expected to reach Austin Sunday.

Gov. Neff reached Austin tonight and Davidson declared he would leave for his home at Marshall tomorrow morning.

A court of inquiry behind closed doors, conducted today at Amarillo by Justice C. G. Landis, with the aid of Texas rangers, had disclosed no striking developments, according to reports to the executive offices.

POLICE IN GEORGIA TOWN FIGHT WITH KIDNAPING BAND

By the Associated Press.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 18.—Policemen engaged in a pistol fight in front of the Macon terminal station early today with an alleged flogging gang, who had kidnoped a white man.

Cries for help came from an automobile, 50 yards from the main entrance of the station. A group of men who responded were met by several shots. They dodged to cover and Patrolman Rowe started toward the automobile. He was fired upon and returned the fire. The kidnapers speeded away from the station and as they passed they could be seen beating someone in the rear seat, it was said by witnesses.

Chased by Police in Auto.

The police commandeered an automobile and pursued the machine toward East Macon, losing it in the chase. Several more shots were exchanged.

Police, however, reported that they had the automobile with kidnapers and the victim bottled up in a dead-end street in East Macon when the machine suddenly turned around and dashed through them. No shots were fire then. No arrests have been made.

R. A. Hartley, said to be a World War veteran, telephoned to the Sheriff just before midnight that he had been taken out by a gang and flogged.

Hartley said that he had been seized while on his way home, taken to a vacant field and whipped.

Other Recent Kidnapings.

The kidnaping and shooting today followed a series of others during the last 10 days. A week ago Thursday four men were kidnaped. Three of these have left the city in response to threats that they would be killed if they remained here.

A fourth man, Ollie M. Perry, under Federal indictment for illicit liquor traffic, is in a helpless condition in his home here, doctors fearing that he cannot live. Perry is a victim of tuberculosis. The skin was torn from his back during the beating.

Habeas Corpus Writ Halts Military Inquiry at Tulsa.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Aug. 18.—Military court investigation of recent floggins in this vicinity was abruptly halted tonight when a writ of habeas corpus was issued ordering Adjutant-General Markham to appear in County Court with Walter Cates, one of 10 prisoners taken at Jenks yesterday just prior to extension of military police rule, to include all the Southern part of Tulsa County.

In one case since the occupation of the city by troops a civil officer has obtained his release through a writ of habeas corpus. Bob Atkins, a special Deputy Sheriff, was freed by order of the County Court yesterday upon a showing that he had been detained for more than 24 hours by the military without charges being filed against him. He was subsequently arrested, however, on civil charges of riot filed by State authorities in connection with the whipping of Walter Turman of Red Fork last April.

He was picked up by the police a week ago when wandering on the streets. He said he last remembered that he was working in the Kansas harvest fields.

Carey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Carey of the Montgomery street address. He joined the Canadian army at the start of the war and later was transferred to the aviation service in the American army, but did not get overseas.

MILL IS MOVED WHEN OPERATIVES WALK OUT

Collinsville (Ill.) Concern Dismantles Knitting Mill as Answer to Unionists.

The 300 employes of the Chester knitting mills factory at Collinsville, Ill., who walked out July 30 when a 25 per cent wage increase was refused, have not only lost the strike, but Collinsville has lost the factory.

Officials of the company, which manufactures woolen hosiery in several Illinois towns., announced yesterday that the factory would be moved to White Hall, Ill., where a new mill will be opened. Dismantling of the factory has begun and part of the equipment will be shipped to White Hall.

The employes, mostly girls of Collinsville, and all members of the Textile Workers of America, demanded the higher wages when it was rumored the company had paid 100 per cent dividends last January. Previously the officials had asserted, it is said, that the company had operated at a loss for two years and could not advance wages.

Explanations of the officials that the dividends came, not from mill work, but from the sale of raw materials, did not satisfy the employes, and the strike was gcalled. The company thereupon threatened to move the factory.

Citizens of Collinsville organized to keep the mill in the town, and conferred with officials of the knitting company. They were told the factory would be reopened if the employes would come back at their former wages. The workers unanimously rejected the offer Wednesday. The company started moving.

H. Rickman, president of the company, said at Chester yesterday that a mill was closed at Marissa, Ill., six weeks ago after the workers organized. He declared efforts were also being made to unionize the employes in the factories at Pinckneyville, Nashville, and Sparta, Ill. If these organizations plans were carried out, he said, the plants at these places would also be closed and the machinery moved, probably to Iowa. The company's competitors in manufacturing children's stockings all use nonunion labor and the Chester concern would be unable to meet this competition if the unions demands were met, he asserted.

C. J. Riggen of Lowell, Mass., an organizer for the union at Collinsville, characterized the moving of the factory from there as an "attempt to break up the union." All striking employes will continue to draw strike benefits until they get other jobs, even if Collinsville has no knitting mill, he declared.

COLLINSVILLE KLAN HOLDS OPEN MEETING

Secret Initiation Follows Speaking at Monk's Mound to Which Public Is Invited.

The Collinsville (Ill.) chapter of the Ku Klux Klan held a meeting, to which the public was invited, followed by a secret initiation, at Monk's Mound on the Collinsville road, about 8 miles northeast of St. Louis, last night. About 2500 men and women attended, not more than 50 men wearing the Klan regalia.

The open meeting, held under a "fiery cross," about 30 feet high, lighted with electric bulbs, was given over to three speakers, the usual disparaging remarks against Catholics and foreigners and anti-protestants, and tirades against the public press, being the burden of the speeches.

"Dr. Saxe" Speaks.

The first to speak was "Dr. Saxe" of St. Louis, who told of the alleged power of the Klan, the Klan's motives, and of his hope that none but public schools would soon be tolerated. He protested against anyone holding too much allegiance to the "spaghetti eaters in Rome." He was followed by Oliver P. Bellanger, an itinerant evangelist, who spent most of his time speaking against Catholicism. Charles E. Coon, organizer of the Collinsville Klan, told how one might join the organization, after which cards for membership application were passed out.

Before this meeting began a Klansman informed the audience that if anyone disliked what was said, they might leave, but any who might object would be removed "without the aid of kid gloves." No great secrecy marked the meeting, most of those in Klan costume removing the masks from their faces.

300 at Initiation.

The initiation, to which only Klansmen were admitted, and which was guarded by a cordon of them, men being stationed at intervals of a few feet, was attended by more than 300.

It was announced that a Labor Day picnic would be given by the Klan at Monk's Mound, the picnic lasting all day and night. It was to be a great gathering, the announcer said, promising the attendance of Klansmen "from as far away as Indiana."

UNITED RAILWAYS INSTALLS DEPARTMENT OF SAFETY

A new department in the United Railways for the safety of the public has been created by Col. A. T. Perkins, manager for the receiver, and E. K. Eastham has been appointed safety director in charge. Eastham is a native of Kentucky, but for several years has been employed on railroads in the far South.

A survey of the accident situation is being made, and with this as a basis for operations, Eastham will work out a system designed to reduce accidents.

The company awards three prizes of $100 each monthly to three car stations having the greatest percentage of decrease in number of accidents, and in addition to this will award $10 each month to the motorman or conductor submitting the best safety suggestion.

and Kinloch, combined, of which 719,000 pass through more than one exchange.

It is estimated that when the merger is completed, June 1, 1924, the daily average will increase to 1,125,000 calls. A total of 2092 operators at the various exchanges now handle the daily average of 970,000 calls and the staff of operators will be increased to 2520 at the completion of the merger.

As has been related, the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. this month obtained permission from the State Public Service Commission to issue $50,000,000 in 30 year, 5 per cent bonds, for plant extensions in Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and part of Illinois.

The company plans to expend about $2,950,000 here in 1924 for cables, poles, conduits, buildings and equipment, in completing the Kinloch merger.

2 MEN HOLD UP OFFICE FORCE AND GET PAYROLL

$1200 Obtained by Robbers at 4900 North Second Street—One Displays Shotgun.

Two mid-afternoon callers yesterday at the office of the F. Burkart Manufacturing Co., 4900 North Second street, indicated the nature of their business by displaying weapons, one having a sawed-off shotgun and the other a revolver. The man with the shotgun asked about the payroll.

The payroll, amounting to $1200, had been distributed in envelopes and was waiting in a box in the cashier's cage, to be given out.

The hum of an automobile engine was heard from outside as the man with the modern blunderbuss ordered the five men and three women in the office, first to raise their hands, then to kneel.

While they obediently held this suppliant attitude, the muzzle of the shotgun was poked into the ribs of William Sommers, one of the kneeling men, with the order that he should "get busy."

As Sommers had not supposed that any activity was expected from him, he was in doubt what to do, until the supplementary order was given, "Show us that payroll."

"Never mind," came the next command, as the man with the revolver, who had entered the cashier's cage, signalled to his companion that he had found the money. With a parting command from the talkative leader to "Take it easy," the two ran out and hopped into the waiting Ford car, and a third man drove them west on Gano avenue.

The payroll money was insured, officers of the company said.

EXCHANGE TO HELP PROSECUTE CHARGES AGAINST REALTY MEN

Directors Vote to Extend Scope of Punitive Action Beyond Its Own Membership.

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange will aid in the prosecution of any real estate agent whom the exchange believes guilty of criminal offenses in the handling of real estate transactions, it was announced yesterday.

In the past, the exchange has confined its punitive action to members. But, in a resolution passed by the Board of Directors, it was voted to observe no restrictions. W. W. Kay, executive secretary, said the organization expected the necessity for such action would be infrequent. The resolution was passed merely to meet any contingencies without further official action, he said.

DIES REFUSING TO NAME MAN WHO SHOT HIM

William Coffey Wounded With Another Police Character While Drinking in Shed.

William Coffey, 29 years old, of 4533 St. Ferdinand avenue, died at city hospital at 10:50 o'clock last night from gunshot wounds suffered at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. He and James Mumpton, 25, of 1418A Belt avenue, both police characters, were wounded as they were drinking whisky in a shed at the rear of 3000 Semple avenue, when a man, whom they refused to name, entered and fired upon them with a revolver.

The attacker fled, and the two wounded men got to their feet and staggered to a neighboring lot, where they were found a few minutes later.

Questioned as to the identity of the man who attacked them and the cause, Mumpton refused to answer, but Coffey told the police it was a man with whom he had an argument a few days ago. Coffey said he would take care of the matter himself without police aid.

Mumpton was wounded in the right leg, near the hip, and in the abdomen, by a bullet which passed through the leg and then penetrated to the liver, lodging there, while Coffey was shot in the right and left chest and in the left thigh. Mumpton has been arrested 61 times since 1914, serving a term in the workhouse in 1916. Coffey served five years in the penitentiary for highway robbery.

SANTO DOMINGO REVOLT STORY NOT CONFIRMED

Washington Officials Doubt Its Truth—Believe Sailing of Warship Its Basis.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18. — The State and Navy departments were without confirmation today of a report from Panama that an uprising has occurred in Santo Domingo resulting in the death of 17 American marines.

The Navy Department could not confirm the report that the Cruiser Rochester had left Panama hurriedly for Santo Domingo. But officials said the records of the department showed that the flagship of the special service squadron was due to visit the island republic about this time on its regular round.

Marine Corps headquarters could not confirm the reported uprising, officials stating that no word indicating a disturbance in Santo Domingo had been received.

The civil government at Santo Domingo is administered by a provisional president, and most of the police work is handled by the military police, organized by officers of the American Marines stationed there. The American forces have been concentrated at a few strategic points in large camps, and are held there for emergencies. The Marine forces are believed to be adequate to cope with any situation which may develop.

Any uprising at this time would be against the provisional government, which is holding office pending the election and setting up of a permanent government under the terms of the agreement with the United States.

The lack of confirmation leads officials here to believe that the Panama report was based solely on deductions from the sailing of the Rochester for Santo Domingo.

WOOD PUBLISHES MESSAGE HE SAYS WAS SUPPRESSED

Philippine National Bank Exposure Kept From Senate and House by Leaders, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Aug. 16.—(Delayed)—Governor-General Leonard Wood today made public his message to the last Philippine Legislature, dated February 16, which, he said, was suppressed by House and Senate leaders who did not communicate it to the members of those bodies, supposedly because of its uncomplimentary exposition of the condition of the Philippine National Bank.

During the last few days leaders of the Democratic party have called on Governor-General Wood and requested to see the message, saying they did not know its contents. The Governor-General, therefore, decided to publish it.

Heavy Losses in Banks.

The message shows that during its six years of operation the National Bank lost $37,345,500, representing the Government's entire investment of 98 per cent of the bank's capital stock in addition to $15,346,500 in deposits, or 64 per cent of the $23,771,500 which the Government had deposited in the bank.

"The heavy losses of the Philippine National Bank are largely responsible for the increase in our bonded indebtedness which is up to the limit provided by the Congress," the message said. "During the past year, bonds totaling $23,000,000 have been sold to provide funds for the re-establishment of our currency system, so that now behind every treasury certificates there is its full face value in gold and silver. The gold standard fund for the international parity of the peso is recognized to be smaller than desirable, but it is the limit our indebtedness permits.

"Provision has been made for increasing the fund to the desirable maximum. Bonds have been issued for that purpose.

"Other bond issues are to be made for developing irrigation and other public works, imposing additional burdens on the treasury department in the way of interest and banking requirements and necessitating rigid economy and increasing revenues.

Tied Up in Frozen Loans.

"This is a small part of the price the Government has had to pay for its policy of entering the field of business."

The note says that, in addition to its losses, the bank's remaining assets, of which many are of doubtful character, are tied up in frozen loans and investments, and must remain so indefinitely. Further, it says, the "bank is carrying virtually no reserves behind its $40,837,500 in deposits and $15,379,000 in circulating notes which it is impossible for the bank to redeem in lawful money as required by law."

"They (these notes), therefore, are a constant menace to the financial stability of the Government and private business," the note continues. "Fortunately, these notes circulate freely because the people know the Government is responsible for their redemption. The underlying fallacy of the bank was that it encouraged speculation in handling and marketing products rather than assisting in their production.

"Under the above conditions, there can be no question of the bank's insolvency. In accordance with the ordinary rule of law, it would have been my duty to close the bank as soon ask this condition was clearly revealed. It is unjust for the Government to fail to enforce its own laws against any institution of its own creating while enforcing the same law against private institutions. In following such a course private capital is unjustly discriminated against and the foundation of our business prosperity, which must be based on private initiative, is undermined.

Unwise to Close Bank.

"However, conditions here have been exceptional and I felt for this and other reasons that it would be unwise to close the bank, at least until after the legislature had been given full knowledge of the situation. The force of necessity has required that the bank be kept open despite the fact that it was operated in open violation of the law and in competition with private institutions, contrary to the Government's policy of getting the Government out of business."

The message says the Government is now operating the bank at considerable loss, operation being limited chiefly by nursing along heavy involved business estates taken over by the bank. In addition to the bank losses, the message points out, the Government has been operating sugar, oil, tobacco, cement and other commercial companies, " all of which are involved in huge additional losses," the amount of which is not stated.

SIMMONS SAID TO OFFER KLAN RULE TO CLARKE

Wants Man Who Resigned as Imperial Kleagle to Take Executive Authority.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 18.—William J. Simmons, emperor of the Ku Klux Klan, today telegraphed to Edward Young Clarke at Indianapolis an offer of "full and complete executive administrative authority over all matters pertaining to the Klan and the Kamelia," if Clarke would return to Atlanta and assume control of the two organizations, according to a story printed in the Atlanta Journal today.

The story said Simmons offered Clarke the title of Sir Knight Supreme of the Order Knights of Kamelia.

Simmons issued a statement, the Journal says, in which he declared that "the development and progress of the Ku Klux Klan is stopped and disintegration is setting in throughout the entire bounds of the Invisible Empire, due to lack of leadership and want of constructive programs of activity."

He declared further, the story relates, that "men of largest influence either have become indifferent or have withdrawn from the Order."

Edward Young Clarke was formerly the imperial kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan. He resigned Sept. 24, 1921, after his record had been attacked in newspaper articles.

Investigators for the Post-Dispatch and New York World found that in 1910 he had been expelled from an Atlanta church, the charges against him including improper handling of funds, slander, inordinate ambition, and "hyprocrisy and treachery."

On Oct. 31, 1919, Clarke was found guilty of disorderly in an Atlanta police court. been arrested with Mrs. Tyler, associated with work.

Clarke Undecided on Answer to the Emperor's Proposal.

CARDINALS BEAT DODGERS 7-1; SENATORS TRIM BROWNS 4-3

Doak Yields Five Hits in Nine Innings

Brooklyn Hitters Helpless Against Veteran Spitball Hurler, After the First Three Innings.

By Thos. S. Rice,
Of the Brooklyn Eagle Sport Staff.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 18.—Bill Doak d as even break for the Cardinals in their series of four games with Brooklyn when he held the Dodgers to five hits today and beat them 7 to 1. Bill pitched one of the best games in his major career. Two of the five hits were bunched on him for one run in the third inning. In the last six innings an infield scratch by Bert Griffith, who batted for George Smith in the eighth, was the solitary swat off the venerable Bill.

George Smith, who was knocked out of the box by the Cardinals in St. Louis, pitched the first eight innings against Rickey's sluggers and was reached for 14 hits and all of the Cardinals' runs.

Rogers Hornsby singled in the seventh inning. It was his first hit of the series and came after 36 no-hit innings in Brooklyn. Also it was his last, as Johnston threw him out in his last appearance at the plate. Hornsby had been to the plate officially 14 times before he smashed the hoodoo with the safety in the seventh inning today.

Jim Bottomley had another big afternoon, getting two singles and a triple. Jack Smith had three singles and two stolen bases. His best inning made a hit with the crowd of 6000.

Cards Get Off in Lead.

George Smith opened the third for the Dodgers with a single to left and took third on Neis' double to right. Johnston singled over second, scoring G. Smith and sending Neis to third. Tom Griffith grounded to Stock and a double play was put through on Johnston and Griffith, without the speedy Neis being able to score from third. That was a really great stunt. Fournier then grounded out to Bottomley and Neis was left. Such was the last insurrection by the Dodgers.

Jack Smith was safe for St. Louis in the fifth on Fournier's fumble. He took third on Bottomley's single to center, and scored on Stock's sacrifice fly to Bailey.

Hornsby Starts Rally.

Hornsby delivered his long delayed hit to open the Cardinals' seventh which started fireworks that produced three runs. Bottomley advanced Hornsby to third with a single to right. Stock grounded to High and High's throw to the plate hit Hornsby. The error let in Hornsby, sent Bottomley to third and Stock to second. Mueller beat out a hit to Fournier, Bottomley going home and Stock moving to third. McCurdy hit into a double play, but Stock went over the pan. Freigau singled to left, but was left when Doak struck out.

Jack Smith's speed gave him a hit on his blow to short in the eighth inning with one out. Hornsby died on a roller to Johnston, Jack taking second. Jack stole third and scored on Bottomley's triple. Moe Berg threw out Stock. Decatur allowed one hit in the ninth. It was a single by McCurdy, who was left

PROTEST OF BOSTON CLUB IS DENIED BY PRESIDENT HEYDLER

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Boston (National League) club's protest of Brooklyn's victory in the second game of a double-header at Brooklyn, July 4, was denied today by John A. Heydler, president of the league, in a decision involving a new version of the question—when is a ball over the fence.

The protest by Boston hinged upon a home run allowed Fournier, Dodger first baseman, in the sixth inning. Fournier's drive, by a strange freak, struck a flag attached to a staff on top of the right field wall, became enwrapped in its folds for a moment and then dropped back into the playing field. The ball was returned to the infield and Fournier held to second base, but Umpire Hart ruled the hit a home run.

Boston claimed that the flag was part of the playing field and that the hit therefore did not go out of the park, but President Heydler, citing several precedents, decided that the flag was an obstruction beyond the actual limits of the playing field, thereby sustaining the ruling of the arbiter.

DEMPSEY WILL BOX 10 ROUNDS DAILY IN PREPARATION FOR FIRPO

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, will begin a steady training grind here tomorrow in preparation for his bout with Luis Firpo of Argentina, in New York, Sept. 14. No fewer than 10 rounds of boxing are on Dempsey's daily program, while each morning a period will be devoted to road work.

Tex Rickard, promoter, who is staging the Dempsey-Firpo fight, was a visitor to Saratoga today, but did not come to the Dempsey camp here. This afternoon, however, Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, motored to Saratoga for a conference with Rickard.

HOW THE NEW WOMAN TENNIS CHAMPION GRIPS HER RACQUET

Miss Wills' great strength, as with the marvelous "Little Bill" Johnston, another Californian, lies in her forehand play. The powerful wrist and arms owned by the Golden Gate girl may be noted in the picture above.

Firpo Fails to Take Legal Steps To Obtain $2000

Argentine Boxer's Manager Expected Indianapolis Mayor to Get Money Due Him.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 18. Luis Angel Firpo left here this afternoon for New York without taking any legal steps to obtain $2000 alleged to be due him for his exhibition 10-round boxing contest last night with Joe Downey of Columbus, O.

Downey, too, left the city after having been discharged from a hospital where he was rushed following the conclusion of the bout. According to his manager, Harry Sully, Downey suffered a concussion of the brain from a blow behind the left ear. Sully said he obtained $800 of the $1000 allowed to be due Downey and indicated he would make no effort to obtain the deficit.

Hughie Gartland, business manager for Firpo, said today he had received $2000 for his boxer and part of the railroad transportation for his party. All this was obtained before Firpo entered the ring last night, he stated. A heavy hotel bill, which Gartland asserted was to have been paid by Druley, was settled by Firpo's handlers before they left the city.

Gartland declared it was up to Mayor Samuel Lewis Shank of Indianapolis to see that Firpo's contract was fulfilled to the letter. He said it was his understanding with the Mayor last night that Shank would see to it that the Argentine got the full amount of money. Had he not understood this clearly, he declared, he would not have permitted his boxer to put on the gloves.

Firpo will go into active training Monday or Tuesday for his contest with Champion Jack Dempsey at New York on Sept. 14, Manager Gartland said. He said there were many details to complete before the retinue of the challenger's training force could be announced.

Jack Druley, promoter of the match, who disappeared last night, reappeared tonight. According to Druley he left the scene saying that if he had stayed, Firpo and his manager would have continued their negotiations for the entire sum stipulated in the contract, and the fight would not have been held. He explained his seclusion today by saying he was checking up on the funds.

Miss Wills Wins National Net Championship, Beating Mrs. Mallory in Straight Sets

17-Year-Old California Girl Loses but Three Games in Vanquishing Seven-Times Victor of Title — British Pair Captures Honors in the Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 18—The long reign of Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory as queen of American tennis, broken but once in the past eight years, came to a dramatic close today when Miss Helen Wills, 17-year-old wonder girl from the Pacific coast, crushed the seven time title holder in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, in the final match of the tournament at the West Side Tennis Club.

Mrs. Mallory fought gallantly in defeat, calling on all her power and strategy to check her youthful rival, but except for a few minutes of the first set, the mastery of Miss Wills was complete. Meeting the champion at her own game, a back court duel, the Berkeley school girl rose to the greatest height of her meteoric career to maneuver and smash her way to victory with a spectacular, irresistible attack.

Critics who saw her flashing triumph doubted whether any woman player in the world—even the present acknowledged queen, Suzanne Lenglen of France—could have stopped the coast prodigy as she played today. It took Miss Wills just 33 minutes to crown with success her second attempt to gain the championship and at the close of the match she was acclaimed by a gallery of more than 4000 spectators, the largest in the history of women's title tournaments.

Title honors in the national doubles went overseas for the first time in American woman's tennis annals

Ruth's Home Run With 2 on Base Beats Chicago, 6-5

Bambino Hits No. 32 in Ninth Inning Off Southpaw Mike Cvengros.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 18.—Babe Ruth defeated the White Sox today in the first game of the Chicago-New York series The score was 6 to 5.

Twice Ruth was walked purposely, but on the other three trips to the plate he socked liberally. In the ninth with two on bases and two strikes called Ruth poled the ball high over the right field bleachers and decided the issue. Cvengros had done very well up to that time. Ruth drove in five runs. The homer was Ruth's thirty-second of the season.

Even then the Sox were not peaceable, they waited out Shawkey, a relief hurler, and had two on base when Pennock was called upon to stem the tide He was successful.

Danforth, Relieving Dixie Davis in Ninth, Yields Winning Tally

"Mystery" Southpaw, Wildly Cheered as He Goes to Mound, Walks First Batter; Sacrifice and Double Score Him.

By Joseph F. Holland,

Dave Danforth came out of the "bull pen" in the deep left-field corner at Sportsman's Prk yesterday to pitch the ninth inning against the Washington Senators after "Dixie" Davis had retired for a pinch hitter with the score tied in the eighth. Dave, the maligned, the prosecuted and, some even say, the persecuted, had hardly stepped over the foul line before one of the most sweeping ovations within memory was under way. It showered down upon him from the stands, thundered out from the distant bleachers and echoed in the flanking pavilions.

For five long minutes it continued while the southpaw took his warm-up. It died down and then swelled into greater volume when he inspected the ball which had been in play, threw it aside and received a new, white one from Umpire Billy Evans.

Then Dave proceeded to pass Rice the first man to face him, allowed the second to sacrifice and permitted Harris to double to deep right-center, scoring Rice with the run which won the first game of the series for Washington, 4 to 3.

Ovation Too Much for Dave.

The odd part of it all was that the intensity of the cheering plainly disturbed the man who had been suspended twice for "doctoring" the ball. His sensational three-hit game against the Yankees Thursday had thrown public sentiment heavily in his favor and the cheering in that five-minute period was by far the greatest tribute he had ever received. It was too much for him. The underdog, the character of deep suspicion for so long, could not retain his poise when he was raised in one fleeting moment from a position of question and distrust to the role of a conquering hero. And so Dave just didn't conquer.

The tribute was different from the general run of those received by ball players. It wasn't the wild, vociferous clamor that goes up when Kenny Williams hits a home run Rather, it was a clean and clear expression of sympathy and confidence.

Danforth plainly showed his nervousness in pitching to Rice when he walked him on four straight balls. Judge dropped a sacrifice bunt to Ezzell and was thrown out. Ezzell also threw out Ruel while Rice held second. Then it was that Harris caught a fast ball squarely and whistled it to the fence in right-center for the two-base hit that won the game.

That inning was sufficient to charge Danforth with a defeat; but the real blame lies with the Brown hitters. Nineteen men got to first base and only three of them scored. Eleven were left on base as against five for the Senators, who had only two real opportunities to score and seized them both.

The Browns were losing, 3 to 2, turning into the eighth. Then Jacobson singled to center, took second on McManus' sacrifice and scored the tying run on Ezzell's single after Severeid had walked. Schliebner was purposely passed, filling the bases for Davis with only one out.

Manager Jimmy Austin waved Davis away from the plate and sent Pat Collins in to hit for him. Pat bounded to Peck and a double play, via Harris to Judge, retired the side.

It was just as bad in the ninth. Tobin beat out a hit to Bluege and took second when that worthy Senator threw past first. Gerber was hit by a pitched ball and Williams sacrificed the runners to second and third. A long fly would have tied the score and a single would have won it. But Jacobson, with a wavering pitcher in front of him, popped the first ball high in front of the plate, where Judge gathered it in. Then McManus bounded to Peck and the game was over.

Williams Hits 22nd Homer.

In Washington's first Davis retired the first two batters and then Goslin singled and Rice walked. Judge drove one on a line into the right-field bleachers for a home run and three scores were in the Washington box. For seven innings thereafter Davis pitched almost faultless ball and Washington did not score.

Kenny Williams took occasion to drive out his 22nd home run of the season in the first inning with two out and no one on base. The Browns scored again in the fourth when Davis drove Ezzell over with a single to right. That was all until the eighth when they scored one and should have scored several.

The Browns did not play dull baseball. They played a fast, snappy game but they could not hit in the pinch. Zahniser and Russell gave them plenty of chances to put the game beyond all question but Washington got more real value out of two hits in the pinch of the seven that it made than Jimmy Austin's team did out of 11 liberally sprinkled through nine innings.

Failure in the pinches was the very apparent primary cause of defeat. But close observers noticed that that wild wave of cheering that went straight to Dave Danforth's heart unnerved him just a bit; just enough to make him throw four balls wide of the plate and pave the way for Washington's winning run. A fellow who has been reared on jeers has to take time to steady himself when it is changed to cheers.

SHOCKER WILL OPPOSE MOGRIDGE OR MITCHELL IN SECOND GAME TODAY

Urban Shocker, the spitball specialist, who defeated the Yankees for his seventeenth victory in the recent series, will pitch for the Browns today. Mogridge or Mitchell, who beat him in Washington, will attempt to thwart the Brown star in his drive for his eighteenth victory.

Kenneth Williams made one of the best catches of his career in the fifth inning of yesterday's game, when, with Zahniser on second base, he made a shoe-string, gloved-hand catch of Leibold's curving liner to left center. Williams is one of the game's great fielders.

Joe Judge always has been the Nemesis of Dixie Davis. Last year in Washington Davis walked two men in an inning and Judge tripled. Davis lost, 2 to 1. Yesterday two men were on base when Judge hit into the right field bleachers for three runs. Davis fanned Joe in the fourth.

Gerber had only five chances but three of them were plays behind second base on which he got his man. In the recent series with New York, Gerber went over on the second base side of the bag for a fine stop and throw to rob Ruth of a hit.

"You play either short or second but don't play both," Babe yelled at him.

The attendance yesterday was 10,000.

Danforth, a Cheat if He Won and 'Yellow' if He Was Beaten, Earns Title of 'Gamest Man in Baseball'

Browns' Southpaw Carries On Bravely Even When He Knows His Own Manager Is Collecting Evidence Against Him—A Review of the Danforth Case, One of the Most Unusual in History of the Game.

By J. Roy Stockton.

If the Major League owners were to award a trophy this season to the "gamest man in baseball," the prize would go without a struggle and without debate to David Danforth, dentist, southpaw pitcher and student of physics. Baseball is a hard game. For every Sisler there are thousands who eke out a lean existence in the boarding houses of the small league. For every heart-inspiring cheer that goes up in the major league grandstand there are a thousand razzberries shot from bush league bleachers.

But it is doubtful if ever a professional athlete has encountered circumstances so discouraging as those which Dave Danforth has had to hurdle in the course of his baseball career.

And now, just when it appeared that he was about to be sent where all bad boys of baseball are sent, sufficient interest has been aroused in his case to insure his getting a fair hearing. Danforth has labored long under clouds of suspicion. And yet those who were loudest in their condemnation were silent when asked to produce proof that Dave was breaking the rules. Scuffed balls and soiled baseballs have been produced, it is true, but there has been no proof that they were soiled or scuffed by Danforth. No one ever has seen Danforth do anything illegal, no one has seen him discolor a ball, no one has seen him scuff a ball. And now there is steadily growing sentiment that demands that Danforth's accusers prove their accusations or forever keep their peace. Either prove at once that he is not an honest pitcher, or else let him pitch without being pestered by the constant nagging and chiding from umpires and opposing players, that is what baseball's public sentiment is demanding.

Branded in the Bullpen.

Danforth's troubles started when he was a habitue of baseball's scullery, the bull pen. When other men were pitching games regularly, Dave was a substitute, a utility pitcher, a man who pitched and pitched and pitched, but who did all that pitching in a bull pen, far out in the corner of the ball park, pitching to a third string catcher, trying curves and trying fast balls and trying to gain the control, the polish that would enable him to get in there and be a regular in the pitching box, instead of a regular in the bull pen.

Dave always was inquisitive. Dave always had a retentive memory. There are pitchers, good pitchers, who can't tell you one week how many hits they gave the Athletics last week. But Dave Danforth is none of these. Dave always remembers what happens. And he tries to profit by each happening.

And so in those bull pen days when he held a ball a certain way and threw a ball that took a queer hop, he remembered how he had held it and what sort of a ball it was. Those were the days when pitchers were doing everything to the ball, the days when dodo balls and parafin balls and mud balls and emory balls and shine balls were being developed to such an extent that drastic steps had to be taken to protect the lives of the batters.

But Dave could beat them all at making the sailers do tricks.

"You ought to see Danforth throw that sailer," was a common remark among the students of the effect of air resistance on a thrown ball.

And so, though Dave was not a great pitcher, his fame as a trick pitcher spread. It was common talk that he taught Cicotte to throw his famous "shiner."

Dave Danforth Throws A Natural "Sailer," Hank Severeid Says

HANK SEVEREID, the Brown's regular catcher, who has been behind the bat in virtually all the games pitched by Dave Danforth this season, has the following to say about the southpaw's work:

"Danforth's work all season has been clean. I have watched him very closely and a pitcher can't fool his own catcher. And I am certain that Danforth has not employed illegal methods. Dave's trouble is that he throws a natural 'sailer'. He has one of the best fast balls I ever saw. It hops upward and the batter thinks it must be a 'sailer'. I don't know whether he does it with his wrist, his grip or his strong arm; but he can make a brand new ball hop. He made them hop Thursday when virtually every pitch was with a brand new ball. He pitched the same way in Philadelphia the day he was suspended and his work that day was above reproach.

"Danforth does not pitch sensational curves. His hop ball is nothing spectacular, but it is so hard to pitch that batters conclude that he must be cheating.

"Danforth owes his success to his perseverance. He is tireless and whenever he practices he works as hard as though he is pitching against a champion batter.

"He grips the ball with his thumb turned in, so that the back of the joint rests against the ball. Most pitchers apply the soft side of the thumb to the ball in gripping it. That probably is just an old habit and I do not think it is a factor in making his fast ball hop."

Danforth Sent to Minor Leagues When Ban Is Put on Freak Pitching

And then the major leagues put the lid on freak pitching. Dave was not a great pitcher. His control was poor. And because he could not get the ball over the plate it was thought he had no heart. And so he was sent from the White Sox to the American Association. At Columbus he had more chance to work. His first season there was 1920. He was just beginning to acquire control then, and in 1921 his control was so good that he worked regularly. He won 25 games and lost 15 and his work attracted so much attention that a dozen major league clubs sought his services.

Bob Quinn, who could have been Mayor of Columbus if he so willed, wanted to have Danforth instead. And his influence resulted in Danforth's being sold to the Browns for some cash and a squad of plain and fancy recruits.

But Danforth had been branded in that Chicago bull pen, branded as a freak ball pitcher, and before he ever stepped into a Brownie uniform in Mobile, St. Louis newspapermen had been tipped off that Danforth was a slicker, that he roughed the ball, loaded the seams, had a balk motion to first base and never would make good in the majors. He not only would not make good, he would not even get by. He'd be thrown out of the league at once. Or if permitted to return he would be given a new clean ball so frequently that his efficiency would be ruined.

The writer covered that spring training trip and the first thing he did when he reached Mobile was to ask about Danforth. Fohl was questioned.

What Fohl Said in 1922.

"If he's doing anything wrong," said Fohl, "I can't see it. I've given him one new ball after another and he makes them all hop the same way. That's all bunk about his being a freak ball pitcher. Don't you suppose that Mike Kelly and all the other wise crackers in the Association would have been wise to his tricks. They're just as smart there as they are in the majors and if Dave pitched there he can pitch in the big league. The only question is if his stuff will fool the big leaguers. I intend to start him early in the season and he'll get his test under American League fire."

That was a fine attitude for Fohl to take. And he went through with it. Danforth was started. But he had more than the opposing team to meet. He had the umpires, the opposing team and the Danforth reputation to combat. A major league umpire, before the season started, was so indiscreet as to tell a ball player that Danforth was a cheater and never would get by.

That message and others like it spread like wildfire and soon Danforth was universally regarded as a freak ball pitcher. Nobody knew how he did it and that very fact, which should have been negative circumstantial evidence in his favor, militated against him. His own club mates became suspicious. His room mate took it to heart because this left handed man who slept next to him would not tell him—in strictest baseball confidence, you understand—how he threw his freak ball.

Dave Warned That He Would Be Fired if Caught by Umpires

The players thought Dave was too stingy with his secret. They did not believe his protestations of innocence. They did not believe him when he said he pitched as every other pitcher pitched and Danforth by the middle of the 1922 season was the most unpopular player on the Browns team, among his comrades.

The widespread belief that Dave was a cheater had its effect on Lee Fohl.

"If You're Caught, You're Fired."

"I don't know what you're doing, Dave," the manager told him, "but if you ever get caught, if you ever are put out of the game, you're through. I want you to know that the club won't back you up. If you're suspended, you're off to the bushes."

Danforth protested that he was pitching clean baseball, but his words fell on ears stuffed with the Danforth reputation.

It must have taken a stout heart for Danforth to pitch at all. But he pitched. And one day when Whitie Witt of the Yankees struck out and Fred Hoffmann called for the ball, it was found that there was a smear of dirt on the ball, all along the seam.

The umpire took one look, waved his mighty right arm and that wave of the arm sent Dave Danforth to Tulsa. Fohl lived up to his threat. He heeded not Danforth's plea for a hearing. He heeded not Danforth's protestations of innocence. With the Browns making their first pennant fight in years. Danforth was sent to Tulsa in disgrace, branded as a cheater, a man who would not go straight.

Phil Ball is a hard boiled club owner. And in his own hard-boiled way he decided that Danforth had not been treated fairly. Who was this umpire person who could wave one of his men out of the league and on to Tulsa? Fohl assured Ball that Danforth was getting what he deserved. But Ball insisted that Dave be recalled and that he be given every possible chance to make good, to prove that he was on the square.

But the 1923 season gave promise of being a darker one for Dave than 1922 had been.

Bill Friel, business manager of the Browns, told the writer yesterday that soon after taking Bob Quinn's place as business manager he heard remarks around the office that this person and that person had heard Fohl say that Danforth was up to his old tricks, that he aws cheating again.

A Cheater Whenever He Won.

After losing his first few starts Danforth had struck a winning stride and when Friel appeared as business manager Danforth was building himself a winning streak. And during this winning streak his own manager was saving baseballs, thrown out while Danforth was pitching, saving these baseballs to show, when or if Danforth were suspended again, that he was aware that his pitcher was breaking the rules.

Fohl, after being deposed as manager, explained to Friel that he was doing that to protect himself and said that his responsibility ceased when his superiors in the Browns' office were told that Danforth was not pitching fairly.

But all through those games Danforth knew that his manager was collecting evidence against him. What courage it must have taken to get out there and pitch with that knowledge!

Probably only one thing enabled Dave to keep his head up and to carry on. That was the knowledge that must have been his that his comrades were with him. They had watched him with suspicion. And they found nothing wrong. His catchers found nothing wrong. They came to learn that Dave naturally was quiet, inclined to seek solitude. And so instead of considering him a cheat, too tight mouthed to tell how he did it, they took him into their hearts, as a dishonest ball player never is taken.

Then came that game in Philadelphia. Danforth was hit hard that day.

Dave Supported by the Boys.

"I never was hit harder," Dave said yesterday in telling of the incident. "Why, Ken (Williams) almost broke his neck bumping into the fence for one ball. A line drive turned Gerber clean around. Tobin took one off the fence. They sure pounded me that day. It was muddy and every time a ball was hit it got soiled. In the 9th inning Dykes called for a look at the ball and Moriarty gave one glance and ordered me out. He stuck the ball in his pocket.

"I told him to show it to the fellows, so they could see there was nothing wrong. Tobin then went over and looked at it. Fohl was standing near enough to see it, but he afterward told Ban Johnson and the Browns office that he never saw the ball. He told me that day to clear myself. That's what he was doing, clearing himself."

Danforth was suspended for 10 days. During those days Fohl was deposed. Prior to that the players planned to send an appeal to Ban Johnson, signed by all the players, telling of their confidence in Danforth and asking that that baseball be compared with any one of dozen baseballs discarded during any ball game. But in the clubhouse Fohl let it be understood that he would not take any steps to defend Danforth. He did not say that he would not sign a round robin. But he told Jimmy Austin that perhaps the players were wrong in getting excited over Danforth's trouble. He said afterwards that if he had been shown a round robin he would not have signed it.

Austin gathered that from Fohl's clubhouse statements. Naturally the players dropped their plans. If Danforth's manager, the man who ordered him to pitch that day, would not say that he thought Dave Danforth was an honest pitcher, what weight would the players' round robin carry?

And so Danforth's chance for a hearing was postponed.

Could Moriarty Be a Fair Judge?

During those 10 days Danforth was about ready to quit. He sent Ban Johnson a telegram. He told him that Moriarty had acted hastily, that Moriarty previously was convinced that Danforth was a cheater. He told of an incident in St. Louis during the last Boston series. Moriarty was umpiring behind the bat. Danforth was batting and something was said about the batter's box. Dave started to draw the line of the box with his bat. Moriarty grabbed the bat from his hand and made the mark himself. That much, St. Louis fans saw.

"But he did worse than that," said Dave. "He said I was a blankety blank cheater and that I'd been cheating all my life. Only he filled in those blankety blanks. I don't know whether my telegram to Johnson got through, but I sent the very words Moriarty used.

"And I told Ban Johnson that Moriarty could not be fair with me that day in Philadelphia. He already had convicted me in his own mind. To him I was a cheater. He could not display proof, but he demanded none. When he saw a soiled baseball he ordered me out. Dozens of baseballs, in far worse condition than that one, are used every day. I so informed Ban Johnson."

No response came to that telegram. But the Browns had a new manager. Jimmy Austin had led the attempt to get Dave a hearing and as soon as he became manager he told Danforth that he would pitch him as soon the suspension expired. The players comforted Dave and that feeling that his comrades were with him, that they liked him, gave Danforth the courage that makes him the gamest man in the league today.

He had his trial at Sportsman's Park Thursday. Fifty-eight balls were used in that game. Every time one became soiled it was discarded. Danforth pitched the entire game, virtually, with glossy, brand-new balls. And he held the Yankees to three hits!

Lee Fohl, Umpire Moriarty and Ban Johnson notwithstanding, surely Dave Danforth has won his case. Dave Danforth is the gamest man in baseball!

Kinsey Brothers Win at Newport

California Tennis Players Victors in Both Singles and Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 19.—In a match replete with sparkling volleys, hard-hitting and tense moments, Robert and Howard Kinsey, rated as America's premier doubles combination, triumphed today over Howard Voshell of Brooklyn and Clarence J. Grifin of San Francisco, 7—5, 6—4, 7—5, in the final round of the Casino invitation tennis tournament.

Howard Kinsey, a few hours earlier had won possession of the Casino Cup for a year by defeating Harvey Snodgrass, conqueror of Vincent Richards, 6—4, 4—6, 6—0, 9—7 in the final round of the singles.

Kinsey excelled his opponent in all departments. Snodgrass' game fell far short of expectations. He appeared unable to accustom himself to Kinsey's chop strokes and committed many errors. From the outset Kinsey appeared the steadier. His slow-paced chops were clearing the net with ample leeway and Snodgrass returned stroke after stroke into the net.

Baseballs Discarded Thursday Displayed as Evidence for Danforth

BUSINESS Manager Friel of the Browns, hearing that Lee Fohl, deposed manager of the club, had saved baseballs pitched by Danforth as evidence to show that Fohl knew what Dave was doing, did some investigating of his own during Thursday's game in which Danforth held the Yankees to three hits.

Friel ordered that all balls thrown out that day be saved and delivered to him without being handled after being tossed out. He has a box of these balls, several dozen of them. They are soiled with mud, scuffed from contact with bats and concrete stands, discolored from grass and some have paint stains on them, where they crashed against painted boards.

"Any one of two dozen of those balls would be evidence enough to cause a pitcher's suspension," said Friel, "if it could be proved that the pitcher had soiled or even thrown the ball, or if the umpire reached that conclusion. But some of the balls were thrown out without Danforth having touched them. Some were thrown out while Pennock was pitching.

"What I want to prove and what I think I have proven is that in any ball game on a muddy day dozens of soiled balls will be thrown out, which if the pitcher had soiled them, would result in his suspension. It was muddy in Philadelphia the day Danforth was suspended. The players tell me that the ball that caused Danforth's suspension was not discolored nearly as much as dozens of the balls thrown out Thursday. The only charge was that Dave was pitching a discolored ball. If similar action had been taken against pitchers, Thursday, 58 pitchers would have been suspended by Umpires Evans and Hildebrand."

Rixey Victor Over Four Hurlers, 5 to 2—McGraw's Lead Cut to 5½ Games.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Reds made it four out of five from the Giants and cut their pennant lead to five and a half games when Eppa Rixey outpitched four New York hurlers this afternoon and won, 5 to 2.

One big inning, the fourth, in which nine Reds went to bat, four runs were scored and six hits made sewed up the battle.

The feature was a catch of a liner by Roush off Cunningham's bat in the ninth and his throw to first doubling Meusel. The attendance was 20,000.

Oarsmen Race At Creve Coeur This Afternoon

Four-Oared Race Probable Feature of Annual Municipal Regatta.

Most of the best oarsmen in the city will compete at Creve Couer Lake this afternoon in Municipal Rowing Association's annual regatta.

Four crack crews are entered in the race for fours. The St. Louis Rowing Club crew, winner of the Central States championship in this event last Sunday, is generally favored to repeat today. The crew is composed of M. Rohr, bow, H. de Vreis, No. 2, H. Buss, No. 3, and W. Bentlage, stroke. Other crews entered are the Westerns, North Ends and Centrals.

Central's oarsmen will combine with the North Ends in the selection of a crack crew to compete against the St. Louis Rowing Club men in the six-oared barge race.

The final event of the afternoon is the eight-oared shell. St. Louis will again row against a picked crew from the North End and Central Clubs.

The first event will be started at 2 p. m. with Joe Dilg firing the starters' gun. Charles Demko is the referee and Charles Peterson ensign.

Points will be awarded as follows: Five points for first place, three for second and one for third.

Trolley League Schedule.

The Trolley League schedule for today calls for the Ben Millers to mix with the Tricity Packers at Parson Field on the East Side. The Carlyle Boosters, who are tied with the Ben Millers of St. Louis for the leadership of the second part of the split season wil entertain the Thesens. The Wiles-Chipmans of St. Louis will go to Alton where they clash with the Alton Blues.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Hark to the Ballyhoo.

LESS than one month remains before Jack Dempsey and the Shaggy Thing from "below the line" clamber into the ring at the Polo Grounds to commit legal assault and battery upon the persons of one another.

At this time the Firpo thermometer is low. The Argentine's primitive ring methods against feeble foes are still being bandied about the grapevine press route.

But hark! In the distance we hear the faint note of the approaching ballyhoo-man. He is marching on with a fine line of propaganda calculated to make every one think the Wild Bull of the Pampas is a super-Jeffries, endowed with the skill of a Corbett and the genius of a Fitzsimmons.

By the time they clamber into the ring Firpo will have been transformed into a terrifying, cave-man, bone-crusher, who can take all Dempsey can give and then beg the champion to show him how he got his reputation.

It was ever thus and so will ever be. But—

Firpo Too Old to Learn?

KEEP your family plate in the safe deposit and don't get excited. For every shaggy-haired wonder and every superman you read about, who makes good, there are scores that never come through. In recent years they built-up paper champions out of Carl Morris, Fred Fulton, Al Palzer, Frank Moran and others, who were better boxers and fighters than Firpo. They all flivvered.

Just remember that four weeks of training cannot alter a 28-year-old near novice to the point where he can cope with an experienced champion like Dempsey.

Remember that Firpo is made to order for Dempsey in size of the target, the method in which he fights and the comparative slowness with which he co-ordinates.

Remember Willard, a mighty man who had far more experience than Firpo, a big powerful Titan whose fist once killed a dub opponent. But despite his strength and his evident power, it was useless because his mind and hand didn't work in unison FAST ENOUGH! Before he could make up his mind to lead either the target or the opportunity had gone.

That will be Firpo's trouble.

By the time he discovers an opening, the opening will have closed.

And so will Firpo's career.

You can't teach an old dog new tricks—not in a hurry, at least.

Monsieur Criqui May Smile.

MUCH pity has been expressed for one Eugene Criqui, French featherweight, now at home in sunny France after his defeat by Johnny Dundee for the featherweight championship of the world. Criqui had only possessed the title a few weeks when it was snatched from him, without giving him time to harvest the kale that usually falls to the lot of a new champion.

But save the tears, Bo. Criqui came to America, won a title, lost it like a gentleman after a good fight, and went back to France with $75,000 in cash — about 1,500,000 francs today, wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, to this little hero of the World War.

Others as Game as Criqui.

TRUE, Criqui fought a game fight; but so in the past have thousands of others. For considerably less money than Criqui received, Battling Nelson stood up before a stupendous beating for 40 rounds before Ad Wolgast finally took his title away from him.

In earlier days more savage beatings were endured for as much money as was allowed Criqui for mere training.

So dry your tears and take a slant at, the grin on Criqui's face as he leans over the ship's rail as his steamer departs for France. There are no marks of the beating; but there are fat letters of credit on Paris banks in his inside pocket.

That's balm enough for his wounds.

COLLEEN BEATS GOSSOON IN LIPTON CUP RACE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Colleen, overcoming a large handicap, sailed six of her seven competitors and finished second today in the third and final Sir Thomas Lipton Cup race, tying Ariel in the for the cup. Colleen, entered in the cup race for the first time today, finished first, and Ariel, which had the first two races, finished sixth.

Gossoon's pace today was one of the biggest features of three days of the greatest racing ever seen on local waters. Colleen beat Gossoon across the finish line by one and five seconds. Ariel dropped after going one-half the distance on an even footing with Katia and Colleen. Katia also lost ground on the last two legs of the 12-mile finishing in fifth position.

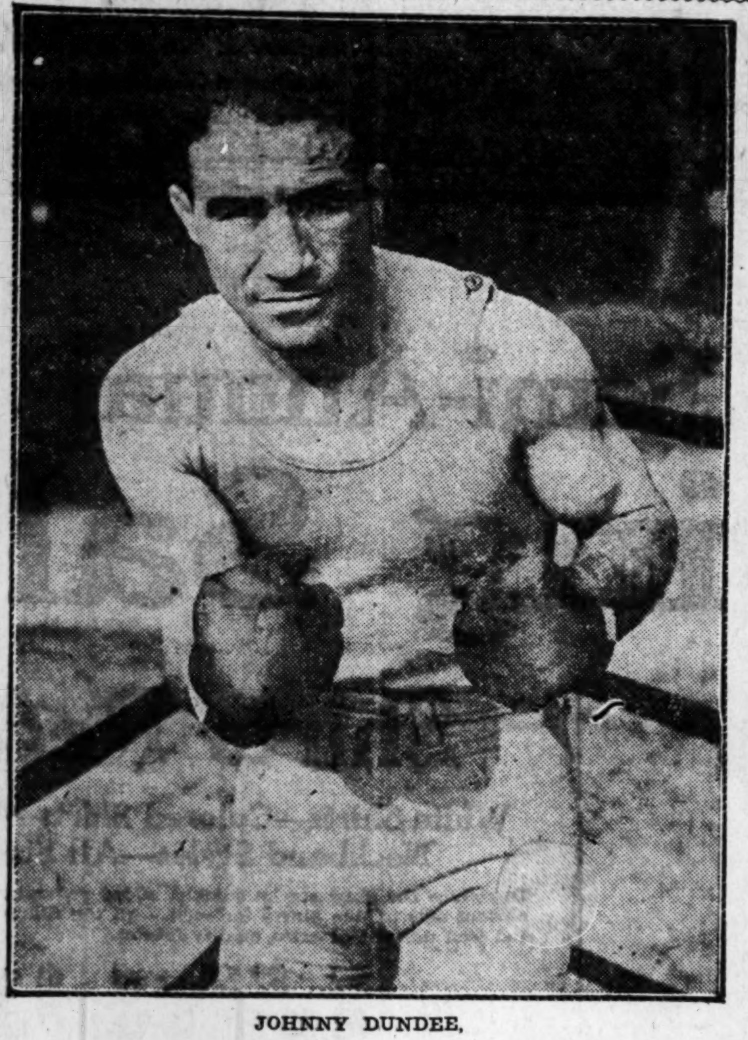
NEGRO TENNIS MEET AT CHICAGO MONDAY

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 18.—The seventh annual tennis championships for negro players will be held in Chicago under the auspices of the American Tennis Club. Games will begin Monday morning. There will be men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles.

Montell Blanks and Miss E. J. Carr will represent St. Louis.

An added event, the boys' junior championship, limited to youths under 18, will be a feature.

Reduced 23 Pounds, Won a Title



JOHNNY DUNDEE,

Who took off more pounds than a heavyweight in preparing for the Criqui bout. The secret is hard work and abstinence from starch, he says.

Dundee Tells How He Reduced 23 Pounds in Less Than Month

Hard Work on the Road and a Starchless Diet Two Important Factors in Trimming Middleweight Down to a Feather—Eat Sparingly to Stay Thin, He Declares.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18—"Ever since I won the world's featherweight championship from Eugene Criqui of France at the Polo Grounds recently, fans everywhere I've gone have been asking me for the secret of how I reduced from 147 pounds—which was my weight when I started training—and made 124 pounds at the weighing-in time (2 o'clock on the day of the fight) and was strong," said Johnny Dundee to a Post-Dispatch representative.

"As a matter of fact, I weighed only 123 pounds the night before the fight. I only had to weigh 126 pounds at the stipulated weighing-in time—as this is the featherweight limit—according to the boxing rules. But I took off all these pounds—more in proportion to my normal size than any heavyweight ever took off—without weakening myself.

"The answer to the question they are all asking as to how could I take off over 20 pounds in three weeks and be strong is HARD WORK.

"I think that outdoor work, roadwork, is the biggest aid in ridding one's self of fat. I put on woolen underwear, pants and a sweater and then start jogging on the road. Of course right from the jump I don't run any great distance, but I gradually increase the run until right before the bout I'm doing about seven miles every morning.

Rope Skipping Helps.

"Another big factor in speed and weight reducing is rope skipping. Sometimes I've done this for such a length of time that the fellow who held the watch has gone and gotten a haircut and shave and returned before I had finished. This is no exaggeration.

"I also do a lot of stomach exercises. The stomach is the seat of the fighter's greatest worry. If his stomach is all right then he doesn't have to be afraid of anybody. If his stomach is bad then he had better be afraid of everybody.

"I lie on my back on the floor and without moving my torso keep raising my legs up and down as long as I can. This strengthens the stomach and leg muscles.

"But one thing helps to reduce me most—and it will reduce anybody—so girls take heed and you'll see—is to go without starchy foods.

"In the morning I eat one or two boiled eggs—and maybe a piece or two of toast. I rarely touch anything for luncheon, but in the evening after the day's hard work is over I eat lamb chops and vegetables, no potatoes or bread. Prunes are something else that are very good, as is the juice of oranges.

Dundee Eats Sparingly.

"But of the things I eat, I eat sparingly. That's one of the secrets of staying thin—eat sparingly. When you get up from the table feel as though you could eat something more.

"When you don't overtax your digestive organs they work nicely, and all the food you do eat goes to build you up, make blood and the like. It's the extra food that your organs haven't the capacity to digest that causes the extra weight to accumulate.

"That is how I managed to reduce more than 20 pounds for Criqui and be strong. It was a case of work all the time, and I was able to work hard because my mind was concentrated on the idea of whipping the Frenchman. Nothing else disturbed it. That's how I was able to forget rich food, for when I'm not training I have a big appetite.

"Sometimes I wonder how I can go along as I do—13 years of putting on and taking off weight. Maybe the hard work that I do would kill somebody else, they say one man's food is another man's poison, you know, but I have been doing it without ill effects.

"I've been telling my readers how to take off weight and how to keep it off by dieting and exercising, but I don't do it myself. I must confess that after a fight I'm a glutton. I stuff my stomach full of rich food. That's my dissipation after a fight. Three or four dishes of spaghetti and a dozen bottles of ginger ale is nothing at a sitting.

"Water is also a big help to me when training. I drink plenty of it, which helps me to perspire freely and rid my body of impurities."

ATHLETICS HIT HARD AND DEFEAT INDIANS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 18.—Playing the same sort of slashing biff-bang game that characterized their work early in the season, the Athletics beat the Indians in the first of a two-game series here today, 11 to 7.

The A's were in a hitting mood and took kindly to the offerings of all of Speaker's pitchers. First it was Southpaw Sherrod Smith, then came two right-handers, Daniel Boone and Phil Bedgood, and finally another lefty, Joe Shaute.

Wilderness Beats Flagstaff by Head In Travers Stake

Wilson 3-Year-Old Makes Sensational Finish—Big Blaze Wins Over St. James.

British Derby Victor May Run in U. S. in October, Owner Says

LONDON, Aug. 18.

"NOTHING has been signed yet" was the comment here today of Ben Irish, owner of the Derby winner, Papyrus, when asked about the dispatch from New York describing a projected race between his horse and the best American 3-year-old.

"It is quite true," he added. "there have been negotiations regarding the proposed match between Papyrus and an American horse. August Belmont has offered 20,000 pounds to the winner and 5000 to the loser. There has been correspondence and cablegrams about the matter. If it takes place, it will be at Belmont Park about the middle of October."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Big Blaze is a new aspirant for two-year-old honors. This son of Campfire-Queen of the Hills, running in the colors of Glen Riddle Farm, the colors made famous by Man o'War, won the Grand Union Hotel Stakes here today, to the shouts of a crowd that equaled in numbers the record throng of a week ago. George D. Widener's St. James ran second and H. P. Whitney's Klondyke, third. Weight beat St. James. He earned the honors of the race if not the $10,000 purse.

Under his crushing impost of 130 pounds he had the speed to go right with the sizzling pace forced by Swing Along. In fact he shared in the pace-making and this brought about his defeat. He raced Swing Along into submission and took command half way down the stretch, but weight and pace told so that Big Blaze came along in the last sixteenth to win going away in the fast time of 1.11 2-5 for the six furlongs.

Big Blaze is a horse of fine appearance and good action, and his victory adds another angle to the two-year-old situation.

Wilderness Wins Travers.

R. T. Wilson, Jr. carried off the historic and classic Travers of $12,500 with Wilderness, another son of his one time good horse Campfire. The victory was poular. Flagstaff and Rialto, coupled as the Whitney-Greentree entry, because both are trained by Jimmy Rowe, were at odds on; Wilderness at 13 to 5.

The race brought about a sensational finish in which Wilderness got up in the last few strides to beat Flagstaff a head. Little wonder the crowd rose as one with a mighty roar. That finish raised the pulse beat.

Last spring Wilderness looked like one of the best three-year-olds of the year until he went wrong just before the running of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. He has now come back and may yet dispute Zev's place at the top among horses of that age.

Marinelli rated him smoothly and patiently off the pace for a mile, forced in turn by General Thatcher and Flagstaff. The last named took command turning for home but Wilderness moved up on the outside and gave challenge at the furlong pole. Then came a furious drive to the wire and right at the end Wilderness proved the stronger and got up to win by a head.

The Greentree stable's Rialto had a stormy journey even in the small field. McAtee tried to save ground by going up on the rail in the run up the back stretch. He did save ground but ran his mount into a tight pocket from which it was hard to escape until too late.

Miss Wills Loses Only 3 Games, Winning National Net Title

when the British pair, Miss Kathleen McKane and Mrs. Nancy Covell, vanquished Miss Eleanor Goss of New York and Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman of Boston in a three-set struggle, 2—6, 6—2, 6—1. Beaten in the first set by the superior strategy of their rivals, the English woman swept the American pair off their feet with a brilliantly sustained attack in the last two sets. The losers tired under the swift pace and were comparatively easy victims in the deciding set.

Miss Wills, in dethroning Mrs. Mallory, administered the first setback the Norse woman ever has sustained in the final round of the title quest and the second defeat the latter has suffered in nine years of tournament history in this country. Back in 1919, Mrs. Mallory, then Miss Bjurstedt, was off form through illness and fell before Miss Marion Zinderstein, of Wilmington, Delaware, now Mrs. John B. Jessup in an early round. Mrs. Wightman was the eventual winner of the tournament, the only one since 1915 until this season in which the Norse woman has failed to emerge victorious.

It was one of the most decisive defeats, too that Mrs. Mallory has received in her long and brilliant career. Last year, in the final round of the world's championship at Wimbledon, Mlle. Lenglen overwhelmed the American champion, 6—2, 6—0 but the victory of Miss Wills today, while she allowed her rival one more game than did the French woman, was none the less crushing in its finality.

Miss Wills' Victory a Surprise.

The decisiveness of the triumph by the California girl, who had never before been able to more than extend Mrs. Mallory, came as a distinct surprise to critics, even those who held out the highest hopes for Miss Wills as a result of her sensational march to victory through the international field that started tournament play last Monday.

There was no question that she had reached the heights of her game all week, but few expected Mrs. Mallory, who also had been showing her best form, to be swept aside so easily. But where she had seemed nervous, uncertain in opposing the veteran title-holder previously, Miss Wills today was the picture of confidence. Except for a few moments of inaccuracy at the start, she played with superb skill and cool generalship.

It was this resourcefulness, this imperturbility under the hottest of the champion's fire, coupled with the all-round perfection of her stroking, that cast the verdict in the youngster's favor. One of the hardest hitting players the game has ever known, Miss Wills matched drive for drive, putting, if anything, more pace into her shots than Mrs. Mallory could muster, while time after time she whipped across placement shots that the champion could barely get her racquet on.

Mrs. Mallory Battles Hard.

Mrs. Mallory fought her hardest, bringing off many remarkable returns and prolonging many brilliant rallies from the base line, but inevitably she was forced to the defensive, giving Miss Wills a chance for a smashing cross court ace or being forced into errors by the sheer power of her young rival's strokes.

Neither was able to make her service effective in the first four games of the opening set, Mrs. Mallory breaking through at love in the third game, while Miss Wills retaliated in similar manner on the champion's delivery in the fourth. At this stage of the match the tide turned with spectacular suddenness in the coast girl's favor. Flicking the lines with her drives, chasing the champion from side to side with forehand and backhand shots that whistled across the net, Miss Wills won four straight games with the loss of but one point. Mrs. Mallory rallied, and with the aid of three placements, forced the final game of the set to deuce twice, but then tossed away her chances with two errors.

Starting the second set with the same relentless attack, Miss Wills ran through three straight games, giving her a total of eight in succession, before she was momentarily checked. But although Mrs. Mallory won the fourth, after it had gone to deuce, on her own service, it proved only the final courageous stand of a fallen champion. Miss Wills quickly took the offensive to win the next three games and clinch the match. Mrs. Mallory forced the sixth game to deuce three times before yielding and in the last game netted three shots, while a pretty placement down the side lines gave Miss Wills hr other winning point.

The new champion who takes rank with Miss May Sutton Bundy as the youngest player to win the national women's title, has risen to highest American honors in but three years of national title competition. She first attracted attention in 1921 when she captured the national girls' championship, repeating her victory last year, when she also entered the women's title event for the first time. Winning the national doubles with Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup as her partner, and reaching the final round against Mrs. Mallory, who won by 6—3, 6—1.

Though her game showed vast improvement, she had been beaten twice this year, first by Miss Eleanor Goss in an invitation tourney at Seabright, N. J., and two weeks ago by Mrs. Mallory in the final of the New York State women's tournament at Rye, N. Y. Almost overnight, however, she reached new heights, defeating Miss McKane and Mrs. R. C. Clayton of England in the international match last Saturday and Monday and then starting the national tournament at the same dazzling pace. She lost but one set all week during her triumphant march and that to Miss McKane in the fourth round Thursday.

TIGERS HAMMER QUINN AND BEAT BOSTON, 10-3

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 18.—Landing hard on the offerings of Jack Quinn the Detroit Tigers hammered their way to a 10-to-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox in their series opener here today. Johnson held the Red Sox to eight hits, most prominent of which was a home run of George Burns in the fifth inning. Harry Heilmann dropped in his hitting average, getting one hit in three times up.

Three Boston hurlers were called on for duty, Howe following Quinn at the end of the third inning and O'Doul replacing Howe at the start of the fifth. Howe turned the Tiger back, one-two-three during his one-frame tenure of the mound, but was shelved for a pinch batsman in the fifth with two on base.

Rickenbacker
A CAR WORTHY OF ITS NAME

Why Each Succeeding Mile is the Sweetest Motoring Mile You Ever Enjoyed

The answer is found in the above illustration.

This is the tandem flywheel—now famous the world over.

This tandem flywheel is a basic part of the Rickenbacker Six. It's perfectly balanced application coupled with the special Rickenbacker crankshaft design takes the periods of vibration out of the motor!

Now for the first time you can start on a journey for anywhere—across the continent if you wish—certain of smooth traveling at all speeds—under all conditions.

Heretofore at different speeds in different cars some at 15; some at 25; others at 33 miles per hour you would suddenly find the car in which you were riding almost roaring its head off—shaking itself to pieces and having a similar uncomfortable effect upon all its occupants.

This cannot happen in a Rickenbacker.

The Rickenbacker tandem flywheel is one of the outstanding achievements in automotive engineering during the present decade.

Its effect is to lengthen the life, not only of the motor itself, but of every other part of the car.

And it adds immeasurably to the pleasures of motoring.

How does it work—how does it accomplish its purpose?

The best answer to that is to take a ride in a Rickenbacker—drive it yourself—test it at all speeds and compare it with every car you have ever owned or ridden in, regardless of price.

Note the absence of any period of vibration—of which previously you had not been over conscious, perhaps, but the absence of which you now realize has immeasurably enhanced the pleasures of motoring.

Ten minutes at the wheel of a Rickenbacker will convince you.

Dan Taylor to Meet Bud McHale

Two Hard Hitters Mix in Feature Event at Battery A Thursday Night.

Daring Dan Taylor, his already abundant stock of self-confidence increased through his recent one-round knockout victory over Urban Groebl, will have an opportunity to take a real step upward in the local fistic world when he meets Bud McHale in the main event of the Business Men's Athletic Association show at the Battery A drill yard, Grand boulevard and Hickory street, Thursday night.

Taylor is of the opinion that the city championship is at stake. The bout is scheduled to go 10 rounds, but both men are hard hitters and a knockout may be expected.

An eight-round semifinal is also on the card, but the promoters, Jim Solari and Harry Cook, have not yet lined up the principals.

Two four-round bouts will open the program.

Crimes Against Property Cause Loss of $800,000 Every Day and $3,000,000,000 Annually in U. S.

Stock Frauds Take Largest Toll—Public Apathy Toward Criminality Increase Called Worst Aspect of Situation.

BY CARL H. GETZ.

(Written for the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

THE national crime bill is $800,000 a day. The New York Stock Exchange, the National Association of Credit Men, the New York Customs House, the National Surety Co. and the Association of Railway Executives, have compared notes and find that crime against property is costing the people of the United States $3,000,000,000—billions, not millions—which is $30 for every man, womaan and child a year.

Seymour L. Cromwell, president of the New York Stock Exchange, reports the greatest loss in any one field—$1,000,000,000 from stock frauds.

The National Association of Credit Men estimated that fraudulent bankruptcies are costing the investing and speculating public $400,000,000 a year.

William B. Joyce, chairman of the National Surety Co., estimates that burglary, larceny and general petty thefts result in a loss of $25,000,000 yearly. Mr. Joyce also estimates that embezzlements are costing the American people $100,000,000 a year and that forgery and cashing of checks written on banks where the makers of checks have no accounts result in another $100,000,000 loss.

The New York Customs House estimates that seaport robberies, piracies and customs frauds result in an additional annual loss of $100,000,000.

The Association of Railway Executives estimates railroad freight thefts at $25,000,000 annually.

Home building frauds are estimated at $25,000,000 and miscellaneous crimes of all kinds are estimated at $1,000,000,000, making a total of $3,000,000,000.

Three billion dollars is three thousand millions a year, or a loss of $33,000 an hour. Possibly that will help to get some idea of the seriousness of crimes against property in the United States.

Reasons for Increase.

Every available bit of information shows that crimes against property are increasing. Embezzlement losses suffered by the surety companies have increased from $1,396,081 in 1910 to $8,270,000 in 1921 and burglary losses from $886,045 in 1910 to $11,500,000 in 1921.

What is the explanation for this enormous amount of crime?

Chairman Joyce of the National Surety Co. has made a more careful study of this whole subject, perhaps, than any other man in America. He gives seven reasons for the number of property crimes today. They are:

1. Widespread disrespect for property rights and law, partly caused by the World War.
2. Envy and resentment, caused partly by the ostentation of the wealthy class and also by a widespread belief that opportunities for wealth are unequally allotted.
3. Many salaries too close to the starvation line.
4. Unemployment, one of the most serious contributing factors to the nation's mounting crime bill, regardless of the fact that many men often refuse work, merely because it is not congenial, the condition of unemployment, nevertheless, remaining.
5. Carelessness of employers in not investigating the records of new employes, in not auditing the accounts of their business with sufficient frequency and thoroughness and not keeping their office funds in properly constructed modern safes.
6. Doctrines of anarchy and bolshevism and misinterpretation of book knowledge.
7. Desire for luxury beyond earning capacity.

The soundness of Mr. Joyce's conclusions as set forth in the first of his seven reasons is evidenced by the fact that all the countries which participated in the World War have undergone the same criminal experience the United States has.

Disrespect for Dry Law.

He might have added with much force that in the United States the popular attitude of a substantial part of the public toward prohibition, and specifically the Volstead law, has had tremendous influence upon the public's attitude toward all law. Disrespect for one law leads to disrespect for other laws.

The man who has broken one law without danger to himself sooner or later gets the idea into his head that he can break other laws with impunity.

It is debatable just how true Mr. Joyce's second reason is. How much ostentation is there on the part of the wealthy class in the average city? Is it ostentation witnessed by the criminally inclined? Here is a subject too comprehensive in its ramification to permit discussion here.

So far as Mr. Joyce's observation as to low salaries is concerned, his expression "the starvation line" may be somewhat of an exaggeration. Nevertheless, countless "white-collar" employes are receiving salaries which deny to them many of the comforts and opportunities for recreation which they should have. Many large employes and scores of financial institutions are rapidly coming to a point where they recognize this and are planning to increase the compensation of their clerical forces.

Mostly First Offenders.

There is no doubt that crime is largely the result of economic rather than social conditions, a point raised in Mr. Joyce's fourth reason. If a man is hungry and has no money and no opportunity to make any, he isn't going to allow the law to stop him from getting something to eat.

A study of present-day crime reveals the interesting fact that nearly 90 per cent of the violent crimes in the country are committed by first and second offenders, mostly young men from 17 to 22 years. The major part of these men began a criminal career because of inability to get work. Probably they refused work they didn't want, but the fact remains that they were idlers when they took to crime.

It is simple to deduce that the indifference of employers towards the past records of new employes is based on the fact that these employers are protected by surety bonds and that they can't lose. If there is a loss the surety pays it.

I recently had occasion to investigate the methods of a bond house in protecting its securities in eight different vaults. I discovered that there were no methods. The house relied upon the integrity of an employe who had been with that company for 34 years.

"But he could be dishonest," I remarked.

"Possible, but highly improbable," I was told.

"Then why do you take the chance that you do?"

"We don't; we are covered with a surety bond."

In this instance the presence of the surety bond placed a premium on carelessness. Of course, the bond was necessary, but the bond should not result in a discontinuance of usual precaution.

Failure to Prosecute.

The practice of many reputable houses in using as accountants men who are not certified public accountants frequently has proved costly. There are many accountants who are not certified who are thoroughly capable and absolutely honest but the wise firm will permit the auditing of books by certified accountants, only.

Mr. Joyce might have added as a cause of crimes against property the failure of the public to prosecute when money losses can be re-

FUTURE OF ORGANIZED LABOR

DISCUSSED BY SAMUEL GOMPERS, CONSERVATIVE, AND W. Z. FOSTER, RADICAL

Head of American Federation Charges That Agitation for Industrial Unions to Take Place of Craft Organizations Is Robbing the Movement of Its Necessary Solidarity—But His Rival Says Workers Must Unite to Abolish the Wage System and Form a Workers' Republc or Union Labor as a Force Will Perish.

What Gompers Says:

IS IT not a pity that so much ability (Foster's) should be subverted to disrupt our labor movement?

The solidarity of labor is our daily work. But cohesion can be cemented only by education, trial and persuasion.

Trade autonomy means self-government in labor. It does not prohibit the amalgamation of kindred trades. It encourages it.

Study the history of the unions. Has it not been a magnificent evolution in labor solidarity? Premature amalgamation on the other hand makes not for unity but for destruction.

The American Federation of Labor consists of 112 free international trade unions. These unions have a life of their own. To force industrial unionism on them would disintegrate our labor movement.

What Foster Says:

MR. GOMPERS spends his time knocking class-conscious labor in the meetings of the National Civic Federation.

The workers must either close up their ranks or perish. The multitude of fratricidal crafts must be amalgamated.

Our wage earners do not realize that it is not a "fair day's pay" but the ultimate abolition of the wage system they must strive for.

Our labor movement is in a state of bankruptcy. In every country, except America, organized labor has awakened to the revolutionary character of the movement.

Whereas in all other leading industrial countries the workers, accepting the logic of capitalist consolidation, are imbued with the principles of one union for each industry, our labor movement still clings to the antiquated notion of craft unionism.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.

THE history of labor is not primarily its struggle against the employer or public opinion or the State. It is rather the struggle of its leaders for its mastery. There are many causes which conspire to keep the average wage-earner from informed and clear opinion and therefore render him the victim of those winds of doctrine which blow strongest.

Hence the capture of the workers' minds has ever been the main strategy of labor leadership. Hence the history of the labor movement everywhere is a complex campaign of unbending dogmas, ruthlessly defended by strong-willed and often single-minded men, to whom disagreement bespeaks treachery and one-mindedness only means co-operation.

The war and especially the peace have profoundly shaken the world of labor, in each country according to its own foundations. In America also there is now a tremendous inner struggle going on for the control of the labor movement. The central issue is craft as against industrial unionism.

The conservatives, led by Mr. Gompers, naturally wish to maintain intact the trade union tradition and technique. The radicals, led by William Z. Foster, want industrial unionism; the amalgamation, or at least the closest possible federation, of all the workers in each industry.

Great and inevitable movements create their leaders in their own image. For more than four decades the story of American labor is the personal reminiscence of Samuel Gompers. His virtues are, to a considerable degree, its strength; and its weaknesses are best illustrated by his defects. His career wil remain historically interwoven with the rise and development of American trade unionism, for the theories and tactics of our present labor movement have been puddled by the inextinguishable inner fire of this man.

How Gompers' Union Career Began

When Samuel Gompers came here from England at the age of 13 in the midst of the Civil War, he was too young to join any but the irregular army of workers. In those days the American labor movement was confined largely to the hair-splitting of revolutionary immigrants—mostly refugees of the '48 upheavals, Marxian Socialists and Bakunin Anarchists. For a short time young Gompers argued the respective merits of the different rainbow "Internationals," then even less relevant to American life than now. Later he joined that curious mushroom, the Knights of Labor, that One Big Union, which combined militant classconsciousness with the appeal to the American love of secret mummery.

But Gompers' vision soon persuaded him that revolutionary tactics had no chance in a country of virgin industry and almost untouched natural resources. He threw his fortunes into the very beginnings of our trade union movement. In 1881 he was elected the first President of the American Federation of Labor. Excepting one year, he has held the position ever since. From a few thousand sporadic members the federation has grown to almost 4,000,000 workers.

Many were the leaders who went down before the trade union philosophy and strategy of Samuel Gompers; Uriah Stephens and Terence V. Powderly of the Knights of Labor; the different kinds of Anarchists and Syndicalists and Socialists, the Single Taxers and a score of wildfire industrial unions during the last quarter of a century. Now his most dangerous opponent is William Z. Foster.

Foster's Menace to Unionism Today

Foster is dangerous to the present form of American trade unionism, because he knows the weak spots of trade unionism far better than did Daniel de Leon or Henry George or Eugene V. Debs.

Mr. Gompers appreciates it. "Is it not a pity," he asked somewhat rhetorically, "that so much ability should be subverted to disrupt our labor movement?" There was tremendous force as his fist came down, his mouth and eyes contracted, his stocky frame literally shaking with righteous indignation—altogether a splendid picture of his great namesake and fellow labor leader of the Old Testament!

"What, then, is your view of the present need for the greater solidarity of labor to fight the open shop and the injunction?" I asked.

"The solidarity of labor is our daily work. What else has been the entire history of the American Federation of Labor since its inception? But cohesion can be cemented only by education, by trial and error and persuasion. Trade autonomy means self-government in labor. It does not prohibit the amalgamation of kindred trades. It encourages it.

"Study the history of the printing trades, the pipefitters, the miners, the brewery workers, the woodworkers, the cigarmakers, the building trades, the machinists, the city labor councils! Has it not been a magnificent evolution in labor solidarity? Premature amalgamation, on the other hand, makes not for unity but for destruction.

112 Free International Trade Unions

"The American Federation of Labor consists of 112 free International Trade Unions. These unions have a history and life of their own. To force industrial unionism upon them would disintegrate our labor movement. As far back as 1901 the American Federation of Labor declared at the Scranton convention that 'the interests of the trade union movement will be prompted by closely allied and subdivided crafts giving consideration to amalgamation and to the organization of District and National Trade Councils to which should be referred questions in dispute, and which should be adjusted within allied crafts' lines.'

"In the Rochester convention of 1912 we again affirmed that '.....every effort has been made by the American Federation of Labor, the Executive Council, and our organizations to bring about amalgamation of national and international unions, and where that has been impossible for the time being, to endeavor to have them co-operate and federate for their mutual advantage.' So you see, we are not against amalgamation. But we are against revolution."

While Mr. Gompers is deeply rooted in the evolution of American trade unionism, Mr. Foster's background leads back to the more class-conscious and revolutionary phase of American labor. A New England Yankee, he was born in the very year in which Mr. Gompers became president of the American Federation of Labor. In his early manhood he became a street car conductor in New York, where he first entered the labor movement as a Socialist. Then he became a settler on a Government land claim in the West for several years. The soil proved too tame for his revolutionary spirit, so he turned a sailor before the mast in the forecastle of old square-rigged ships, visiting every continent and every great port in the world, studying with fanatical interest the proletarian and labor movements everywhere. Later on he revisited Germany, France, England, Italy and Russia, changing his labor studies in the field with long hours in the libraries.

Foster a Wizard at Simplification

There are many excellent labor economists in our universities, but none who knows the history and tactics of international labor and revolutionary movements as thoroughly and yet as clearly as Foster. It is this extraordinary gift of simplifying complicated movements which makes him the greatest pamphleteer in the history of American labor. From his indefatigable pen a veritable shower of books, pamphlets, leaflets and all kinds of propaganda is raining into the trade union locals throughout the length and breadth of this continent, irritating the great rank and file into giving thought to his ideas.

In 1909 Foster joined the I. W. W. But he soon realized that any movement outside the mass organization of the workers could never reach them. Whereupon he began preaching to the "militant radicals" to get back into their trade unions and to "bore from within." But "boring from within" means work and nerve and intelligence, while the "wobblies" and the old-time Socialists preferred to talk. So Foster formed within the last decade two different organizations whose object it was to get into the trade unions with radical propaganda.

When the war broke out he initiated the drive for organizing the stockyards workers. In 1919 he ran the steel strike. He felt that he needed to be known to the mass of American workers and also that he needed this actual experience in labor organization. By 1921 he felt that he was ready to launch in earnest into industrial union propaganda and he founded the Trade Union Educational League, which, in the course of two years, managed to introduce the amalgamation topic as the main subject of conversation in American labor.

His Spirit of the Crusader

Foster has the spirit of the crusader. Yet everything is figured out from the most complicated moves down to his daily diet which is calculated to conserve his strength for his enormous labors. His personal habits are as if he were in training. As we sat down to a carefully balanced lunch, Foster enlarged upon his philosophy and schemes.

"Our labor movement is in a state of bankruptcy," he began. "The first prerequisite for carrying on labor's battle against exploitation is a clear understanding of just what the fight is all about. In every country in the world, excepting in America, organized labor has awakened to the revolutionary character of the labor movement. American labor alone is still asleep, drugged into insensibility by bourgeois propaganda."

"In this philosophical primitiveness originate most of the evils from which our labor movement is now suffering. We still suffer from such capitalist nonsense as 'a fair day's pay for a fair day's work,' or 'rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies' in the political field. The rank and file of our wage-earners do not realize that it is not a 'fair day's pay' but the ultimate abolition of the wage-system that they must strive for; that there is no sense in 'rewarding' a Democrat by 'punishing' a Republican, but that they must go in for independent political action.

"Is there any wonder that with these notions American labor still stands for the nine and 10 and 12-hour day in most industries, while even Panama, Peru and Uruguay have a legal eight-hour day?

Says Labor Movement Lags in U. S.

"Is there any wonder that under these circumstances we have not quite 4,000,000 trade unionists in a population of 110,000,000? In Germany there are 12,000,000 trade unionists out of a total of 55,000,000 people. In England the trade unionists number 6,000,000 in a population of 44,000,000. In other words, the German trade unions are numerically six times as strong as ours and the English about four times. The fact is that we have barely made a start in organizing our workers, three-fourths of whom are still unorganized.

"But the main weakness of our labor movement is structural. Whereas in all other leading industrial countries the workers, accepting the logic of capitalist consolidation, are imbued with the principle of one union for each industry, our labor movement still clings

Part Played by Coolidge in the Boston Police Strike as Told by the Official Records

Governor Took Charge of Situation Two Days After Walkout of Men, After Mayor Had Called Out All Troops in City and When "Order Had Been Generally Restored."

The Boston police strike of 1919 made Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, a national figure for the first time. What he did, and did not do, in that emergency has again become a matter of wide discussion and controversy. The story of his part in it is presented herewith by the Post-Dispatch.

By John J. Leary Jr.,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

BOSTON, Aug. 18.

FOUR years ago, almost to a day, the country was electrified by the news that the police of old, conservative Boston had struck, leaving the city at the mercy of thieves and rioters. The strike and what followed introduced Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, to the national public and about a year later made him the Republican nominee for Vice President of the United States.

By the time Mr. Coolidge, through the death of President Harding, had become chief executive of the nation, the Boston police strike had become an old story, clouded by tradition—remembered mainly by antitrades unionists as an argument against unionism, and by trades unionists who, while admitting that the strike per se was a blunder, yet have insisted that in the reports of the strike neither the strikers nor trades unionism have received just treatment.

Trades unionists and liberal leaders generally who delved into the matter disputed, when they did not resent, the fame that came to Mr. Coolidge as the man who in popular estimation outside of Boston broke the strike and ended the Boston disorders. These have insisted that Mr. Coolidge as Governor of Massachusetts did nothing to head off the strike; though he had the power to remove the Police Commissioner, did nothing while the rioting and disorder was at its height and came into the situation only after Andrew J. Peters, then Mayor of Boston, had policed the city with troops and quiet had been restored.

Credit Given to Others

They have further charged that whatever credit accrued properly belonged to Peters and to the late Edward U. Curtis, then Police Commissioner of Boston.

Right here it ought to be stated that at no time, so far as I have been able to discover, has Mr. Coolidge laid claim to the credit of having broken the strike or having done more than allow Curtis to run his department in his own way, and after the strike, refused to allow the strikers to return to the places they had abandoned. And it ought also to be said that at no time has he been under any obligation or had, so far as the record shows, any real occasion for disclaiming the laurels placed upon him.

The strike was not a development of sudden growth. It had its inception, as did most of the labor troubles since 1919, in the cost of living, its basis being the wages paid the policemen of Boston, supplemented by the conditions obtaining in many of the station houses where they were compelled to live and sleep a considerable part of their time.

By 1919 dissatisfaction with wages in the Boston Police Department had been growing nearly 40 years. In that time the policeman's pay, fixed in 1878 at $3 a day, had been increased in 1887 according to the records in the Police Commissioner's office, to a minimum of $1000 and a maximum of $1200, the minimum being attained after a more or less indefinite period as a reserve man, and the maximum after three years as a full patrolman. In 1913, men serving four years or more were given $1400, the minimum and intermediate grades remaining the same.

Club Organized

To obtain better wages the policemen in 1914 formed the Boston Social Club. That organization was recognized by the then Commissioner, and for that matter his successors for several years. In 1914, it succeeded in getting an additional $100 for men who had served five years or more, men of lesser length of service receiving no increase.

Under the law of Massachusetts management and direction of the Boston police is in the hands of a Commissioner appointed by and responsible to the Governor of the Commonwealth, who has the power of removal. This power to remove has never been exercised, largely because the Commissioners have always leaned attentive ears to anything Governors had to suggest. Only in time of "tumult, riot and violent disturbance," when the Mayor is empowered to take temporary control, can any police official exercise the slightest control over any policeman.

The city government, however, fixes the salaries of policemen and it was upon its members, and not upon the Commissioner, that the pressure for increases was exercised. After 1914 it was ineffective and with the cost of living more than doubled by the autumn of 1918, the position of the men was admittedly uncomfortable if not impossible.

Faith Lost in Club

By that time also they had also lost faith in the Boston Social Club. To their way of thinking, it had come "under the influence of headquarters" and become useless except as a cemetery and they begun to cast about for some other instrument through which relief might be had. Organizing on labor union lines was suggested, the Police Department then being the only unionized city department in Boston. In Boston, also, the trade union movement was and is strong politically.

The movement to form a union crystallized Dec. 26 of that year when in an announcement of a decision to make the old club a local of the American Federation of Labor the Boston Globe said:

"The men insist that with the American Federation of Labor assistance grievances could be placed before the proper authorities and nobody would get into trouble."

The phrase "and nobody get into trouble" is interesting as showing that at the time there was no thought of striking.

The federation, however, was not at that time admitting organizations of policemen to membership. Such membership had been sought, but denied mainly because of an inherent feeling of incompatibility and, as the Boston men apparently intended, would result in jug-handled partnerships in which the police would contribute nothing and in return depend upon the labor movement to get them wages and better conditions.

Pay Increased in 1919

Partial relief in the form of an increase of $200 per man was given on May 1, 1919, when Mayor Peters stated this was made possible by receipt by the city of unexpected revenues. No further increase could be given, he said, save at the expense of cutting the wages of men in other departments.

In June, 1919, the federation had its annual convention in Atlantic City under conditions of unusual stress even for a federation conven-

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ with interest your editorial on "Equal Rights" August 10, and enjoyed to the full your logical accuracy and keen humor. Men and women can never have equal rights in the sense of "an eye for an eye," because their equality is different. Our Maker intended men and women to work in unison and not in competition. As to her right after marriage to her own identity, that lies wholly with the individual woman. Marriage is a partnership contract. God gave every individual an identity and it is ours for the finding and asserting, forevermore.

Unquestionably "a single standard of morals" is ultimately essential, or better the essential ultimate. But it will be established and enforced in the homes by a mutually honest agreement between mother and father or husband and wife. Morals are so utterly individual in both men and women and the effect of the lack of them is so different on the man and the woman by nature that to attempt to establish a standard by law is the rankest folly. Insofar as the city, state, or nation is concerned with our morals, there is no double standard. If the interpreters and administrators of those laws use their positions to make a difference, that can only be corrected by the women at the polls. Say it with votes for the fit man or woman.

It is quite evident that the National Woman's Party is not led by intelligent thinking. The temerity of the women of the National Woman's Party is marvelous when you stop to consider their daring attempt to hand over to our Uncle Sam a package by mother nature "signed, sealed and delivered" to them. Imagine Uncle Sam establishing a moral standard and some of our peanut politicians enforcing it! Those women would shame even "Tillie, The Toiler." However, Uncle Sam has just one consolation. They cannot demand that he bear their children. But he can thank God for that, not the women of the National Woman's Party.

AN OBSERVER.

Rev. McGehee Explains His Offer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A CORRESPONDENT in your paper undertakes to call my hand on the $1000 offer I made sometime ago relative to the Klan being a criminal organization. He says, "In the Post-Dispatch recently a St. Louis minister, the Rev. Charles D. McGehee, offered to pay $1000 to anybody who would produce an instance in which a member of the Ku Klux Klan was convicted of an offense in a court of record."

What I did say in my challenge that the Klan was not a lawless organization but was just the contrary, was as follows: "I defy anyone to prove from the court record that the Klan has at any time, anywhere in the United States been convicted of any crime."

As to the case in question Mr. Manning is as accurate in drawing his conclusions as in my first offer to reward the false accusors with $1000 for proof of conviction of the Klan for any crime committed. This was not a criminal charge against the Klan, but against certain individuals who published a paper called "The Voice of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan," a privately owned paper. There is only one official publication, "The Night Hawk," published by the Imperial Palace in Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Manning, I am sorry that you cannot give this $1000.

As to the stakeholder, the last person I would trust with that job would be the editor of the Post-Dispatch, whom you name. CHAS. D. McGEHEE.

Other Klan Crimes.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM a few days too late to be able to claim the reward of $1000 to anyone proving to the Rev. McGehee of a single case of any member of the Ku Klux Klan being convicted for committing acts of violence. However, I wish my competitor for the reward the very best success in collecting from the Rev. McGehee.

What I wish to say is if the Rev. McGehee isn't certain of the case referred to I would suggest he buy a Houston Chronicle and read under date of July 25 how Criminal District Judge C. W. Robinson fined 11 members of the Ku Klux Klan $100 and costs apiece for committing acts of violence.

One case in particular was the flogging in Oklahoma of a man and the cutting off of the woman's hair. This act was committed last January.

You are to be commended on your recent editorial "Will Indiana Go Ku Klux," and your editorial in today's issue, "The Klan's Cocksureness." An organization of this sort will surely die of its own poison.

STRESEMANN'S PROPERTY LEVY.

Chancellor Stresemann's proposed levy of 25 per cent on wealth, which is to be used in reparations payments and for establishing a gold currency, is the most effective bid the German Republic has made for the world's sympathy and trust.

Germany has been accused of bad faith in inflating her currency. She has been charged with contriving a simulated bankruptcy in order to evade payment of just reparations. Her flood of paper money, it has frequently been alleged, was a scheme of Big Business to avoid taxation. That the fantastic project has worked into the hands of speculators and the industrial barons cannot be disputed, but whether the Government has conspired with those forces to that end, though widely suspected, is hardly susceptible of proof. If such were the Government's policy under Cuno the advent of Stresemann apparently has sharply changed it.

According to the Post-Dispatch's special correspondent, the Stresemann levy is opposed by Hugo Stinnes, who, reputedly, has profited prodigiously from the chaos of German currency. Stinnes, our correspondent states, "has sent word that he wants the measures killed." But Stresemann, seemingly, is not dismayed by the "uncrowned emperor's" displeasure and mandate. He intends going through with his plan.

Admittedly, it is a drastic plan. But the situation assuredly requires drastic remedy. Confiscation is an ugly solution of a nation's distress, yet in some degree every nation during and since the World War has had to practice it. Burdensome taxation, equitably distributed upon the entire citizenship, may nominally escape the stigma of confiscation, but in effect it is confiscation. And however unconstitutional, or unsound in theory, a capital levy may be, what more just and righteous plan for restoring the finances of government wrecked by war can be devised?

Property—that is, industry—profits hugely from war. Why should it not pay the bills? As conservative a man as our late President subscribed to that doctrine when he suggested that, in the event of another war, dollars should be drafted the same as men. It is of record that the present Premier of Great Britain voluntarily complied with the confiscatory levy proposed by Stresemann by purchasing Government bonds in the amount of one-fourth of his fortune and destroying them.

The world moves. The mentally superannuated, fettered in old formulas, may shudder at confiscation, but the kind of confiscation proposed by Stresemann will have the sanction of enlightened opinion, not only as an evidence of Germany's good faith, but as just procedure. It may further be appraised as a new factor for the prevention of war. Let war be stripped utterly of its money-making possibilities by the drafting of capital for waging war and paying war's bill and a powerful force will have been enlisted for permanent peace.

MR. HUGHES, 1916 AND 1923.

Secretary Hughes has made haste to inform London by cable that any rumors to the effect that the United States under the Coolidge administration would take the initiative in measures to save Europe are unfounded. It is the same State Department under Coolidge as under Harding and the department is Mr. Hughes.

As a candidate for President in 1916 Mr. Hughes stumped the country in denunciation of watchful waiting. He did not invite us, in so many words, into war with Germany or Mexico, but voters in some of the rock-ribbed Republican States indicated that they knew what he meant. Now the watchful waiter is Mr. Hughes himself. The rights of America in those days were not as well defined or established as the American rights of today. And President Wilson was taking all pacific means, as well as measures of force in Mexico, to defend those rights.

While our rights at stake in the differences with Mexico and Germany in 1916 were more or less debatable our rights as victors in the war to end war were bought with the blood of more than 50,000 young Americans. France is holding out against the peace of the world in a mad effort to dominate Europe by crippling and dismembering her historic enemy. Our right to demand peace on a foundation of justice in Europe today has been declared from the throats of our cannon.

Words to Germany before we entered the war were unavailing. A word today from America as a victor in the war and as the foremost economic and democratic power, in protest to France against her Ruhr and reparations policy, might carry tremendous weight.

Our rights in Europe are being trampled upon. We are not as brave in peace as we were in war. The fruits of victory are being left to rot on the field unclaimed by the American State Department. Where is the Mr. Hughes of 1916?

"STRAITJACKET ENFORCEMENT."

United States Prohibition Commissioner Haynes is telling the American people, through syndicated publication, what purports to be the official story of prohibition enforcement. It is a rambling, laborious tale, swinging forever between the extremes of despair and assurance. It is a series of emotional outbursts. The author at times pictures the forces of organized lawlessness as vast and formidable and, now with tears, now with indignation, berates the respectable citizens who patronize bootleggers; but he seems confident that prohibition as now written is here to stay.

In a recent article, however, he admitted the possibility of a let-down in enforcement on the part of the Government. This let-down might result from various causes: the appointment of disloyal officials; the reduction in the number of enforcing agents necessary to do the work; the withholding of adequate appropriations. But if such a condition should ensue, Mr. Haynes declares, "an aroused electorate would be stirred to righteous passion and straitjacket enforcement would follow."

Just what does the Commissioner mean by "straitjacket enforcement"? The dictionary defines straitjacket as a garment used for "dangerous lunatics" or "violent prisoners." Presumably, then, "straitjacket enforcement" implies the resort by Government to measures of repression and torture abhorrent to this age. That there are fanatics among the prohibitionists who would joyfully approve of such devices is not to be doubted, but that a high Government official would predict the resurrection of such tyranny and give it his indorsement is amazing.

It is fair to say, we believe, that if prohibition can survive only by "straitjacket enforcement" it is inescapably doomed. The truth is that prohibition will live or die by public opinion. Thus far the American people have not accepted prohibition. Their representatives have put it into the Constitution and the statutes, but the people have not put it into practice. Whether they ever will is for the future to disclose. It is patent, however, that public opinion does not regard violators of the prohibition laws as persons to be treated as "dangerous lunatics" or "violent prisoners" and it will be a tragic day in our history if the Government ever undertakes so to misuse its powers.

THE VALUE OF LAZINESS.

A learned writer in the Medical Review of Reviews says the growing use of motor cars is making a lazy race of the American people. Well, what of it? Laziness is not necessarily a vice. It may be a philosophical contempt for the trivial things of this world. As commonly used, it seems to mean a disinclination to indulge in furious muscular or vocal exercises. Our sympathies are with the English philosopher who recently expatiated on a man's "right to laziness."

During her visit to this country, Mrs. Margot Asquith described our chief national fault as the undervaluation of leisure. The criticism was sound. Most Americans regard life as a 50-yard sprint from the cradle to the grave. A man is deemed busy if he moves his arms, legs and jaws violently, regardless of whether he accomplishes anything. On the other hand, he who merely sits and thinks is frequently regarded as a loafer, if not a bum.

Most of the ideas which have contributed greatly to human welfare were supplied by men who exercised their brains to the neglect of their arms and legs. None of us can hope to be as strong as the gorilla or as fleet as the mountain goat. Our proper development lies away from that direction. What's all the shouting about? Let us have a little rest!

CAUSE OR EFFECT?

HOW sad that Mrs. Kresge, wife of the millionaire ten-cent store man, should have to base her divorce action on the ground that this well-known reformer and prohibition leader was so morose, moody and ill-tempered that there was no getting along with him. Can Mr. Haynes tell us how such a thing could be? That a prohibition leader should be morose, not gay? That constant effort to prevent one's fellows from seeing blue devils and pink elephants should result in long evenings of sullen silence and fits of scolding and nagging? Can this be true?

Is it not a fact, has it not always been a fact, that man needs something laughter provoking and joy bringing to save him from himself? But the Prohibitionists have taken from us the easiest and surest means of escaping from our mental blue devils and our moods of meanness, in denying us anything stronger than one-half of one per cent. Was it not said of the sorrowing and suffering, incidentally the working man, "Let him drink and forget his poverty and remember his misery no more."

"Wine that maketh glad the heart of man"—what a pity that millionaire Kresge repudiated that truth and turned his back upon it.

"Now drown care in wine," said old Horace, the Roman poet. And Homer knew its good effect when he said that it could "Make the sage frolic and the serious smile."

"Good wine needs no bush," says Shakspeare. Good wine, Mr. Prohibitionist!

And again, Shakspeare: "Good wine is a good, familiar creature, if well used."

Misused wine, however, Milton condemns thus:

"Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape Crushed the sweet poison of misused wine."

Commenting on the miracle at Cana in Galilee, Crawshaw, a British poet of bygone days, made the neat line: "The conscious water saw its God and blushed."

In Keats' immortal "Ode to a Nightingale" occur the charming lines:

"Dance and Provencal song and sunburnt mirth!
Oh, for a beaker full of the warm South,
Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene!
With beaded bubbles, winking at the brim,
And purple stained-mouth."

And again, Keats:

"Sweet as old wine in bottles, ale in barrels.

"Which cheers the sad, revives the old, inspires
The young, makes Weariness forget his toil,
And Fear her danger; open a new world
When this, the present, palls."

And our own highly moral and law-abiding Longfellow:

"This song of mine
Is a song of the vine
To be sung by the glowing embers
Of wayside inns,
When the rain begins
To darken the drear Novembers."

Enough. We are speaking blasphemies against the Volstead Dagon. But, en passant, it may be admissible to wonder whether the lack of wine is the cause of the sad and sullen Prohibitionist spirit; or the joy-lacking, morose spirit of the Prohibitionist the cause of his hatred of that drink which Tennyson honored when he spoke of

"Wines that, heaven knows when,
Had sucked the fire of some forgotten sun,
And kept it through a hundred years of gloom."

METAPHYSICAL REASONING.

LET me give two examples of metaphysical reasoning. We have an idea of an omnipotent, all-good and perfect being. We are incapable, knowing as we do only imperfect things, of framing such an idea for ourselves, so it must have been given us by the being himself. And perfection must include existence, so God must exist. This was good enough for Anselm and Descartes, who went on to build a whole closely concatenated philosophical system on this foundation. To them the logic seemed irrefragable; to the modern student of comparative religion, even to Kant, himself a metaphysician, there was nothing whatsoever in it but an illustration of the native operations of a mind that has made a wholly gratuitous hypothesis and is victimized by an orderly series of spontaneous associations.

A second example of metaphysics may be found in the doctrines of the Eleatic philosophers who appeared in the Greek colonies on the coast of Italy, and thought hard about space and motion. Empty space seemed as good as nothing and, as nothing could not be said to exist, space must be an illusion; and as motion implied space in which to take place, there could be no motion. So all things were really perfectly compact and at rest, and all our impressions of change were the illusions of the thoughtless and the simple-minded. Since one of the chief satisfactions of the metaphysicians is to get away from the welter of our mutable world into a realm of assurance, this doctrine exercised a great fascination over many minds. The Eleatic conviction of unchanging stability received a new form in Plato's doctrine of eternal "ideas" and later developed into the comforting conception of the "Absolute," in which logical and world-weary souls have sought refuge from the times of Plotinus to those of Josiah Royce.

The Aquarium Fish's Answer.

"No wonder they are happy: These fish live in the finest aquarium in the world."—New York Subway Sun.

An object I of constant care,
Art has designed my home,
And crowds admiring at me stare
Beneath this splendid dome.
Human skill selects my food,
Supplies the water pure;
Yet mine is not the happy mood,
I feel the constant lure
To swim out in the open sea
With brothers of the brine;
I yearn for nature's liberty
And a range which is not mine.
Within this tank of bronze and glass
Though I be free from harm
From those who prey and who harass,
From terror and alarm,
I'll brave the dangers of the sea.
My nourishment I'll find.
Oh, give me back my liberty
To leave this tank behind.

MR. HUGHES' SEVEN POINTS.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

HAVING authorized Minister Grew to sign the new treaty with Turkey, Secretary Hughes should be in a position to sympathize with Woodrow Wilson's experience at the Paris Peace Conference. Mr. Wilson laid down 14 Points at Paris. His critics insist that he made less than half of his points good. At that the Wilson record at Paris was better than the Hughes record. In his famous Aide Memoire, sent to Ambassador Child at Lausanne, Mr. Hughes laid down Seven Points. Out of the seven we find that Mr. Hughes scores but one clear-cut success. His other six points were either scrapped or disregarded in the treaty finally signed. The value of the new treaty may be measured by comparing what we got from the Turks with the seven major demands originally made by Mr. Hughes. He demanded a continuation of capitulations. Capitulations are to end. He demanded full protection for American institutions in Turkey. This point is ignored in the treaty, but Ismet Pasha is to take up this question in a letter. He demanded indemnity for American losses. That, too, is to be taken up later. He demanded protection for racial and religious minorities. The Turks declined to give any guarantees on this point. He demanded freedom of the Straits. Just how much freedom we will enjoy remains to be seen. We also demanded "reasonable opportunity for archeological research." We will get such opportunities as the Turks choose to grant, and no more. The one point on which Mr. Hughes scored was in his demand for the Open Door. We secure, under our treaty, commercial rights on an equal footing with other nations. This is important, and we have no disposition to belittle Mr. Hughes' triumph in securing recognition of this principle not only from Turkey, but from the European nations.

NEWSPAPERS AS HISTORY.

From the New York World.

McMASTERS first utilised the journals of the past in constructing a pageant of the shifting American scene. Until his history greeted an astonished literary world, scholars had reared their works upon the dead books of other historians. Newspaper files were for the savant who wished to edify and bore the populace. He could not afford to venture upon this uncertain ground. The early superstition bred in the coffee houses that newspapers were inevitably incorrect as to facts became a fixed idea in the scholastic mind. * * * Lucy Maynard Salmon of the faculty of Vassar College has attempted to open the files of the past to students of history. She wishes to establish a rationale for newspaper criticism, to point out for historians the way of interpreting newspaper facts. In "The Newspaper and the Historian," Dr. Salmon devotes 600 pages to analysis of newspaper methods of securing facts, pointing the way to students of history who would use them if able to value them. With admirable clarity the book presents the problems of the newspaper and the corresponding problems of the historian. She details the difficulties of the individual reporter, the time element figuring so heavily in his work, the editor's limitations of space, the forced decisions and all the thousand and one fine questions of judgment in selecting facts. "The Newspaper and the Historian" is a valuable book and one which should exert a strong influence upon historical methods. It goes a long way toward revivifying history and enabling the scholar of the future to paint his figures in colors of the living past as it appeared to contemporary judgment and observation.

Coolidge's Part in the Strike of the Boston Police as Revealed by the Official Records

tion. That year the big fight was on indorsing the League of Nations, with Samuel Gompers leading one group, Andrew Furuseth, the fiery leader of the seamen, leading those opposed, and messengers plying between the convention and the White House with data bearing on the league. For several days, the situation was tense, with Gompers staking all on approval of the league and the result in doubt, though, as the final vote proved, the preponderating majority was for the league.

During the tenseness, and while most of the members were interested only in the fight, a resolution authorizing the granting of charters to policemen was presented and adopted without debate. The only comment, and that not part of the proceedings, was at the press table, where Chester M. Wright remarked to the writer: "That spells trouble sooner or later," meaning thereby that in some labor dispute action, or lack of it, by unionized police would prove an embarrassment.

Curtis Appointed.

Meanwhile, however, Curtis had become Police Commissioner and the agitation for higher wages and better conditions in the station houses had continued. Curtis had served one term as the Republican Mayor of Democratic Boston. A Harvard graduate and well connected socially (he was Ned to such of the Brahmins as Senator Henry Cabot Lodge), he was more in touch with members of exclusive Back Bay clubs and the summer folk of Nahant and the North Shore than with the man in the street.

"Curtis," they will tell you in Boston, "was a nice fellow but essentially of the master and man type, who pronounced master with the broad 'a.'"

Until he came into the department there was, as noted above, no rule against organizations within the department. On Aug. 11, 1919, he announced an amendment to the rules, which was later to figure prominently as "Rule 35," the suspension of 19 men for violating which precipitated the strike.

This rule as promulgated read:

"No member of the force shall join or belong to any organization, club or body composed of present or past members of the force which is affiliated with or is a part of any organization, club or body outside of the department except that a post of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Spanish War Veterans and the American Legion of World War Veterans may be formed within the department."

Violation of this rule was also the basis of the charge of violation of their oath of office later made against the strikers. This oath read in part as follows:

"I agree to obey and be bound by such rules and regulations as are or may be from time to time laid down for the government of the police of the said city."

Four days after this new rule had been promulgated the policemen accepted a charter from the American Federation of Labor. Commissioner Curtis almost immediately thereafter preferred charges against John H. McInnes, president, and 10 others, officers of the union. These men retained James H. Vahey and John P. Feeney, leaders of the Boston bar, to defend them. In the hearings they maintained the right of the men to organize. For that matter, the claim to that right was never abandoned.

Charges Stir Union Men.

The charges against the men stirred organized labor in Boston to the roots. It was further resented by a considerable element which maintained the right of policemen as well as other citizens to organize.

In this latter grouping was the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which in a formal statement recognized "the rights of all men to organize."

"There is," said the chamber, "no reason why the police should not organize within the department or present any claim or grievances collectively to the proper authority.

"The sole question is whether their organization should be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and a very brief consideration of what a policeman really is in the community shows at once that an organization of police cannot be associated with an outside body."

This, it will be noted, was middle ground between the position taken by Commissioner Curtis, who insisted the men should have no organization whatever, and that of the men, who maintained their right to membership in the federation.

Mayor Names Committee.

By late August, when the Chamber of Commerce declared its position the situation had become so tense that on Aug. 27 Mayor Peters named a committee of 34 citizens to attempt to work out a solution. This committee, made up almost wholly of bankers, merchants and professional men, he asked James J. Storrow of the banking house of Lee Higginson & Co. and one of the most prominent men socially in Massachusetts, to head.

In making announcement that he had named this body the Mayor said: "The American Federation of Labor deserves our co-operation and support in every proper way, but I do not think the policemen should become affiliated with it. This, as I understand it, is Commissioner Curtis' attitude, and in this I think he is right."

Before accepting, Storrow asked and obtained the approval of Curtis to its beginning work and his approval of its personnel including the chairman, Storrow having made that a condition of acceptance. Thereupon the committee organized, naming as an Executive Committee Storrow, John R. Macomber, president of the Chamber of Commerce; George E. Brock, president of the Home Savings Bank; P. A. O'Connell, merchant; James J. Phelan, head of the banking house of Hornblower & Weeks (of which Secretary of War John W. Weeks was a founder); A. C. Ratshesky, banker; Frederic R. Snyder, lawyer, and B. Preston Clarke of the Chamber of Commerce.

This committee functioned up to the moment the strike actually became effective and thereafter in aiding the policing of the city by troops. Oct. 3, when the city had long since become tranquil again, it submitted its report to Mayor Peters, and as such it became an official document of the city of Boston.

Committee's Report Complete.

According to this report, the first thing the committee did on organizing, Aug. 28, was to declare against American Federation of Labor affiliation by the police and call upon the policemen to present their side of the controversy. Aug. 30 Vahey and Feeney presented the case of the men, stressing, among other things, the impossible financial condition stationary wages and increasing costs of living had placed them in and the condition of various police stations.

Many of these, they charged, were vermin infested and lacking the commonest toilet necessrties, while in others there was so little room that beds were in almost continuous use, four men using a single bed in the course of a day, without its being changed or aired. The man coming off duty woke up the man sleeping and in turn was awakened when his time for sleeping had expired to make way for another policeman.

Sept. 1, says the report, the committee saw Commissioner Curtis. His sole recommendation was that it use its influence with the city officials, who, as stated above, held the purse strings, to get more money for the patrolmen.

Opinion Arrived At.

"By Sept. 2," says the report, "the Executive Committee had arrived at the opinion that an adjustment could be worked out which would thoroughly uphold the Commissioner and the Mayor in their position that the policemen must sever their connection with the American Federation of Labor and at the same time bring about an amicable settlement of the whole matter without a strike."

It was then expected that Commissioner Curtis would publish, Sept. 4, his findings and punishments in the case of the 19 policemen he had caused to be placed upon trial, the report proceeds to say. To avoid this it sent one of its members, a close personal friend, to Curtis asking that he delay action.

"No action was taken in response nor reply received to this letter," says the report, "because counsel for the committee who received and read the letter declined to permit its delivery to the committee."

Parenthetically it might here be stated that counsel to the Commissioner was Herbert Parker, a former Attorney-General of the State and intimate friend of Gov. Coolidge, who, like him, had profited politically at the hands of the late Senator W. Murray Crane. During the exciting days preceding the strike he was, although this is not stated in the report, a guest at the Lancaster home of Parker.

First Appeal to Governor.

Sept. 3 the committee says it was notified of the intention of Curtis to act immediately, whereupon it appealed to the Governor, the first time he appears in the official record of the case.

"That same evening (Sept. 3)," says the report, "feeling that a strike was impending and that because under our laws the control and government of the Boston police force is vested in the State and not in the hands of the municipal authorities, a conference was sought with the Governor and attended on behalf of the Citizens' Committee by Charles G. Bancroft, Charles F. Choate, B. Preston Clarke, George E. Brock, James J. Phelan and James J. Storrow.

"The Governor, however, stated to the committee that he felt it was not his duty to communicate with the Commissioner on the subject."

The following day (Sept. 4), Mayor Peters wrote the Commissioner asking that his decision in the case of the nineteen suspended men be held up pending the efforts of the committee.

"With the fullest appreciation of the high responsibility that rests upon you," the Mayor wrote, "I must also have in mind the safety and security of our people. The importance to the public of having this question settled satisfactorily impels me to ask you to postpone action for a few days only until the development of the pending conference may be seen.

"If they succeed in solving the problem without requiring you to reach a final decision, friendly discussion will have achieved a result satisfactory to all concerned."

This letter was handed to Parker by Charles F. Choate, corporation lawyer of New England, and resulted in Curtis putting off his decision to Monday, Sept. 8.

Charter Surrender Urged.

Sept. 5, the report proceeds, Choate drafted a proposition for an adjustment of the difficulty "on the basis of the surrender of the American Federation of Labor charter." This draft was not completed until Saturday, and on the following day was submitted to Mayor Peters. Its main provisions were:

"We recommend the following basis of settlement which we hope will commend itself to Your Honor, the Police Commissioner and the members of the police force.

"1. The Boston Policeman's Union should not affiliate or be connected with any labor organization, but should retain its independence and maintain its organization for the purpose of assisting its members concerning all questions relating to hours and wages and physical conditions of work.

"2. That the present wages, hours and working conditions require material adjustment and should be investigated by a committee of three citizens, who shall forthwith be selected by the concurrent action of the Mayor, the Commissioner and the policemen's union and their conclusions communicated to the Mayor and the Police Commissioner, and that thereafter all questions arising relating to hours and wages and physical condition of work, which the union desires to bring before the Commissioner shall be taken up with the Police Commissioner by the duly accredited officers and committees of the Policemen's Union, and should any difference arise thereto which cannot be adjusted, it shall be submitted to three citizens, selected by agreement between the Mayor, the Police Commissioner and the Boston Policemen's Union. The conclusion of the three citizens, thus selected, shall be communicated to the Mayor and Police Commissioner and to the citizens of Boston by publication. The provisions of this section shall not apply to questions of discipline."

It also provided that policemen should not be discriminated against because of membership or nonmembership in the union.

Peters approved the plan immediately, and a copy of it was sent to Curtis, who, the report states, made no response to its request for "consideration, criticism and suggestions." On the following day (Sunday, Sept. 7) Mayor Peters sent the plan with a letter to the home of Mr. Curtis and, no answer being received, the plan was given to the press Sunday night.

Plan Indorsed by Press.

On Monday, the report proceeds to say, the plan was indorsed by all the morning and all but one evening paper (the Transcript), "as thoroughly upholding the basic principle of the surrender of the American Federation of Labor charter, and yet providing a method affording the patrolmen a reasonable prospect that their grievances would receive consideration.

"The committee," the report continues, "was clearly of the opinion that the plan was on the point of being approved by the Commissioner, and that it would be approved at a general meeting of the men.

"Such a meeting could and probably would have been held on Monday afternoon, Sept. 8, but instead of considering your committee's plan on Monday afternon the men, as the result f the Commissioner's finding of that morning (suspending the 19 men following his refusal to consider the plan), thereupon entered upon the business of taking a strike vote."

While this strike vote was being taken, Mayor Peters, according to the report of the committee, appealed to Gov. Coolidge for aid in securing approval of the committee's plan.

"The solution of the problem presented by my committee," he wrote, "it seems to me is a basis for a satisfactory soluton of the situation.

"I have been trying and still am trying to get in touch with you on the telephone this afternoon as I would like to go over the matter with you personally and I am now sending this information to you at the State House in order that it may be laid before you at the earliest possible moment.

"I am now presenting it to you with my strong opinion that it offers a basis of solution. I hope that you can take steps to assist in the solution suggested and I am glad myself to co-operate in any way possible."

Coolidge Declines to Act.

Gov. Coolidge, under date of Sept. 9, the day the strike was to begin, replied to this, declining the Mayor's request for assistance.

"There is," the Governor wrote, "no authority in the office of the Governor for interference in the making of orders by the Police Commissioner or in the action of the Mayor and the City Council. I am unable to discover any action that I can take."

Proceeding, the report, after praising counsel for the men, Vahey and Feeney, for their efforts to prevent trouble, tells of another effort to enlist Gov. Coolidge's assistance.

"An endeavor had been made by the committee on Sunday, Sept. 7," it says, "to obtain a second conference with the Governor for the purpose of reporting upon the then critical situation and presenting for his consideration the committee's plan, but the Governor was reported to be in the western part of the State and such a conference could not be arranged.

"On Monday, Sept. 8, the Mayor, in co-operation with the committee, again endeavored to obtain a conference with the Governor and such a conference was arranged to take place early in the evening of that day. At that time the Commissioner had taken final action in regard to the (suspended) police officials.

"Your committee, in collaboration with Your Honor, thereupon advised the Governor of the entire situation, presenting its plan and stating its status. Constructive action upon the principles proposed was urged.

Necessity for Troops.

"Your Honor and members of your committee emphasized the prospective seriousness of the situation which would resut from the absence of the great majority of the patrolmen and expressed their strong conviction as to the necessity of troops to the number of not less than 3000 to 4500 to be present in Boston on the following day at 5:45 p. m., either upon the streets or ready in the armories.

"On Tuesday, Sept. 9, Your Honor visited the Commissioner and suggested that the Governor's consideration of the question of protection of the city should be asked. At this conference the same ground was gone over again. The Police Commissioner reiterated his assurances that he had the situation well in hand and had made ample provisions and again stated that he did not need nor want the State Guard. No action was taken. The volunteer police were not called to duty until Wednesday morning."

Broken Window Starts Rioting.

Tuesday at 5:45 o'clock the police, in accordance with the nearly unanimous vote of the 1100 members of the union, quit at 5 o'clock, leaving but 400 patrolmen on duty in the city. A small boy threw a brick through the window of a downtown store and the rioting was on.

The rioting continued through the night, during which several persons were shot, stores in various parts of the city were looted, and property of an estiamted value of $300,000 destroyed. Craps games were operated on the Common and in public squares. Generally the hoodlum element had full swing, checked only by the handful of police on duty and the efforts of citizens.

Immediately public opinion, which, as represented by the press of Boston, had been sympathetic, swung against the policemen. Early Wednesday morning Mayor Peters took the situation out of Commissioner Curtis' hands by exercising his right, in "time of tumult, riot and violent disturbance," to take over control and direction of the police with a "call upon the commissioner to execute all ordtrs promulgated by me for the suppression of such tumult and the restoration of public order."

"On Wednesday morning," says the report after referring to the rioting and disorders of the previous night, and the action of Mayor Peters in calling out all troops in the city and requesting Gov. Coolidge for three additional regiments of infantry, "it was clear that the situation was a military one.

"By Thursday morning order had been generally rtstored in the city."

Coolidge Assumes Charge.

"On Thursday afternoon, Sept. 11, the Governor assumed control of the situation as indicated by his proclamation of that date."

This proclamation, it may be pointed out, marked the first step taken by Gov. Coolidge in the emergency. It read:

"The entire State Guard of Massachusetts has been called out. Under the Constitution the Governor is the Commander-in-Chief thereof by an authority of which he could not, if he chose, divest himself. That command I must and will exercise. Under the law I hereby call upon all the police who have loyally and in a never-to-be-forgotten way, remained on duty to aid me in the performance of my duty in the restoration of order in the city of Boston, and each of such officers is required to act in obedience to such orders as I may hereafter issue or cause to be issued.

"I call upon every citizen to aid me in the maintenance of law and order."

"In justice to the Goevrnor," the report states in its concluding pages, "it should be stated that at all times he assured the members of your committee that whenever called upon for a military force he would procure sufficient men—if they could be secured—to maintain law and order.

"And in further justice to all parties it should be sttaed that the Governor, the Mayor and the Commissioner, in the opinion of the committee, acted at all times upon the highest of motives and with but a single thought, namely, the welfare of the commonwealth and its people."

Gompers' Efforts Futile.

The strike was broken, as the committee states, Thursday morning. On the following day, Friday, Sept. 12, on advice from Samuel Gompers, the men voted to return to work. At the same time Gompers wired Mayor Peters, asking that the men be allowed to return. The answer of Commissioner Curtis was to dismiss the 19 men previously suspended and declare the places of all who struck vacant.

Gompers then wired Gov. Coolidge, who, as stated above, was then in full charge of the situation, asking that the Commissioner's order be suspended and the entire matter left in statu quo, as was done at the suggestion of President Wilson in the matter of the Washington police, whose union was demanding more wages, pending the outcome of the industrial conference he had called for Oct. 6.

"There is," the Governor replied declining the request, "no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time. I shall support the Commissioner in the execution of law and order."

During the controversy Gov. Coolidge at no time questioned the justice of the men's demands.

"Just before he left the State House" the Boston Globe of Sept. 13, "the Governor said that it was perfectly apparent that the Boston policemen ought to have increases of pay and betterment of conditions, but he still clung to the belief that they had no right to go about getting them by joining the American Federation of Labor."

This was undoubtedly a factor in the State election which followed soon after. The police strike was of course an issue between Gov. Coolidge and Richard H. Long, his Democratic opponent. Gov. Coolidge was re-elected by 125,000 votes.

Police Reforms Put in Force.

Better wages and conditions began to be received by Boston policemen before Boston had become used to militia men policing the streets. Within three weeks, the minimum wage was raised to $1400, the previous maximum attained after five years of service, and maximum, which had been $1600 for five year men, placed at $1800.

The cleaning up of dirty dormitories began at once and steps for the erection of new buildings, still under way, began almost immediately, these plans, among other things, providing for a new Headquarters to replace the ancient shacks atop Pemberton Hill at a cost of $1,000,000.

Uniforms are given the new men and hours have been shortened. Subsequently a system of pay for details has been worked out under which many men earn from $10 to $30 a week, according to the stories told at Headquarters, in addition to their regular salaries.

How many men have passed through the department in the effort to fill permanently the places of the men who struck is an official secret. So also is the number of new men forced to resign or be dismissed. Nor is any data as to the number of men who temporarily filled policemen's shoes who went to jail or State Prison from the force a matter of public record.

Semiofficially, however, it is even now admitted that the force after four years is not what it should be.

Expects Force in 14 Years.

"In another year," a high official told me, "the new men will be available for sergeants and we will get some good jobs and in ten years' time you won't be able to tell we had a strike. We'll have a real force then."

Which is another way of saying it takes fourteen years to build up a police force.

Exact data as to the cost of the strike is not available. State troops remained on duty until Dec. 20, when enough new men were on duty to keep the peace. The charter of the union, however, was not surrendered until nearly a year later.

FUTURE OF LABOR IS DISCUSSED BY SAMUEL GOMPERS

to the antiquated notion of craft unionism. In England the National Union of Railway Men is practically an industrial union of the railroads, while here 16 crafts nullify each other's efforts; of course, the six shopmen lost their strike with the 16 other railroad unions on the job. In fact, in England plans are now being discussed to bring all the national unions together and to develop the whole labor movement into one gigantic fighting unit. But here Mr. Gompers spends his time knocking class-conscious labor in the meeting of the National Civic Federation.

"The main reason for this moral spinelessness of our labor movement is that its militant element has indulged in the fatal policy of seceding from the American Federation of Labor and the big railroad brotherhoods in disgust, thus deserting the masses of the workers to their reactionary leadership. Debs' American Railway Union, the Socialist Labor Party, the regular Socialist Party, the I. W. W., the Western Federation of Miners and many other such separatist organizations were wrecked because they lacked the sustenance of the great masses of the workers.

"If the American labor movement today is in the grip of a reactionary oligarchy, totally incapable of progress, it is this spirit of dual unionism by the progressive leaders which is chiefly to blame. But now the Trade Union Educational League is organizing these Progressives within the union for the effective application of their boundless energy and clear-cut programs. It is assisting these Progressives in the performance of their natural functions as the brains and backbone of the organized working masses. It is exactly the same movement through which the militants in other countries have transformed the old-fashioned trade unions into fighting organizations, capable of waging successful warfare against capital.

"To this end the Trade Union Educational League is working to revamp from top to bottom the theories, the tactics, the structure and the leadership of American labor. The workers must either close up their ranks or perish. The multitude of fratricidal crafts must be amalgamated into a series of industrial unions—one each for the metal trades, the railroad trades, the cloth trades, and so on down the line."

On a recent trip through our basic labor centers the writer found that Foster's propaganda had been more effective than might be expected. Though we are still far from a "workers' republic," there is no doubt that he is accelerating the concerted movement in American labor. But he may find that his recent open alliance with the Communists at the Michigan trials and then at the Chicago convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will drive him so far to the left of the American workers that he will have maneuvered himself into another secession movement.

For, right or wrong, the American worker is against a "workers' republic." Again Mr. Gompers appreciates it. He feels that Foster's Communism is gradually nullifying Foster's work. And Mr. Gompers is still a good reader of the writings on the wall.

GREAT LOSS IN U. S. BY CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY

covered. A man cashes a bogus check. He threatens to have the crook arrested. When he gets his money back he drops the case. He gains nothing by having a man arrested. It costs the city or State money to feed the criminal. It takes time to go to court, and court delays are legion. But isn't this attitude just a little bit anti-social?

A certain chief of detectives in a Western city has a sign over his door which reads:

"We charge 10 per cent for collections."

"The people of this city think we are running a collection agency," he said to me recently.

"A man's automobile is stolen. He sees the police and asks for his car. The police obtain both the car and the crook. The owner of the car takes his machine and forgets the crook. He hasn't time to go to court. That very attitude is what makes the police throughout the United States so impatient with forgery and auto theft cases. There is a definite obligation resting upon the individual citizen to assist the police and prosecuting attorneys to obtain convictions."

Jail as Deterrent.

Actual imprisonment to date is the best deterring influence that has ever been exerted upon the criminally inclined. In the years to come better methods of punishment no doubt will be discovered, but to date actual confinement is the best method known.

What should the American people do about the increase of crimes against property? Two actions stand out as imperative if crimes are to be checked.

The abuse of the indeterminate sentence and of the pardon and parole power must be ended. Many a time the police of New York have arrested crooks who were out on bail or were on parole.

The bail evil must be banished. There are innumerable instances when bail is entirely just, but there are others when bail means nothing more than escaping trial by the payment of a large sum of money.

Apathy toward the whole subject of property crimes is probably the most serious fact that demands public attention today. When a person reads about $100,000,000 loss here and another $100,000,000 loss there the figures are so large they become intangible. The man on the street must be made to see this picture in terms and colors which he can comprehend. Then possibly he will be aroused to do something.

by which time most of the strikers had become settled in other vocations.

A most unusual feature of the strike was the appointment by the Chamber of Commerce of a committee to assist the men who lost their jobs because of striking, the first instance on record where such a body felt impelled to do anything for strikers.

400 CASES OF DEVIL'S GRIPPE ARE REPORTED IN VIRGINIA

State Health Commissioner Calls on Doctors to Report Characteristics of Disease.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 18.—Physicians in localities in the eastern section of the state affected by the outbreak of "devil's grippe" were urged to call special meetings to formulate plans to combat the malady in letters sent out today by Dr. Enion G. Williams, State Health Commissioner. Dr. Williams requested that all cases of "devil's grippe" be reported to the State Health Department and that the physicians send in their observations on the origin and other characteristics of the malady.

More than 400 cases of the disease have been reported to the State Health Department.

Reports Robbery in His Office.

W. S. Johnson of 4317 Lindell boulevard, a real estate dealer, with an office at 4019½ Olive street, upstairs, reported to a policeman that as he was entering a lower hall to reach his office, about 2:30 p. m. yesterday, two men met him and said they wanted to talk real estate; that when they entred his office one of the men drew a revolver and demanded, "Where's that big diamond you wear?" Johnson replied he did not have it, whereup, he said, they tied him hand and foot and gagged him, then took $28 from his pocket and a cameo ring from his finger. He later released himself, he said.

ION TO FALKLAND TUDY HABITS OF WHALES

Colonial Office Looking for er of Research" to Study Aquatic Mammals.

ated Press.

ON, Aug. 18.—Last month al Office advertised for a of research" to take charge ntific expedition that is scheduled to start next spring for the Falkland Islands to study aquatic mammals and their habits. So far not a single suitable application has been received and the committee is still seeking the right man.

The practical purpose of the expedition is to obtain data from which to frame legislation to prevent the disappearance of whales from the oceans of the globe. The scientists will make an intimate study of these animals, endeavoring to learn whether they are polygamous, how long they live, where they spend the winter, and what their annual mileage is.

It seems that the waters off the Falklands are a fashionable summer whaling resort, but in winter the great mammals disappear. Inasmuch as the islands are largely dependent upon the whaling industry, the British Government would like to know where they go.

Scott's historic ship, "Discovery," will carry the expedition, which will be gone two and a half years.

SAYS DRY FORCE IS TOO SMALL TO END VIOLATIONS

Gualdoni, Dismissed as an Enforcement Agent Here, Asserts Field Agents Are Without Adequate Aid.

OUSTED BECAUSE HE DECLINED TRANSFER

Declares Manufacture and Transportation by "Big Fellows" Block Efforts of Officials.

The only way to enforce the Volstead act, so that prohibition will be effective, is to stop manufacture and transportation by the "big fellows," is the opinion of Louis J. Gualdoni, oldest Federal prohibition enforcement agent in point of service in St. Louis, who has been dismissed from the service for insubordination in refusing to accept transfer to Minneapolis.

Gualdoni said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that no organized effort had yet been made to arrest big manufacturers and transporters of whisky and that 90 per cent of the time of enforcement agents was being devoted to small sales. He said very little co-operation was given by the department to field agents whose forces are too small to cope with the numerous "moonshiners," "bootleggers" and owners of "blind tigers."

Gualdoni said he believed illicit whisky was being sold in more places in St. Louis than there were saloons before adoption of the eighteenth amendment.

Besides a number of saloons that now sell whisky by stealth, Gualdoni said that places found to be engaged in violating the Volstead act were certain drug stores, butcher shops, oil filling stations, tailor shops, barber shops and shoe polishing stands.

Many in Bootlegging Trade.

Among the bootleggers, he has found cooks, elevator operators, taxicab starters and chauffeurs, hotel bellboys, Pullman porters, newsboys, teamsters and shoe salesmen, and there is record of stills having been found on farms, in dugouts, homes, warehouses, clay mines, woods, grocery stores, importing houses and tailor shops.

"Not more than 15 enforcement agents have been in the St. Louis territory, which includes all of Eastern Missouri, at one time," Gualdoni said, "and these few men could not possibly cope with the actual violations of the Volstead act."

Gualdoni's salary was $1800 a year, plus a bonus of $240, the maximum received, by enforcement agents, and he declined the transfer to Minneapolis on the ground that he could not support himself there, and his family in St. Louis on that income. When offered the transfer he resigned and was dismissed before his resignation became effective. He had previously declined transfers to three other cities for the same reason.

Saloon Now More Profitable.

Gualdoni said the saloon business as a profitable venture was more attractive than before prohibition, adding that saloon properties, minus stocks and fixtures, now bring three to four times what well-stocked and equipped barrooms formerly sold for.

Some saloonkeepers and bartenders, who have been arrested as many as 10 times, continue to operate, he said.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE

Man Claiming St. Louis as Home Tried in New Mexico.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HILLSBORO, N. Mex., Aug. 18.—Perley Langdell, who said his home was in St. Louis, was acquitted here yesterday of a charge of murdering his partner in the mining business, William D. Hudson. The jury deliberated an hour and 45 minutes. Hudson's body was found April 19, 1922, at the bottom of a cliff near here. Langdell, on the witness stand, declared that Hudson had fallen accidentally, and reviewed his life of 50 years in mining camps, saying he had never been in trouble before.

He and Hudson were walking over some of their mining claims, Langdell said, and Hudson slipped down a steep cliff. A hole resembling a bullet wound was found in Hudson's head, but physicians testified they did not know what caused it. Arnold Kinsey of Hillsboro testified that Langdell offered him $5000 to swear that he saw Hudson's fall, but Langdell testified that this was not so.

Money of No Value

"Life had no pleasures for me. Although I had plenty of money it was of no value, as my stomach almost constantly distressed me. I lost faith in all doctors and medicine. Talking with my druggist about my case he advised me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I am now enjoying life again." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Getting Away From the Clock

By One of America's Best Known Psychologists

WE have traveled a long way on the road that leads toward the annihilation of distance, but we are still in the iron grip of schedules, time-tables and clocks.

We can cross the continent in a train; we can sail the seas in a ship, but we can only do it with the crowd, in the crowd's way and at the crowd's time. Not the least of the luxuries of the automobile is the escape from the crowd and to get away from the crowd is to break the tyranny of the time-table, defy the inevitability of the clock and make one's own schedule.

The American farmer is no longer isolated. When a horse was the best he could do he felt helplessly out of touch with the great centers of barter and exchange. He felt socially shut out from many community privileges. The automobile changed all that for the farmer.

The next to be emancipated is the middle class man or woman who for years has yearned for freedom from the crowd. They want to escape the very thing the farmer wants to contact.

The sunlit paths of Spring or Summer or the country roads of Autumn lead to life, larger, fuller and higher life. Flowers were not meant to blush unseen or "waste their sweetness on the desert air," but humanity got the city habit of living in stacks, stacks of humans, piled up in stone or brick boxes.

A few generations hence they will marvel at our stupidity in tolerating crowded street cars and the thousand and one unnecessary noises. They will be astounded that in a scientific age we continue to be unscientific — that with automobiles within the reach of all, so many of us remained gagged, bound and willing slaves of the schedule, the time-table and the clock.

Trains are necessary, thousands would never go unless they were told when. We hop on street cars and dart in and out of the traffic like sparrows, the crowded streets produce the sparrow mind. But to those amenable to reason the idea of the ownership of a car, as an escape from the lock-step of mass locomotion—is a seed thought that will fructify and bear fruit.

Fall is on the way—Fall is Automobile time. Here is a thought for you who look longingly at others who drive past in their automobiles—a thought that you can make a reality if you will only stop and investigate the possibilities of car ownership.

New cars of reliable makes at moderate prices are available if the higher-priced models seem inaccessible. It is not so much the kind of car—if it's a good one—but the fact that you own a car, that counts in added enjoyment to yourself and your family.

Get a car. Get away from the clock. Read the automobile advertisements in today's issue. Added interest in life, enlarged independence, increased health and happiness are the rightful rewards which follow car ownership.

BOOKS ON WAR COLLECTED

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 18. —Americans are writing about the war and peace to such an extent that an "American room" will be established when the French war library and museum are moved into permanent quarters at the Chateau de Vincennes next year. There already are 8000 volumes by Americans, and the museum boasts that it has one of the finest collections of American war posters.

German writers, too, have been busy writing about the wear. Their works comprise 25,000 volumes. France comes next, not because the French have written more than others but because it is easier for the library to get hold of French works.

JURY DISAGREES IN CASE OF FORMER SIKESTON BANK CASHIER

Charles E. Dover Was Charged With Making False Entry in Bank's Accounts.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Aug. 18.—A jury in Circuit Court at Benton, Mo., was discharged today after failing to reach a verdict in the case of Charles E. Dover, formerly cashier of the closed Citizens Bank of Sikeston.

The jury received the case Friday evening after a trial that lasted less than four hours, and is said to have stood 7 to 5 for acquittal.

Dover was charged with making a false entry in the bank's accounts. Six other indictments, three of which charge receiving deposits while the bank was insolvent, remain to be disposed of.

Dover admitted falsifying the records of the bank to cover up a loss of approximately $100,000 sustained through honoring drafts of the Levi Cook Grain Co.

U. R. Conductor Disappears.

The police have been asked to search for M. J. Johannesmann, 23 years old, a United Railways conductor, who disappeared Thursday afternoon. He was last seen at the home of a relative at 4412 North Twenty-first street. He had conductor's badge No. 1073, wore a Knights of Columbus ring, and was dressed in a light suit, straw hat and black shoes. He has light hair and wears glasses. His father, Harry Johannesmann, of O'Fallon, Mo., who is temporarily at the North Twenty-first street address, offers a reward for information of his whereabouts.

Bonus Election in County Soon.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 18.—Gov. Hyde today received a letter from the St. Louis County Board of Election Commissioners stating that the special election to vote $4,600,000 additional soldier bonus bonds to pay the remaining 25,500 bonus claims could be held about Oct. 30 or Nov. 6. The election was postponed after having been set for July 10 when it was found that the new registration law of St. Louis County made it impossible to hold the election at that time. The Governor will have further communication with the St. Louis County board.

WHAT TO EAT TO PUT IRON IN YOUR BLOOD AND MAKE YOU STRONG

PHYSICIAN TELLS HOW IRON-CONTAINING VEGETABLES SUCH AS LENTILS, SPINACH, APPLES, ETC., WHEN REGULARLY TAKEN WITH ORGANIC IRON, BUILD GREAT STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE.

"At their own doors—in the very gardens of those who are weak, nervous and ailing all the while is one of the most valuable tonics and strength-builders known to medical science," said Dr. Emile Sauer, well-known New England physician, when consulted recently.

Dr. Sauer further said:—"If your daily diet contains an abundant amount of iron you are giving your body the red blood food it craves. But if your blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery you cannot expect to be strong and well. On the contrary, your nerves become weakened and you become irritable, fussy and easily upset. In such cases, what you need is iron—organic iron to remove the cause of your trouble, and the moment organic iron is supplied it is often wonderful how quickly your multitude of symptoms will disappear and how strong and vigorous you will become." But be careful to distinguish between ordinary metallic iron which people usually take and true organic iron. Metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings, while organic iron is a true red blood food, like the iron in your blood itself and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. In fact, if you will eat a pint or two of spinach, half a pint of lentils and three or four baked apples each day you will probably not need to take any other form of organic iron; but most people prefer to eat a smaller quantity of iron-containing vegetables and take organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, with them. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. To prove to yourself what Nuxated Iron can do for you, get your doctor to take a specimen of your blood and make a "blood count" of your red blood corpuscles; then take Nuxated Iron for a month and have a new "blood count" made and see how your red blood corpuscles have increased and how much stronger and better you feel; see how the color has come back to your cheeks, how steady and strong your nerves have become. At all druggists.

UPWARD RANGE TO STOCKS; FRENCH EXCHANGE WEAK

Rate on Paris Reaches New Low for All Times Then Rebounds Some—Strength of Cotton a Feature of Week.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Further increases in confidence and steady markets characterized the past week. The turn to a more optimistic view of things, which lately has become evident, was materially accentuated. Bear traders in securities and commodities took note of this feeling and their experiments apparently convinced them that the technical position had become much stronger. Weakness in oil stocks in response to fresh cuts in gasoline prices, and tentative attempts at short selling attracted no liquidation in the list as a whole. On the other hand, attempts to cover short contracts revealed a scanty supply of stocks and resulted in rather sharp advances. The effect of these things was to confirm previous impressions that the markets were thoroughly liquidated at the turn of the half year and that they became, in fact, oversold. Hopes that the present rally may continue were based partly on the growing confidence in fall business and partly on the idea that professional speculators had become convinced that for the time being at least, the line of least resistance is upward.

Advance in Cotton.

"Firmness in certain of the important commodity markets certainly has contributed to the better feeling. Cotton has held or added to its gains and a continuation of the long spell of hot, dry weather in the Southwest, coming at a time when the crop is at a critical stage, has led the trade to believe that a crop of no more than 11,500,000 bales is a distinct possibility and that a 12,000,000-bale crop is wholly unlikely. Meanwhile the renewed strength in cotton prices has done much to restore confidence in values in the cotton cloth market, a circumstance which is favorable to a resumption of the buying which was so sharply curtailed a few months ago. Wheat prices also have been firm at a level 5 or 6 cents above the recent low. The rally in this commodity has had a convincing basis, furthermore, in the lowered estimate of the Canadian crop and in later reports of additional crop damage in that region. Maintenance of these better prices for grain will be important not only as increasing purchasing power in the agricultural district, but as tending to diminish agricultural unrest and the possibility of radical pro-farmer legislation.

"Industrial news also has contributed to a more cheerful view. The oil situation admittedly is bad, but has been recognized to be so for months and probably now is at its worst. On the other hand, a distinctly encouraging development is the interruption of the decline in the price of pig iron. This interruption has coincided, furthermore, with a stiffening in the prices of coal, coke and scrap iron, and has been attended by the more active buying which usually comes with a turn in this market. It is still too early to tell whether such a turn actually has come, but the prospects are favorable. Meanwhile, the crucial factor in determining whether the present rally in security prices will be maintained is the decision as to whether existing confidence in the general situation will grow sufficiently during the next few weeks to lead to a general resumption of forward buying.

French Franc at New Low.

"A decline in French francs to a new low for all time took place. In such a decline speculation always plays a part, and although London anticipates severe depreciation of both French and Belgian francs and of Italian lire in case the Ruhr impasse is prolonged indefinitely, there is more than a chance that the decline will be overdone. Meanwhile the prospects for a settlement remain essentially where they were before publication of the latest allied notes.

"More cheerful sentiment was in evidence during today's short session, engendered doubtless by signs indicating fair industrial activity during the autumn and the steady advance in the market itself during the past four days. At the same time the volume of trading was noticeably in excess of that of recent summer Saturdays. Following a firm opening some profit taking appeared in those speculative issues which have enjoyed the most pronounced rise of late, but this was readily absorbed and the firmness of the list on the whole suggested that something in addition to short covering was a market factor. A certain amount of new buying was undoubtedly there. Bonds meanwhile were dull but held their ground.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet with little business transacted in any of the usually active currencies except sterling. The quotation for sterling, however, continued to give ground moderately, although there were no special developments. A fair amount of commercial bills were in the market. Selling at $4.55¾ the price was ¼ lower. French francs were steady around 5.51¾ cents. Practically no attention was paid to the German mark. Spanish pesetas continued flat.

"Overnight reports of rains in certain parts of Texas and threatening weather for the week end, partially breaking a long drouth, resulted in a rush to sell cotton, mostly for profit taking, and the active futures sagged about 50 points. The market, although firm throughout the week, has been nervously watching the weather reports and the rather sharp reaction was not unexpected. Publication of the Census Bureau's figures on cotton consumption during July was without effect on the market. Consumption of 461,575 bales shows a falling off of 80,591 from the previous month, which was practically the same as the decrease between May and June. The figures were about 20,000 bales in excess of the minimum estimates of private observers, but were practically identical with more conservative opinion.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House discloses a decrease in excess reserve of nearly $8,000,000. Loans and discounts decreased $76,258,000 and demand deposits fell $53,638,000. These changes merely reflect the continuation of the late summer business inactivity.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, Aug. 18.—The week-end found prices in the wool market about the same as they were a week ago. Mill buyers during this week had been making careful inquiry into supplies, asking about many grades of wool. And though the buying was slow, dealers saw in this interest sign that active trading soon will begin.

COAL STOCKS SHOW STRENGTH ON NEW YORK CURB

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—For the first hour this morning business on the Curb Exchange was very quiet. But toward the close there were more signs of reviving interest.

People interested in the oil shares appear content to await further developments over the week end before renewing operations. Standard of Indiana remained the leader however, getting up another half point or so.

Swift International held its recent gain. The improvement in this stock was believed to be in sympathy with higher prices for Armour and Co., following the recent declaration of the preferred dividends of the latter.

Among the motor stocks, Cleveland and Durant of Delaware were up fractionally.

Coal stocks were generally strong on the more hopeful outlook for settlement of the coal strike. Lehigh Valley Coal sales at 78½ was up 1½ points and Reading rights were higher.

Delores features the mining group, losing another 25 points.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—European wheat crops are larger than last year, but potato production is smaller, according to latest estimates of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, as received here by the Department of Agriculture.

Wheat forecasts are: Rumania, 106,556,000 bushels, or 29 per cent more than last year; Netherlands, 5,339,000 bushels, or slightly larger than last year; Portugal, 12,970,000 bushels, 32 per cent larger.

Potato forecasts are: Netherlands, 81,938,000 bushels, or 34 per cent less than last year; Belgium, 99,942,000 bushels, or 30 per cent less.

Oats forecasts are: Rumania, 68,894,000 bushels, or 20 per cent less than last year; Belgium, 36,376,000 bushels, or about 600,000 bushels more; Netherlands 24,904,000 bushels, or 5,900,000 bushels more.

Rye forecasts are: Portugal, 3,354,000 bushels, or more than double last year's crop; Latvia, 11,810,000 bushels, or 59 per cent more; Netherlands, 25,404,000 bushels, or almost double last year's figure.

Barley forecasts are: Rumania 82,673,000 bushels, a decrease of 2.5 per cent; Netherlands, 8,198,000 bushels, an increase of 5,300,000 bushels.

An estimated corn crop in Bulgaria of 22,007,000 bushels, is 11 per cent under last year's crop.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted foreign exchange review today, says:

"Dealings during the past week in the foreign exchange market were the dullest in quite a while. Holidays abroad, unsettled conditions in Europe, and the many conflicting reports and cables all tended to curtail operations.

"Despite this general slackening of business, several new low records were established. With reference to the Ruhr and reparations issues, opinions are not heard as frequently as heretofore regarding an early settlement of these perplexing questions. However, there are a few who continue to express optimism. One explanation of the movements of exchanges in favor of the dollar was found in the July foreign trade figures of the United States. Exports exceeded imports by over $26,000,000. Nevertheless the balance for the first seven months of this year show an adverse trade balance of $1,000,000,000. Foreign bank statements generally were better. Of course, this does not include the Bank of Germany, which continues to show enormous increases in note circulation; this time the statement shows over eighteen trillion marks' increase, as compared with the previous week. Marks, naturally, reflecting this, dropped down to .24 cents per million. Berlin later recovered to .27 cents per million.

"French exchange attracted the greatest amount of interest and sold at a new low record of 5.42c. Speculative operations were responsible. Later short covering and orders which were said to be for account of French interest shot the rate back to 5.55½c. Belgians early were strong and sold as high as 4.57½c following reports of negotiations for a loan with Paris to check the downward swing of the exchange. Later Antwerp was reactionary and dropped back to 4.40c. Sterling held fairly steady the greater portion of the week, but near the end, on lack of inquiry and moderate offerings of commercial bills, fell to $4.55⅛, moving back later to $4.56½.

"Spanish bills sold at a new low for the year at .1350. Spanish recovered at .1360, a net loss for the week of 8 points. Rupee at 34.45c, Argentine at 32.65c, Brazil at .0995, and Uruguay at 73.50c, were other markets which were offered at new low levels.

"Silver situation was an adverse factor in the rupee exchange. Unfavorable trade conditions helped the decline in the Argentine. In Uruguay internal difficulties were a factor. Canadian funds were steady and unchanged at 2¼ per cent discount.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet Saturday with little business transacted in any of the usually active currencies except sterling. The quotation for sterling, however, continued to give ground moderately, although there were no special developments. A fair amount of commercial bills were in the market. Selling at $4.55¾ the price was ¼ lower. French francs were steady around 5.51¾ cents. Practically no attention was paid to the German mark. Spanish pesetas continued flat.

NANCIAL LONDON AITS ON EFFECT OF BALDWIN NOTE

ediate Course of Markets Suggests Comparative Ease in Money and Stagnation in Securities—Fall in Franc.

cial Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Arthur W. Kid- editor of Bankers' Magazine and ancial editor of the London Morn- Post, in review today says:

"The next few weeks probably will phasize rather than diminish the portance and significance of the itish note. Optimists maintain that dependent action by Baldwin, if cessary, will gradually evolve a sitive policy designed to restore ropean peace and produce reparation payments from Germany, as contrasted with the French negative re- from the Ruhr experiment. optimists believe that as this sitive policy develops practical inion in France will incline towards Britain and the result will be break of the present deadlock. The simists, however, maintain that h a policy will smash the en- nte.

"Matters are made worse by a less confusion of ideas concerning real conditions in Germany. It is easingly believed that while the ddle class and rentiers of Germany ctically have been obliterated by sting chaos, German industrial gnates, land owners and even mers have accumulated colossal tunes and that the wealth of Germany never was greater or in fewer hands. This concentration of alth is regarded as twofold danger in that it might lead to revolution in Germany, or if that were oided and a reparations settlement anged it might increase Germany's power as an industrial competitor with the entire world.

"The immediate course of the market here suggests comparative ease money, stagnation in securities, dull trade, though the conclusion of the dockers' strike may ably give a slightly more favorable appearance to our trade returns. resumption of business after holidays, however, everything depend on the Ruhr crisis, ch, if prolonged to that time, occasion not only political rms but grave anxieties concerning French finances. Since Poincare into office the franc has fallen 52 to 82 to the pound sterling."

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The stock rket wound up the week with another exhibition of rising prices and anding activity. The main development as compared with preceding was that the upward movement was more general. It took in rails, as well as the industrials, extended to stocks recently inactive like the tobaccos and some of the members of the fertilizer and al group.

The principal advance occurred, however, in the accustomed leaders among the motor, equipment, steel can stocks. Here some of the pulse undoubtedly came from defeated speculators for the decline. advance, however, seemed something more than the retreat of short interest and probably included new buying.

There was active short covering the northwestern railway stocks. more cheerful view taken overnight regarding the anthracite coal conference showed itself in active buying of Reading, which carried stock across 74 and Erie first preferred, which made a new high. Union Pacific jumped up sharply, completing a recovery of 7 points its recent low. Other rails generally strong, but not as prominent as the industrials.

The market closed strong and well to the best prices of the day.

The Bond Market.

Continued firmness in high-grade securities and some improvement in certain of the speculative rails were features of today's bond market. The week has been marked by steady absorption of the "legal" rails of the prime industrials. In cases there has been a recession from the high quotations recorded the previous week as in the of the Atchison General 4s and Union Pacific first 4s but buying centered on other issues of comparable quality. It must not be expected that there will be any great advance in price for bonds selling a 4½ to 5 per cent basis but that investors are willing to take securities at this level is significant of much better feeling.

One reason why more confidence expressed in the future of the market is the money situation. far as some can see now the look is for easy money, and some go so far as to predict a lower of interest rates. The gold supply is steadily increasing, a condition which must ultimately have its effect. Other things being equal, lower charge for money means higher price for bonds.

Same observations apply to Liberty bonds. The market for United States Government loans has been steady this week, but quotations have shown only a slight gain. The most interesting group is the foreign one. As was the case a week ago foreign bonds have shown remarkable resistance to alarming reports about European affairs. Those principally affected are of course the French and Belgian. Quotations of both Powers declined sharply in midweek when

As was the case a k ago foreign bonds have shown rkable resistance to alarming about European affairs. The principally affected are ob the French and Belgian. Ob s of both Powers declined sharply in midweek when the situation abroad seemed most critical, but rallied later and at the close of the week showed only fractional changes.

At no time was the weakness in the bonds anywhere near as acute as in the exchanges. It is significant also of a change in the public attitude that the new $20,000,000 Government of Norway 6 per cent bonds offered Thursday should have been so readily taken. Another piece of new foreign financing is expected shortly on behalf of the Argentine Government. That country has an issue of $50,000,000 of 7 per cent notes maturing on Oct. 1, next, which must be refunded and several American syndicates are reported bidding for the business.

The total of the week's financing was moderately large, coming to $42,041,000. State and municipal and utility obligations were about equally divided, with $1,000,000 in Seneca Copper 7 per cent bonds also.

Among the strong issues of the week were the Jugo Slav 8s which gained 4⅛ points. No other foreign bond showed so sharp a rally. Among the speculative rails there was consistent strength in the Erie issues while the New Haven bonds held their own very well. The Franc 7s even gained on the week.

CHANGES ARE SMALL ON GRAIN EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 18.—Wheat closed slightly easier, with corn hardly changed, at the week-end session. Favorable weather for threshing in the Central West was reported, and with export demand slow, excited bearish influence on the market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday good dry soft wheat was readily taken at 1c decline. Damp and sprouted No. 3s were in slow demand and 2c off. Some No. 3 of this class was offered late in day at 97c. No. 4 red was 1c to 3c off. Hard wheat was ½c to 1½c off on the ordinary kinds with mixed wheats as much as 2c lower. Limited milling and fair accumulative demand. Oklahoma dark wheats were steady. No. 1 hard 70 per cent dark sold at $1.17. Corn ruled steady to ½c lower, white showing the loss. Yellow corn was readily taken, but even the price recession did not move all of white. Local industries and shippers bought. In the oats market No. 2 white was steady, but No. 3s and No. 4s were ½c to 1½c lower and not all taken.

The early range of values was not wide. Liverpool wheat closed ⅜d to ⅝d higher. This, with the tone of stock market, helped sentiment.

September wheat opened at $1.00¼, December wheat $1.03⅜, May wheat $1.08⅛, September corn, 79⅝c, December corn 63⅝c, May corn 65¼c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 533 cars of wheat, compared with 449 a week ago and 435 last year, Minneapolis receiving 355 cars, Duluth 58 and Winnipeg 120.

Local wheat receipts, which were 175,861 bushels, compared with 318,229 a week ago and 205,319 last year, included 133 cars local and 12 through; corn receipts, which were 91,000 bushels, compared with 135,200 a week ago and 117,000 last year, included 58 cars local and 12 through; oats receipts, which were 112,000 bushels, compared with 260,000 a week ago and 96,000 last year, included 38 cars local and 18 through; hay receipts were 3 cars local and 7 through. Last week two days.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 3,090,967 bushels of wheat, 49,729 bushels of corn, 46,642 bushels of oats.

Grain stocks comprised 251,896 bushels of No. 1 red winter wheat, 623,919 bushels of No. 2 red winter wheat, 224,347 bushels of No. 1 hard winter wheat, 223,794 bushels of No. 2 hard winter wheat, 22,088 bushels of No. 2 corn, 2624 bushels of No. 2 yellow corn, 10,174 bushels of No. 2 white corn, 53,587 bushels of No. 2 white oats, 15,535 bushels of No. 3 white oats, 4457 bushels of No. 2 rye, 14,190 bushels of kaffir corn.

Corn receipts were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 644,000 bushels. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 1,185,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago, being 1,047,000 bushels. Corn shipments were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 587,000 bushels. Oats shipments weer heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago, being 755,000 bushels.

WHEAT FUTURES CLOSE LOWER AFTER AN EARLY UPTURN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—There was not a great deal of interest exhibited in the wheat market today. Prices started higher on short covering because of the strength in Liverpool cables but as soon as the buying was over prices eased, halting for a time around the previous closing level and then easing further in the last hour on selling attributed to local longs. There was little in the news of the day to excite the trade. The International Institute of Agriculture said the increas ein European wheat yields are offset by th ereduction in the potato crop. The Canadian shipping situation it was said is expected to be solved by shipping 50,000,000 bushels all rail to Duluth and then loading it into American bottoms for shipment east. Cash wheat premiums were unchanged. Shipping demand was good. Export demand was disappointing in view of the higher cables. Local shippers sold 250,000 bushels of wheat to exporters. Market closed ⅛@⅝c lower, September 99½@⅜; December 39¼; May 41⅛.

Corn was firm. There was good demand for September and the nearby months held well. Deferred futures were influenced by the action of the wheat market. Cash corn premiums were unchanged. Shipping demand was good. Receipts were smaller. Market closed ⅛@⅝c higher, September 79⅝@⅛; December 63½@⅝; May 65⅛@¼.

Oats were easier. Feature was the buying of September by cash houses early. Local selling caused the late reaction. Market closed ⅛@⅝c lower. September 37¼; December 39¼; May 47⅛.

Trade in provisions was confined to lard. Prices were a shade firmer on scattered buying. Lard closed unchanged to 7½ higher.

By the Associated Press.

Government figures indicating probable sharp curtailment of wheat seeding in the United States had much to do this week with bringing about higher prices in the wheat market during the past week.

Bullish effects of the weekly report indicating 15.5 per cent reduction in domestic winter wheat acreage this fall were evident both before and after the report was issued and were made more emphatic by estimates that the Canadian yield of wheat this season would be greatly diminished in comparison with early predictions. Besides, word was received that the wheat production of India for 1923 was expected to be 32,000,000 bu less than the amount which heretofore had been looked for.

Prospects, however, that notwithstanding 35c duty some likelihood of wheat imports from Canada was looming into view counted at times as a noticeable bearish influence in the market here.

Export demand was at a low ebb and in some cases domestic wheat which had been purchased for Europe was being sold back in this country.

Favorable crop reports eased the market for deferred deliveries of corn, but shorts in the September delivery were plainly anxious about obtaining immediate supplies.

Wet weather gave firmness to oats.

Provisions were lifted by somewhat improved export business and by upturns in the value of hogs.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Prices continued to advance on all four of the butter markets during the week ending Aug. 16. Demand, which had fallen off, was resumed and surplus stocks of fresh butter were reduced, making necessary the filling of shortage in fresh butter with storage stock. Prices on the markets ranged from 8½c to 9½c above last year's level.

During the first half of August storage holdings increased less than a quarter of a million pounds, against an increase of 4,000,000 pounds during the corresponding period of 1922. Little increase in production was indicated for the near future, although better pasturage conditions exist than last year when a drouth caused a decline in production about this time.

Quality of butter made last week during cooler weather showed improvement, but the proportionate of fancy butter continued very small and insufficient for trade requirements. Imports amounting to only 250 casks of unsalted Holland butter were reported during the week, although 1900 boxes of Argentine and some Holland was said to be en route.

Range in wholesale prices during the period, Aug. 11-16, for 92 score butter was as follows:

Chicago 1c higher, at 43c; New York ½c higher, at 44c; Boston, 1c higher, at 44½c, and Philadelphia, ½c higher, at 45c.

HOGS AND LAMBS LEAD LIVESTOCK RISE

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	32,916	34,869	30,901
Hogs	75,195	76,493	50,532
Sheep	10,702	14,134	14,379
Horses and Mules	1,376	1,411	1,681
Totals	120,189	126,907	103,493

Under moderate receipts and a healthy demand, livestock prices ranged upward at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week. The most pronounced gain was in hogs and lambs. Receipts of cattle and calves for the six-day period figured 32,916 head, as against 34,869 the previous week. The offering included a right good representation of corn-fed steers and more than 200 cars of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas grass steers. Best native steers ruled up 25c to 50c, while plain natives and Westerns closed little better than steady for the period. Stocker and feeder steers, in right good request, moved up in price 15c to 25c. A new top for the year was established Tuesday by the sale of four cars of 1259-lb. Shelby County, Mo., Hereford steers at $12.40 per cwt. Yearling steers topped in this class at $11.50. The bulk of all native beef steers sold in a spread of $9.50 to $11.50. Some common to medium natives were noted at $7.50 to $9, and the range offerings cashed in a practical range of $4.25 to $8.25. Light yearlings of all kinds advanced 25c. Best sold from $9 to $10.75, followed by grass stuff at $4 to $7 principall. Butcher cows finished on a strong basis, the bulk late selling at $4.25 to $6.10 and top making $7. Canner and cutter cows averaged 50c higher on the close, cutters commanding $2.50 to $3.50 and canners $2@2.40. Bologna bulls steady up to Friday, when a quarter improvement was annexed. Closing prices were at $3.50 to $5. Veal calves closed for the period right at $1.75 higher, top Friday $11.25. The commoner stuff failed to show any great improvement.

Hog Receipts Moderate.

Receipts of hogs at the St. Louis National Stock Yards for the week just ended show a moderate total of 75,195 head, compared with a run of 76,493 hogs for a like period the preceding week and an offering of 56,532 for the corresponding week a year ago. With plenty of orders here buyers cleaned up the week's supply very well and competition enabled salesmen to force a considerable climb in prices compared with the previous week's sales. The week's high sale was $9, hogs reaching this figure for the first time since January of the current year. Heavy hogs show the most advance compared with a week ago, sales on this class looking approximately 90c higher than last Saturday. Hogs from 250 pounds and up at the week's close are clearing at $8.50 to $8.65 largely with the medium weight kinds from 210 to 250 pounds at $8.65 to $8.75 largely, showing the same advance. Light shipping hogs, too, are higher, although the advance on this class is uneven, ranging from 80c to 90c. The advance shown by pigs ranges from 25c to 80c according to the weight of the offerings. Strong weight pigs from 130 to 150 pounds are in the best demand, this class at $8 to $8.65 largely showing 50c to 80c higher than the previous Saturday. Medium weight kinds from 110 to 130 pounds look about 50c higher, while the light pigs from 110 pounds and down are from 25c to 50c higher. Buyers are much opposed to the light kinds and anything under 110 pounds met with slow sale during the week. Rough hogs are unevenly higher, packer sows showing an advance of 15c to 35c over the previous week's close, while stags are generally steady, clearing at $4.75 to $5.25 mostly. The week's close finds the different classes of hogs selling at the following prices: Heavies, 250 pounds and up, $8.50 to $8.65; medium weights, 210 to 250 pounds, $8.65 to $8.75; light shippers from 160 to 200 pounds at $8.75 to $8.85. Strong weight pigs, 130 to 150 pounds, $8 to $8.65, and medium weights, 110 to 130 pounds, $7.50 to $8 with light pigs at $5.75 to $7.50 largely. Sows selling from $6 to $6.35 and stags quotable at $4.75 to $5.25.

Sheep Receipts Fair.

Receipts were only fair last week, the total running around 10,000 head, several thousand less than the number received the previous week or the corresponding week last year. Many of the lambs offered were not as fat as they should have been, which caused the market to be rather draggy, and yet prices were on the advance most of the week. Best lambs the fore part of the week were selling at $12, but $13.25 was reached before the end of the week, showing a gain of $1@1.25. Many good lambs brought $12.50 and upwards, medium grades $11.50 @12.25, poor kinds $10@11 and the culls $6.50@8.50. Towards the end of the week buyers were not sorting the lambs so closely. Fat sheep also made some gain during the week, the advance amounting to around 50c. Mutton sheep went at $5.50@6, good breeding ewes $8.50@9.50, fair ones $7.50 @8.25, choppers and bucks $2.50@3.50 and canners $1@1.50. Sheep of all kinds formed but a small proportion of the receipts.

Horses and Mules.

Under moderate receipts, the commission run approximating 100 horses and 300 mules, the trade in this branch of the market ruled steady to strong for the week. As there were no range sales scheduled, the run was all native. Trade in horses centered largely on the Southern class, of which shapely offerings received the best attention. There was also some interest manifest in good big work horses, well-broke, thick-made chunks and horses for the Spanish trade. In the mule alleys cotton types were the most sought after. Also, some offerings, 14.3 to 15.2, 2, 3 and 4 year olds, were afforded outlet for Spanish shipment.

COTTON CLOSES LOWER ON NEW YORK MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The cotton market was nervous and unsettled this morning. Early declines on reports of showers in the southwest were followed by rallies on the western belt forecast for a renewal of clear weather but the market eased again in the late trading. October sold up from 23.91 to 24.20 and closed at 24.01 with the general market closing barely steady at a net decline of four points on August 1 and of 23 to 39 points on other months.

The market opened easy at a decline of 24 to 39 points on the Texas shower reports. Many traders were inclined to question whether these showers would do more harm than good but the southwestern drought has been the most prominent bullish factor on recent advances and the hope that it was at last to be broken led to a heavy realizing or liquidation for over the week end. December sold off to 23.75 and January to 23.44, making net declines of 44 to 50 points on the general list, and reactions of 85 to 110 points from the recent high figures. Buying on a scale down was encouraged by reports of an improving demand for cotton goods and complaints of continued showers in the eastern belt, however, and the market steadied during the middle of the morning. The western belt forecast indicating that the showers reported today were to be followed by clearing weather over Sunday helped the rally which followed. Some trade buying was also reported, but after selling up to 24.05 for December and 23.67 for January, prices weakened again under renewed realizing. Last prices were about 10 to 19 points off from the best. The mid-morning rally was probably promoted by reports that a prominent Memphis firm estimated the crop as of August 10 at only 10,544,000 bales.

Sales of print cloths in the Fall River market for the week were estimated at about 100,000 pieces or the largest business for some time. The census figures showing domestic consumption of 461,575 bales for July against 458,002 last year attracted no special comment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Cotton—Spot, quiet; middling, 25.40c.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—Scattered showers in Texas and much liquidation of the long interest caused a drop of 48 to 50 points in the price of cotton during the first hour of business today. October fell to 23.28c a pound. The Census Bureau report, counting consumption of cotton in this country during July at 461,575 bales, against 542,166 in June, caused moderate selling. The Cotton Exchange announced that it would close on Saturday, Sept. 1, and Monday Sept. 3, the usual holidays observed as Labor day.

New buying of aggressive character, apparently prompted by the favorable tone of week-end review of general trade in this country and special mention of betterment in the textile industry, entered the market in the last half of the session and lifted prices 28 to 30 points from the lowest in the face of further reports from Texas and Oklahoma to the effect that rains continued to fall here and there in those two States. The close was at net declines on the day of 34 to 38 points with October at 23.42 to 23.44.

New Orleans Spot.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 18.—Spot cotton dull, 13 points lower. Sales on the spot, none; to arrive, 300. Low middling, 24.25c; middling, 25c; good middling, 25.50c; receipts, 146; stock, 42,033.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton was unchanged in St. Louis. Quotations: Good ordinary, 23c; low middling, 23.50c; middling, 24.50c; good middling, 25c; middling fair, 25.50c.

Liverpool to Open Saturdays.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 18.—Effective Sept. 1, the Liverpool Cotton Exchange will reopen on Saturdays from 10 a. m. to 12 noon except the last Saturday of each month, when it will remain open until 12:30. The market then will close at 4 p. m. on Fridays instead of at 4:30 as at present. The exchange has been closed on Saturdays since the beginning of the World War in 1914.

SECOND YOUTH IN SALOON FIGHT DIES

Theodore Orzel, 2107 South Fourth Street, Was Stabbed With Butcher Knife.

The death yesterady of Theodore Orzel, 19 years old, of 2107 South Fourth street, was the second resulting from a fight among four men in a saloon at 2135 South Second street Wednesday night. An inquest was adjourned to await further police investigation.

Orzel died at the City Hospital at 5:30 a. m. of a stab wound in the abdomen. Tony Beckman, 18, of 2208 South Third stret, died Friday morning, the result of a bullet wound in the spine.

The police have the following account of the fight from the bartender, Alfred Benwell, 25, of 2214A South Fourth street, who has admitted that he shot Beckman:

Orzel and Beckman entered the saloon at 6:30 p. m., Beckman jumping onto the bar, sitting down and demanding a drink. Orzel approached William Helgoth, 49, of Webster Groves, and picked a quarrel with him. Beckman joined it. Benwell reproached the men, whereupon Beckman started toward Benwell.

Benwell said he seized a revolver and fired one shot at Beckman, who fell. When policemen arrived, they found that Orzel had been stabbed with a butcher knife, which had been removed from an accustomed place behind the bar and lay on the bar near the front of the saloon.

Beckman declined to say who shot him. Orzel was under the impression that his wound was a bullet wound also and declared he did not know who shot him.

Early Autumn Brides Hold Center of Interest in Society; Late Vacationists Go to Mountains

Several Parties for Girls Who Will Be Married in the Near Future Break Monotony of Dull Summer Season — First Arrivals From Summer Resorts Coming Back.

MID-AUGUST finds many members of the small division of Society which has braved the warm days in town, departing for mountain or shore resorts to pass the remaining days of late summer, with the first few of the vanguard of returning travelers drifting back and parties and entertainments at their zero hour. Occasionally an informal luncheon or bridge party breaks the social calm heralding the coming of a brilliant social season when a new group of debutantes will make their bows and social activities will be renewed.

For the most part, early autumn brides have the interest of those of their friends who are still in town, and several affairs are scheduled in their honor. On Friday, Sept. 21, Mrs. Walter H. Hofmann of 5852 Bartmer avenue will entertain with a bridge party for Miss Nancy Surridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Surridge of 5629 Cates avenue, whose marriage to F. Baker de Camp Jr. will take place Sept. 26. The following day Mrs. T. Gibson Browne will give a similar affair for Miss Surridge. Both Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Gibson will be in Miss Surridge's bridal party, which also includes Miss Cecelia de Camp as maid of honor, Miss Catherine Myers and Miss Helen Sproul as bridesmaids, and Mrs. Nelson R. Thomas as matron of honor.

Mr. De Camp's brother, Joseph de Camp, will serve him as best man and his groomsman will be King O'Leary of Little Rock, Ark.; A. V. L. Brokaw, Fred Krug, Richard Bull and Cecil Whitmarsh.

Two other prospective brides will share honors at a luncheon bridge at the Gatesworth Hotel next Wednesday when Mrs. John C. Colwell Jr. will entertain about 30 guests complimenting Miss Juanita Schopp, who will marry George William Meletio, and Miss Myrtle Truitt, who is to marry Harry J. Meury. Mrs. Wm. E. Caulfield Jr. was hostess at a luncheon Thursday for Miss Truitt.

Mrs. Clyde C. Miner of 6138 Waterman avenue entertained with a luncheon yesterday for Miss Helen Mills of Springfield, O., who is the guest of her daughter, Miss Marie V. Miner. Announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Miner to Albert Horn Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Horn of Boston, Mass. The luncheon guests included intimate friends of Miss Horn, mostly members of the Alpha Pi Delta Sorority. Miss Miner was educated at Wittenberg Academy and Wittenberg University in Springfield, O., and Washington University. Mr. Horn is a graduate of Tufts College, Boston, and a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity. He served as Captain with the overseas forces during the World War. No definite date has been set for the wedding, but it will take place in the early fall.

Miss Mary Louise Baker of 5101 Cates avenue has as her guests Mrs. J. H. Walker and Mrs. J. E. Forrest of Dallas, Tex. A number of informal bridge luncheons have already been given for the two visitors and several small

Simple Way to Get Rid of Blackheads
There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

Why Oppose Nature?

Nature must have known what she was doing when she made the arch of the foot flexible. Why defeat her purpose by lacing the foot to a rigid sole? In ordinary shoes, stiff and unyielding, the foot lacks freedom. Such shoes weaken the muscles by prohibiting their movement; they impede circulation by binding the foot. But the Cantilever Shoe is flexible, like the arch. The shank is pliant, it bends WITH the foot. In Cantilever Shoes the muscles surrounding the small bones of the arch grow strong because they can exercise freely. Cantilevers correct and prevent flat foot by strengthening the arch in this sane, healthy way.

The last of a Cantilever Shoe is patterned from the outline of the foot. The natural inner sole line permits the toes to point straight ahead as they should for comfort. This and the well-set heel encourage correct posture. In Cantilevers you can walk or stand for a long time without the fatigue you feel in other shoes.

WITH MISSOURIANS IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—(Special.)—Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, a member of the District Board of Education, is leading the campaign of the club women of Washington to obtain adequate school buildings and facilities and to make the educational institutions of the National capital models for those throughout the country.

Mrs. Hodgkins, who claims Missouri as her home state, is one of the most widely known women nationally in Washington as she is in an office in many patriotic and educational societies, is vice president general from the District of the D. A. R., and a past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Hodgkins led the thrift campaign for both the D. A. R. and the Federation of Women's Clubs last year.

Mrs. Edwin Puller, who has become a very important factor socially in Washington, will return to this city from a summer abroad early in the season. She will give a series of dinners later in the season.

The persistent mention of Dwight F. Davis as a possible Secretary of War, in case John W. Weeks goes out of the cabinet is of interest to the younger married set of the city, with which Mrs. Davis has identified herself.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Thomson, the latter formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, have returned from urope and are now with Col. and Mrs. Marcellus Thompson and the latter's father and mother, the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and Mrs. George Harvey, at the Harvey summer place at Deal, N. J.

Mrs. Thomson and Mrs. Thompson were intimate friends before their marriages and Mrs. Thompson, then Miss Dorothy Harvey, spent many weeks with Mrs. Thomson, then Miss Clark, during the latter's debut in Washington. Col. and Mrs. Harvey took both of the young girls on an extended tour of Europe before their marriages.

Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge, sister and brother-in-law of James M. Thomson, are now with Mrs. Breckenridge's mother at Summit Point, West Virginia. Later Mr. and Mrs. James M. Thomson will join them there.

The first meeting of the Missouri State society will take place in October, instead of September, in order that all the members can be present. The annual dance will not be held until after the period of official mourning ends on Dec. 1. Representative and Mrs. Cleveland Newton, the former president of the society, are now considering plans for the winter's activities. All the congressional delegation, Col. Dwight Davis, Assistant Secretary of War, Mrs. Brueggeman, of the Industrial commission and other Missourians are always present at the meeting of the society.

GIVES UP SEARCH FOR PRIEST

Detective Trailing Man Supposed to Be Father Vraniak Ends Search.

A detective, who following a wanderer supposed to be the missing Father John A. Vraniak of Virden, Ill., through western Missouri and eastern Kansas for two months, has been taken off the trail, it was learned at Virden yesterday.

Frank Vraniak, brother of the priest, who assisted in the search, has abandoned personal participation and has returned to Chicago. Slovak parishioners of Father Vraniak are resolved to continue the investigation, however, it was said, and are planning to run down other clews. They are being assisted by the Knights of Columbus.

The August Sale of Autumn Shoes

THE value of a Shoe depends upon its style, and styles of the moment usually command full prices. Reductions made on Shoes that are not up to the moment in fashion are of no great interest to the well-groomed woman. The August Sale, however, is a departure from the usual methods of merchandising. Authentic styles destined to be the vogue this Autumn and Winter will be sold at special prices.

The Gore Suede Pump

And Other Novelties Are Interesting

At $9.90 Pair

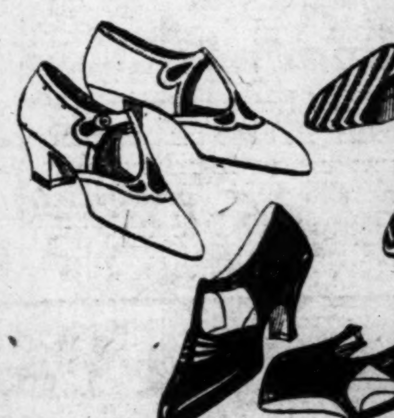
The influence of Paris is displayed in the vamp and toe of an attractive Pump. The vamp is short and the toe round, producing short and dainty lines. Developed in suede and trimmed in leather of contrasting color, the style is extremely pleasing.

The gore effect on Pumps of suede and kid is a new fashion that wins much applause for its novelty and adaptability.

The cutout Pumps in materials appropriate for Fall and the staple leather Oxfords continue a feature in patterns extremely interesting.



Satin and Brocade Pumps

In New Designs Dominate a Group

At $7.50 Pair

Satin Pumps are introduced in this group and meet the apparel mode for satin frocks. Although satin Pumps are an established vogue, the new designs in which they are fashioned excite interest. Some follow the cutout designs and are trimmed in bands of suede.

A satin brocade Pump with Louis heel is sure to become a favorite for its attractiveness when worn with the new brocade frocks.

Kid Pumps in novel cutout and strap designs are the "street" models in this group.

The "Johnny" Oxfords

And Strap Pumps Are Featured

At $5.85 Pair

A new strap Pump that scores approval at first glance is of brown kid with trimming in fieldmouse kid. It combines decorative beauty and utility.

The "Johnny" Oxford with plain toe, low heel, and short vamp, and the regular Oxford in brown and black leather, the practical shoes for schoolgirls, are presented in great diversity.

Patent leather Pumps with strap tongue and cutout pattern are substantial in material and design.

All sizes and widths are included, and the appeal of style is greatly augmented by the interesting prices at which these groups are marked.

Husbands Should Read This!

Don't quarrel with your wife when she objects to your taste in the selection of your clothes. Just read the following true story and profit thereby.

A husband bought a striped shirt the other day. When his wife saw it she complained loudly that some of the stripes were narrow and very pale, others broad and dark. The ensemble was particularly offensive to her eyes.

After considerable domestic discord friend husband persuaded her to have her eyes tested, for as a matter of fact the stripes were quite inconspicuous and perfectly regular in width and shade.

An eye test by me showed she suffered from astigmatism, a very common eye ailment, which plays all sorts of embarrassing tricks on its victims.

A pair of my glasses, specially ground to correct her particular defect, quickly normalized her vision and re-established domestic harmony. A word to the wise is sufficient. One single moderate charge covers testing, lenses, frames and fitting.

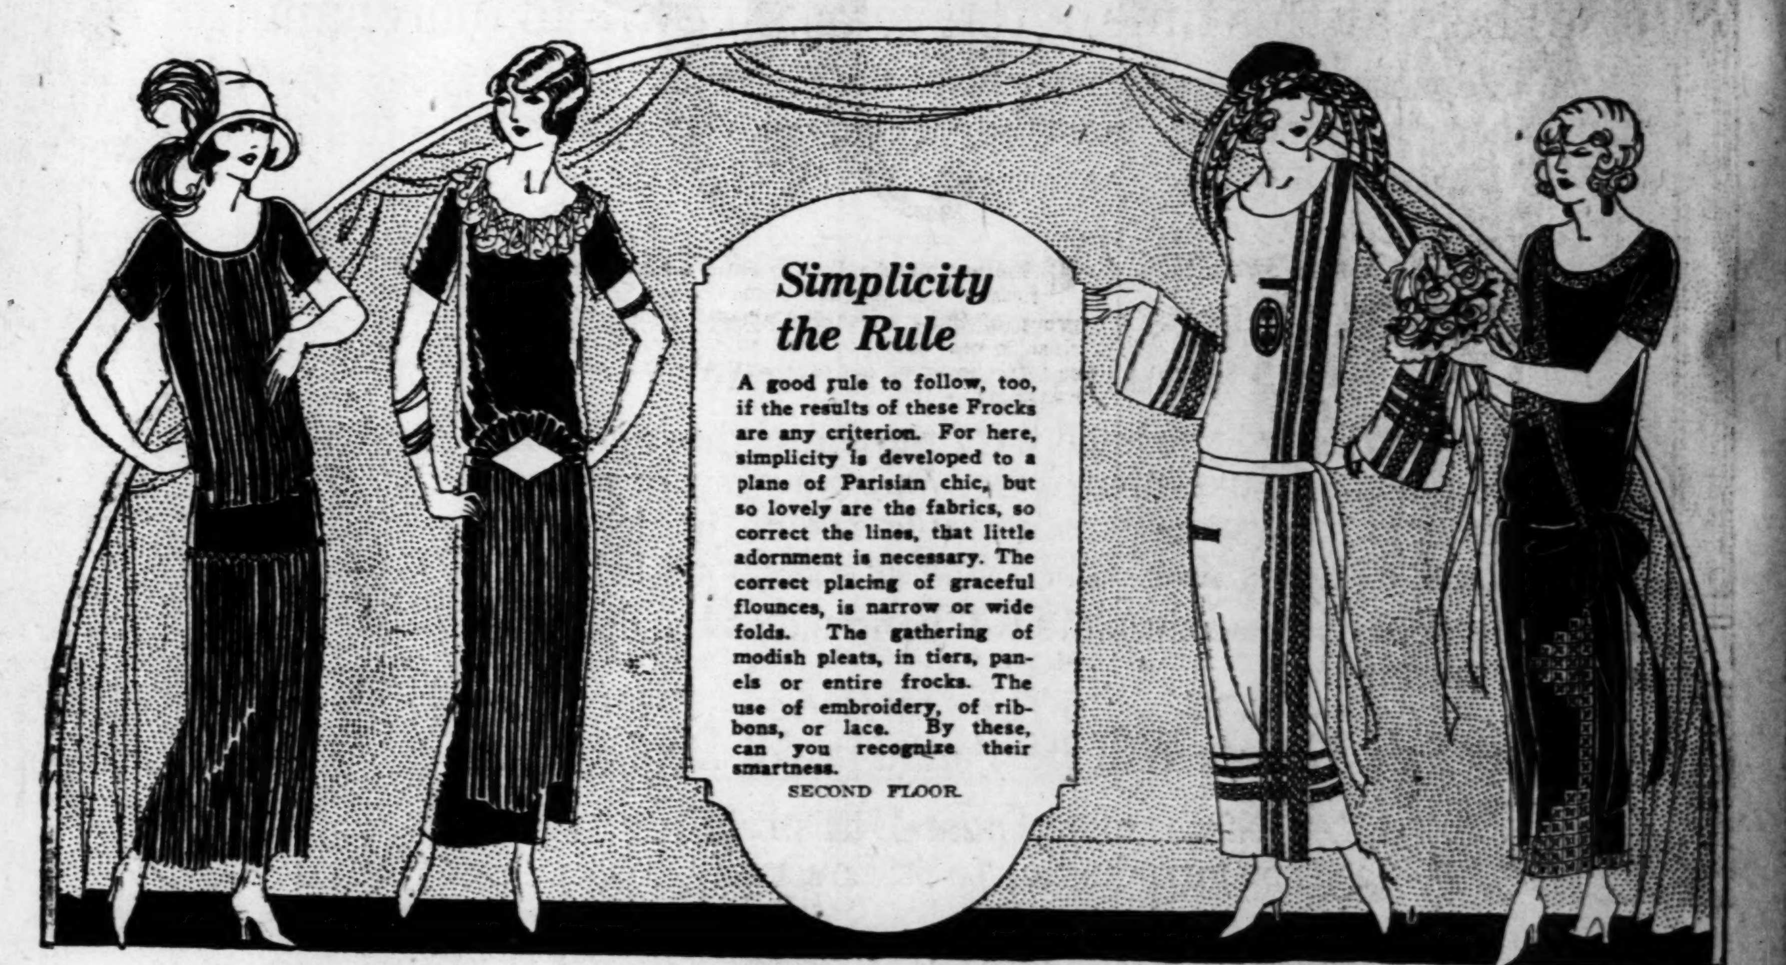
New Fall Dresses

With Which You May Economically Achieve Style Distinction



Simplicity the Rule

A good rule to follow, too, if the results of these Frocks are any criterion. For here, simplicity is developed to a plane of Parisian chic, but so lovely are the fabrics, so correct the lines, that little adornment is necessary. The correct placing of graceful flounces, is narrow or wide folds. The gathering of modish pleats, in tiers, panels or entire frocks. The use of embroidery, of ribbons, or lace. By these, can you recognize their smartness.

SECOND FLOOR.

Up-to-the-Minute in Style! Down-to-the-Limit in Price!

Materials

An entire wardrobe of Dresses may be chosen—for here are modes and fashionable fabrics for practically every occasion. At these low prices are:

LUSTROUS SATINS
BEAUTIFUL CANTONS
SATIN-FACED CANTONS
FILMY GEORGETTES
CHARMING LACES
POIRET TWILLS
COMBINATIONS

$15 and $25

No matter how limited your "dress budget," you can purchase with it an almost unlimited amount of smartness—if you heed this announcement. The loveliest things of the new mode, the chic new Frocks that Fashion has created, the distinction that is usually so costly—are here in pleasing variety. The prices are low because of farsighted action and the tremendous purchasing power of this, St. Louis' largest Women's Specialty Shop.

In justice to your Fall wardrobe it is almost your duty to inspect this assemblage.

Colors

Of course the darker hues predominate for Autumn Frocks, and you will find the contrast refreshing indeed, for they betoken the cooler days to come. Choose from:

BLACK	NAVY
BROWN	COCOA

Trimmings

Here, too, the keynote is simplicity. And trims are just enough in evidence to lend each Frock a desirable individuality.

TELLS HOW ST. LOUIS PLANTS VANISHED

Magazine Writer Describes Disappearance of 44 Varieties From Vicinity.

Mention of the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis is made in Harper's Magazine for August in an article entitled "Time and Chance," a philosophical consideration of the mutability of nature, by Dallas Lore Sharp.

Concerning the transformation of certain forms of life, the author says: "It is dismaying to count the causes making for the destruction of wild life, and how inevitable many of them seem to be. Since 1835 from the near vicinity of St. Louis, 44 species of native plants have utterly disappeared. A few new forms have come in to take their places, but the causes operating for the destruction in St. Louis are not operating for the spread of those extinguished forms elsewhere. What works for destruction in St. Louis, works everywhere the same.

Plants Killed Out Near City.

"The wild leek, turtle head, innocence, ragged orchis, creeping St. John's-wort, marsh St. John's-wort, fen orchid, bunch flower, mock bishop-weed, long-leaved stitchwort and stenanthium have been exterminated by cultivation; cultivation and pasturing combined have killed out the moonwort, yellow adder's-tongue, meadow fescue, small pale-green orchis and Clayton's fern; pasturage vation and vandalism combined have done for the closed gentian, showy orchis, royal fern and the grass-leaved stenanthium; cultivation and drainage together have killed out the spike rush, prairie white-fringed orchis and Clayton's fern; apsturage alone has killed the fibrous-rooted sedge, the blue cohosh, hairy-lip fern, black cohosh, large corral-root, evolvulus, white gentian, stiff gentian, Michaux's leavenworthia, false beech drops, nodding pogonia, Engelmann's sorrel, lyre-leaved sage, rock salaginella and spiderwort; pasturage and vandalism have eliminated the large yellow lady's slipper and the crested coral-root; vandalism alone has exterminated the wood lily; the Missouri River has washed away the bearded day flower; the removal of sand on which the plants were growing has killed out the green adder's mouth and the gray polypody; the expansion of the city has destroyed the hawthorn and the American feather foil. Specimens of all the plants are to be found in the herbarium of the Missouri Botanical Gardens as members once of the local flora."

Rare Palms at Shaw's Gardens.

In another passage the following is related:

"Recently in the Missouri Botanical Gardens at St. Louis I was shown a pair of cycads, a species of palm, male and female, Macrozamia Moorei, from Australia. Because the fronds of Macrozamia contain a poison which causes paralysis in cattle feeding upon it, the ranchers of Australia have warred upon it to exterminate it, and so nearly have they succeeded that the four specimens in Missouri Gardens may now be the only plants of the species left on the earth. These were snatched from the burning—or the poisoning, for the plant is killed by chopping a notch in the trunk, then boring a hole to the center and filling it with arsenic.

The director of the gardens told me he had heard of the approaching end of this old form, and sending to Australia, was so fortunate as to get what may prove to be the last four survivors of the race. This may be too late to save them for the future. How under glass and in a strange land can these venerable obsolete forms be multiplied and longer preserved:

To add to the tragedy of another vanished race, this particular cycad is thought to be "the only living link between the cycads of today and the Bennettiales, a group of fossil cycad-like plants existing in the Mesozoic Era," ages before the tigers were tangled in the tar of the La Brea pools. This hoary palm, somewhat like a giant pineapple, is two feet through the stem, with waving fronts 20 feet in the air!"

George H. Pring, horticulturist at the Missouri Botanical Garden, said in response to an inquiry, that the author was accurate in recounting the disappearance of native plants from the vicinity of St. Louis, but less so in his enterpretation of facts relating to the Australian cycad. Pring said the Brooklyn Botanical Garden had two specimens of Macrozamia Moorei, but that, as Sharp related, it was disappearing rapidly from Australian plains.

3-CORNERED FIGHT OVER ESTATE IN PROSPECT

Brother of Mrs. Arrena R. Pierron, Unnamed in Two Wills, Appears at Funeral.

When Mrs. Arrena R. Pierron, 75 years old, died Thursday at Mullanphy Hospital, after having made two wills on sucessive days, it was supposed that she had left no relatives, as none was mentioned in either will. But Harrison L. Hart, 83 years old, residing at the Soldiers' Home at Danville, Ill., who says he is her brother, came here yesterday to attend the funeral, accompanied by his son, J. L. Hart, superintendent of schools of Pana, Ill. The latter announced that the disposal of Mrs. Pierron's estate, estimated at more than $12,000, would be looked into.

If a contest is instituted the fight for the estate will be three-cornered. Frank X. Wentura of 226 King's highway Park, beneficiary under Mrs. Pierron's first will, has indicated he will resist administration of the estate under the second will, in which Mrs. Pierron left most of her property to Attorney William L. Kinnerk as trustee to be distributed to charities.

Harrison Hart said, when he and his son went to the Probate Court to scrutinize the second will, which has been filed for probate, that he and his sister were on good terms and she had visited him last year at the Soldiers' Home, and they exchanged letters occasionally, but he first learned of her death through the newspapers.

Mrs. Pierron lately had lived in one room above a garage at 3203 North Newstead avenue, but she formerly lived in a 10-room house on Enright avenue.

Three Carpenters Sue for $55,000.

Damage suits for a total of $55,000 were filed yesterday by three carpenters because of injuries received when a scaffold fell with them at a building on which they were working in St. Louis County July 18. The plaintiffs are Barney Walton and Lilborn L. Nolan, who sue for $15,000 each, and Ernest J. Cox, who asks for $25,000. The Gamble Construction Co. is named as defendant.

We Guarantee, Madam, to stop falling hair —to grow new hair in 90 days this new way or money refunded

Science discovers most all falling, lustreless hair due to simple infection (Sebum). Now quickly overcome. Hair actually re-grown on 91 heads in 100.

World-great dermatologists are now employing a new and radically different formula in hair treatment, with almost unbelievable results.

This is to offer you an opportunity to test it in your own home.

Note that it is guaranteed absolutely. Guaranteed to start a growth of new hair—lustrous, beautiful, youthful—in 90 days or your money refunded. And to stop falling hair.

If it fails, it costs you nothing. Your own druggist signs the guarantee, so we take all the risk.

Why 6 Women in 8 Have Dull, Unattractive Hair

Science has recently discovered that hair roots seldom die. They can be revived—given new life.

We have proved that conclusively by re-growing hair on 91 heads in 100. The method we use is new. Years of exhaustive experiments were spent perfecting it.

Now world-great dermatologists employ these ingredients. Falling hair, dull, lifeless hair; hair without sheen or lustre—6 women in 8 have it.

The reason for most of it is a very simple infection. An infected scalp oil called Sebum. This new way quickly overcomes it. It starts to act instantly.

The Infected Sebum in Your Hair

Sebum is an oil. It forms at the follicles of the hair. Its natural function is to supply the hair with oil.

But frequently it becomes infected. It cakes on the scalp; clogs the follicles and plugs them. Go to the mirror and you can see it in your hair, either in the form of dandruff or in that of an oily excretion at the hair roots.

Germs by the millions breed in it, then feed upon the hair. Soon your hair begins falling. You note, too, how lifeless it appears. In a short time, all the natural lustre and beauty are gone.

But—and note this scientific fact—remove the Sebum and the hair reverts back to the softness and brilliancy it displayed when you were a schoolgirl.

The Van Ess Treatment accomplishes that result. We know you will doubt it. So we guarantee it.

New hair grown in 90 days. Falling hair stopped. Your own druggist gives you our guarantee to do these things with each 3-bottle purchase. He signs it. If we fail, your money will be refunded without argument. There is a printed guarantee in the top of each package. Read it first before you buy. Note its fairness.

Where to Obtain the Treatment

We urge you to give this new way a fair trial. Remember, you take no risk.

Go to any druggist or department store today. Ask for the Van Ess Liquid Scalp Massage. Written guarantee accompanies it.

BATHERS

Men and Women

We guarantee freedom from dull hair, falling hair and dandruff—the three penalties of bathing. VAN ESS neutralizes the ill effects of salt and fresh water and insures perfect hair health. VAN ESS your hair after each swim. And you can swim as often as you like. Keep hea[illegible] lustrous hair. Don't wait until Fall to recondition it. Get the VAN ESS habit now. If your dealer can't supply it, order it from us direct.

Costs Nothing

Unless we grow hair. The Van Ess 3-bottle treatment is absolutely guaranteed. You are the sole judge. The warrant is signed by your own druggist. All we require is his signature showing you have purchased a ninety-day treatment. If it fails, we refund your money. Hence you assume no risk making this test.

VAN ESS
LIQUID SCALP MASSAGE

Note This New Way

—It Massages the Treatment Directly to the Follicles of the Hair

You can see from illustration that Van Ess is not a "tonic." It combines a massage and lotion in one treatment. You do not rub it in with your fingers. Each package comes with a rubber massage cap. The nipples are hollow. Just invert bottle, rub your head, and nipples automatically feed lotion down to follicles of the scalp where it can do some good. At the same time the nipples give your head a massage.

It is very easy to apply. One minute each day is enough.

MR. SCOTT'S LETTER:

Chicago, Ill., July 20, 1923.

Matthew Coe,
Pine St.,
St. Louis, Mo.
Dear doctor:

I cannot find words to express my appreciation for being cured by Dr. C. Matthew Coe. I had been afflicted with piles for eight years and used every remedy I could get hold of and had them treated by physicians, but they gradually grew worse. I finally saw your advertisement in a St. Louis paper, and went to your office and under your treatment. After two weeks and a half treatment I left your office free from piles and well. I heartily recommend Dr. Coe to all who may be troubled with piles. Don't do like I did, but go at once to Dr. Coe; he will cure you. You will save yourself much money and suffering.

C. C. Scott.
3159 Giles Avenue.

Mr. Scott is a merchant, afflicted 8 years, suffered terribly for more than 4 years—had tried many remedies, doctors, etc. Came to me—was cured—went home sound and well.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 12, '23.

Dear Sir: Since my treatment am feeling just fine. I haven't had any trouble at all—haven't any symptoms of my old trouble.

Yours,

C. C. Scott.
3159 Giles Avenue.

Mr. Scott's letter of August 12th, together with his letter of July 20th, both printed in this advertisement, certainly tell a story that is worth while to every man and woman who is afflicted with Piles, Fistula, Fissure or any Rectal trouble. Mr. Scott came from Chicago to me for a cure—having read my advertisement in a St. Louis paper. Did he use good judgment or not? You decide. I can surely do as much for you as I did for him.

23,022,630 ACRES TAKEN BY HOMESTEADERS IN TWO YEARS

110,330 Patents Issued for This Area Within Past Two Years, Department Survey Shows.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Public lands totaling 23,022,630 acres have been transferred to homesteaders during the past two years. A Department of Interior summary shows that the number of patents issued for this area was 110,330.

Were all of these tracts gathered into one district it would have an area as great as Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maryland and Connecticut combined.

Receipts of the General Land Office during the two years amounted to $24,843,809. More than half, $12,981,609, came from royalties on mineral leases on public lands. Sale of public lands realized $2,453,250, while fees and commissions totaled $2,840,738. Receipts from naval petroleum reserves brought in $5,543,835.

The receipts were disposed of by paying $8,762,014 into the general fund of the Treasury, $12,154,506 to the reclamation fund and $3,927,287 to the various states containing the public lands.

MADE 192.4 MILES IN RACE ON AUG. 6

It Is Expected That Winner of St. Louis Classic Will Have to Beat 200 Miles an Hour.

Russell Maughan, U. S. A., now holds the trophy, won at Detroit last year, as well as the world's speed record established at Dayton, O., March 29, 1923.

Among the contestants in the Pulitzer trophy race, which will be held at St. Louis Field, Oct. 3, in addition to Carter, and Lieut. Maughan, will be Brack-Papa and Mainardi, the leading Italian "aces," and Sadi Lecointe, holder of the French speed and world's altitude record. The United States Navy has entered Lieuts. S. W. Callaway and H. J. Brow, Ensign A. J. Williams and First Lieut. L. H. Sanderson (Marine Corps), in this race. The army has not yet named its entries, in addition to Lieut. Maughan, but it will have a strong personnel.

Carter flies a Mars Bamel Gloucestershire racer, equipped with a 450 horse-power Napier-Lion engine. In the British Aerial Derby, Aug. 6, which he won, Carter made a speed of 192.4 miles an hour in this ship. The plane has gone 212 miles an hour in special trials, however. It is expected the winner of the Pulitzer trophy race at St. Louis will have to fly faster than 200 miles an hour. At Detroit last year Maughan's greatest speed was 205 miles. The navy is building two new machines for this year's race, which are expected to develop a speed of 250 miles an hour. The Italians have planes equipped with 700 horse-power Fiat engines, while Sadi Lecointe flies a Neiuport with Hispano engine of 320 horse-power.

In addition to the Pulitzer trophy race, there will be eight other major events in the three days' racing program. In the On-to-St Louis races, prizes will be awarded to pilots flying the longest distance to St. Louis to attend the races. Total cash prizes offered amount to $13,300, and many cups and valuable trophies are offered. The St. Louis Air Board is spending $200,000 equipping St. Louis Field, where the races will be held, as a permanent airport.

SOLDIERS' ART ON EXHIBIT

Drawings and Photographs Being Shown at Library.

An exhibit of unusual interest is on display in the art room of Central Library. The exhibit consists of pictures and drawings by ex-service men who were disabled in the late war. These men are now taking training under the Veterans' Bureau because their war injuries prevented them from returning to their pre-war occupations.

Ralph Fraser, Jerry Mihm and Melvin Smith, three of the disabled soldiers who have pictures on display, distinguished themselves in the commercial art class at Washington University last year. Fraser, who before the war was a farmer, won the highest honors of the class. Mihm, now totally deaf from his war service, and Smith, a former switchboard operator, both won prizes in poster contests.

Aside from the commercial art work, there are exhibited drawings from the architectural department of Washington and Iowa State universities. A number of photographs taken nad enlarged by the Government students at Bellevue Vocational School are also on exhibition.

ULTIMATUM OF WALL IN STRIKE IGNORED BY MEN

Strikers Vote to Remain Out Until Water Commissioner Takes Back Men Without Discrimination.

MAY LET CONTRACTS FOR PIPE LAYING

Union Leaders Take Exception to Higher Wage Scale Being Paid to New Workers.

Water Commissioner Wall's ultimatum to pipelayers, section men and laborers of the Water Department, who went on strike July 28 for a half holiday on Saturdays, that they return to work at noon yesterday or risk not being taken back at all, was ignored. The men at a meeting Friday night voted to remain on strike until Wall agrees to take back all the men without discrimination.

Wall has stated that he would take back all but seven of the men. These exceptions, he said, are made against men who have been guilty either of violence toward nonunion workmen or drunkenness.

When informed of the union's action, Commissioner Wall said he would go right ahead operating his department. There are about three miles of pipline to be laid in North St. Louis this year, he said, and this work likely will be let to contractors unless the strikers return to work.

About 120 men went on strige, and Wall has had 50 men at work on some of the jobs. He said he would employ a sufficient force at once, and by letting some of the work to contractors, would be able to get along with about 30 fewer men than before the strike.

Some of the strikers were receiving 67½ cents an hour and other $126 and $116 a month. Union leaders now take exception to higher wages that are being paid to workmen in the strikers' places, which Commissioner Wall justifies as an emergency measure.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce adopted a resolution calling upon the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen to support Commissioner Wall in the position he has taken .

Women Voters at Sedalia Fair.

The Missouri League of Women Voters will have an educational booth at the State Fair in Sedalia next week. The league at its 1923 convention, held in St. Louis last spring, passed a resolution to make the organization bi-partisan instead of non-partisan and to encourage Missouri women voters to unite with the political parties as working members, now that the law gives Missouri women voters legal representation on all political committees. Mrs. Laura Edwards, chairman of the St. Louis League Political Information Committee, will be in charge of the booth.

Scientist discovers fat solvent

Reduce any or every part of your figure with amazing new Reducing Cream which melts away excess fat on any part of the body—slenderizing the figure to perfect proportions without drugs, exercises, diet, rubber suits or painful denial of any kind.

Milady! If you have a single ounce of unwelcome flesh on your figure—here's good news for you. Getting thin is now pleasurably simple and easy for anyone.

For I, M. J. McGowan, after five years of tireless research, have made the discovery you have all been waiting for. At last I can tell you positively how to reduce quickly, comfortably—without the bother of tiresome exercises, without the boredom of stupid diet, without resorting to enervating salt baths, without rubber suits or belts. I can actually show you how to make a wonderful change in your figure in 45 days' time or my advice isn't going to cost you one single penny.

If it is a threatened double chin that is making you give up white bread and potatoes—

If your waistline is keeping you away from the tempting bon bon dish—

If your arms are too plump, your neck padded a bit too well, your ankles bulging, don't worry—I guarantee to reduce any or every part of your body, swiftly and surely—without committing you to any program of painful self-denial.

12½" A slender neck
35" Well proportioned bust
25" A trim waist
36" Slim hips
23½" Perfectly modeled thighs
14½" Graceful calf
8¾" Dainty ankles

Amazingly Successful Tests

I am only telling you simple facts. I know exactly whereof I speak. I have experimented to date on many subjects and in the big majority of cases have accomplished perfectly amazing results. I can do the same for you.

Indeed, I am so positive of my ground that I absolutely guarantee results or refund every penny of your money. My discovery I call Reducine—McGowan's Reducine. It is not a medicine, a bath salt or a course of useless gymnastics. No—Reducine is a pleasant cream that you can apply in the privacy of your own room, patting it gently onto the parts you want to slenderize and almost overnight you will notice a change. A harmless chemical reaction takes place, during which the excess fat is literally dissolved away, leaving the figure slim and properly rounded, giving the lithe grace to the body of every man and woman desires.

A Scientific Laboratory Product Absolutely Guaranteed

No matter how much or how little overweight you are, I guarantee that my 45-day reducing treatment will reduce any or every part of your body, quickly, surely. If, at the end of 45 days, you are not perfectly satisfied, I will return every penny of your money

M J McGowan.

Read of These Astounding Results:

Case No. 5 Name and address on request.
Case number 5 was that of a woman, age 42, who weighed 187 pounds before taking Reducine treatment. In six weeks' time she had reduced 36 pounds and her figure was trimmed to perfect symmetry throughout.

Case No. 7 Name and address on request.
A well-known actor, not greatly over weight but with waistline of 42 inches. A three weeks' Reducine treatment reduced his waist to 37½ inches, or normal.

Case No. 9 Name and address on application.
Business girl, age 28, normal in weight but with distressing double chin. Noticeable improvement the first week and chin line restored to normal in four weeks.

Complete 45-Day Treatment Results Guaranteed or Money Back

No matter how much or how little overweight you are, I guarantee that my Reducing Cream will reduce any, or every part of your body, quickly, surely. I do not merely promise these results—I guarantee them. Even one jar of Reducine often effects astonishing weight reduction. But the complete treatment consists of three jars—used over a period of 45 days. So wonderful has this treatment proved in every test, that I guarantee it without exception, for all cases. If at the end of 45 days, you are not satisfied that Reducine has accomplished all that I have claimed—I will return every penny of your money.

In prescribing three jars of, McGowan's Reducine, I am prescribing a complete reducing treatment for permanent reducing. You will see results from the outset—but three jars will make these results permanent and complete. I do not care to produce half-way or temporary results. I insist that this treatment have an opportunity to effect complete and lasting slenderization. Three jars used for the period of 45 days will do that in every case or I will refund your money in full.

A Fresh Jar Sent Every 15 Days 3 Jars in All

I do not send all three jars at once—for Reducine to be most efficient should be used when it is fresh. That is why I will not sell it in drug or department stores. Because of the perishable nature of its reducing ingredient, I insist that you get only the freshly compounded product—put out under my direct and personal supervision.

And you do not need to pay for the three jars in advance. Indeed, you need not send one penny with the coupon. When the first jar arrives—pay the postman my special laboratory price of $2.47 plus postage. 15 days later, when second jar arrives, pay $2.47 again plus postage, and 15 days later, pay postman same amount for third jar plus postage—or a total of $7.41, plus postage, for a complete, guaranteed reducing treatment—divided into three payments—each paid when individual jar arrives.

I Take All the Risk—You Are the Sole Judge

This is the first time in history that a complete treatment of reducing has been sold for as little as $7.41—and with an absolute guarantee of complete results in 45 days, or money refunded.

When you realize that many imitations of Reducine are now being sold at from $3.50 to $10 a jar at retail, you will realize how astoundingly low is the price we ask. This price is made possible only by the fact that we supply you direct from the laboratory, cutting out the big middleman's profit.

If you have tried other old-time methods in vain, and really want to reduce any part of your body, give me the chance to help you. You risk nothing. Unless you get perfectly astounding results in 45 days—all you have to do is ask for your money back.

Send No Money—Just Sign the Coupon

I am not going to ask you to send one penny with your order. Just sign the coupon and mail it to me today. Your first one-pound jar of Reducine will go forward at once by return mail—and you can pay postman $2.47 (plus few cents postage). 15 days later, the second jar will be sent. C. O. D. $2.47 (plus postage); and 15 days later—the third jar—C. O. D. $2.47 (plus postage). Or, if you prefer to send cash in advance, you may enclose $7 for the full 45-day treatment now, and the three jars will be sent postpaid (the first jar at once—and the two others at 15-day intervals).

710 W. Jackson Blvd., Dept. 412, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. McGowan: I am willing to let you prove to me, at your expense, that your Reducing Cream will remove all surplus flesh from my figure—in 45 days' time. Please enroll me for your complete 45-day treatment—send me the first 1-pound jar of Reducine at once; the second, 15 days later; and the third, 30 days later. I will pay the postman $2.47 (plus few cents postage) for each jar as it arrives. It is understood that the full amount will be refunded to me at the completion of the treatment, if I am not satisfied with results.

DEMOCRATS URGE STATE CONVENTION BEFORE PRIMARY

Proposal, Seeking to Avoid Another Party Split in Missouri, Launched at Moberly Meeting.

COUNTY COMMITTEES' AID WILL BE ASKED

Representatives From Five Strong Democratic Counties Act to Formulate Definite Party Policy.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MOBERLY, Mo., Aug. 18.—A scheme looking far ahead to the next Democratic primary campaign in Missouri, with a purpose to prevent disruption of the party by the entrance into the campaign of disturbing issues and possibly to attempt to eliminate weak candidates for the nomination for Governor, is in process of formation, the initiatory steps having been taken by a small group of influential Democrats from the five stronger Democratic counties of north central Missouri at Moberly Thursday.

As a result of that meeting, a letter will be issued asking the chairman of each county committee of the party in the State to call a meeting of his committee to indorse the plan and to join in a plea to the Democratic State Committee to call a party convention for Jan. 8, celebrated as Jackson day by the Democratic party. The letter, it is said, will be signed by the county chairmen of Boone, Callaway, Monroe, Howard and Randolph counties.

At the meeting here there were representatives from each of those counties. There was no discussion of candidates and no extended discussion of a proposal that the convention should name any choice in the large field of candidates in prospect, it being the decision that that question should be solely one for the convention.

It might be said that primarily the scheme is to seek to avoid another party split in Missouri over the League of Nations and over Senator Reed, the Reed and anti-Reed fight already having loomed up as a factor in the approaching campaign.

Out in the rural districts, the anti-Reed sentiment appears to be little less than it was in the campaign last year, when Reed lost the country districts heavily in the primary and won the nomination only because he was able to muster strong support in the larger cities. In the election there was a large defection of Democrats solely because Reed was the nominee for Senator.

If Reed should attempt to gain control of the Missouri delegation to the next Democratic national convention, through trying to dictate the selection of delegates, the Reed and anti-Reed fight would be revived. It is the principal purpose of the proposal for a convention to try to devise some means of avoiding this conflict.

It does not appear in the preliminary steps that the movement is in the interest of any candidate, or that it is either a Reed or an anti-Reed movement. It has its inception in the mind of James E. Boggs of Columbia, formerly a member of the Democratic State Committee, who succeeded in keeping just as neutral as it was possible for any Democrat to be in the party split of last year. It is not believed that anybody, except possibly Boggs himself, discovered how he stood in that fight. He was asked many times for his views, and, although he replied to all his letters, his stenographer is reported to have asked him on the last day of the campaign whether he was for or against Reed. She said she hadn't been able to tell from the letters he had written.

Would Outline Party Issues.

In the call to be issued by the five county chairmen, the request will be that the convention be convened to formulate a definite party policy and statement of principles to the end that each candidate may know in advance of the active campaign exactly the issues which will be considered party issues, on which he may expect to receive party support.

While such a convention undoubtedly would be taken as firm campaigning ground for the various candidates, there, so far, is no authoritative suggestion that the convention should choose between candidates. There is, nevertheless, a feeling among many Democrats that it might result to party advantage and even to the advantage of the State for a first and second choice to be named.

If the movement should develop along this line, it could not hope to be even reasonably successful unless was found possible to bring about an agreement among the candidates to submit their names to the convention with the understanding that those candidates who did not land either first or second would not file for the nomination. It is doubtful that all could be brought to this agreement.

So far the list of prospective candidates includes John M. Atkinson of University City, the nominee in 1920 and defeated in the Republican landslide; former Gov. Gardner, St. Louis; Floyd E. Jacobs, Kansas City; George H. Moore, St. Louis; State Senator William R. Painter, Carrollton, Dr. Arthur Nelson, Bunceton; former State Senator Francis M. Wilson, Kansas City, Stephen B. Hunter, Cape Girardeau, and former Circuit Judge Sterling H. McCarthy of Caruthersville.

Several Have Good Following.

Atkinson has the advantage of the wide acquaintance resulting from several campaigns and the sympathy always felt for a candidate defeated in a landslide, particularly a candidate who ran ahead of his ticket as Atkinson did. He faces the possible weakness of an often defeated candidate, he having failed to obtain the nomination in 1916 and having been defeated in the election of 1920.

Gardner's strength lies in the fact that he has a strong working organization among the men he appointed to office, and the fact that his administration was generally considered above the average in accomplishment. From purely the political standpoint, his weakness lies in his advocacy of full value assessment of property, which is unpopular in the country, and his advocacy of a measure to prohibit the teaching of foreign languages in the schools. The latter was a measure growing out of war conditions.

Jacobs has the advantage of being a strong speaker and campaigner and of having no State political record and thus nothing to explain. He has been campaigning for several months and, admittedly has made marked progress.

Nelson has a strong following in the agricultural sections and undoubtedly would poll a large vote out in the State, though it is difficult to see that he could expect much in the cities. Moore has osme strength in St. Louis and in a few rural counties. Wilson has considerable strength in northwest Missouri and Kansas City, where politicians in the ranks of the Pendergast organization are supporting him. However, that is a support which will not be definitely fixed until just before the primary election, when Pendergast will issue his orders. Hunter, Painter and McCarthy so far have not developed more than local support.

WOMAN HELD AS BOOTLEGGER, SAID TO HAVE REGULAR ROUTE

Arrest in Cleveland Follows Mile Chase in Which Auto Is Forced to Curb.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 18.—Bessie Gulapi, 26, was arrested today charged with possessing and transporting liquor. She was placed in custody after a mile chase by police, which ended when the officer's automobile drew alongside her car and forced it to the curb.

Police allege they found four five-gallon bottles of corn whisky in the rear seat of her automobile. Police said the arrest was made after information had been received that Miss Gulapi had a regular route of customers, visited on the average of twice a week.

PASSPORT VISAS IN EUROPE COSTLY TO AMERICAN TOURISTS

$400 Spent by Brooklyn Business Man in Six Weeks' Tour of Europe.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—American tourists in Europe have learned to their dismay that if they are to see anything of the principal countries the cost of passport visas nearly equals the fare across the Atlantic. Their passport charges range from $50 to $250, depending upon the number of national boundary lines crossed.

Most of the European nations charge $10 for a visa, in retaliation for the action of the United States in making a similar assessment upon foreigners. Indeed, some of the continental states, notably the Balkans, have in occasional instances imposed fees of from $15 to $30 for the simple rubber stamp visa that permits the traveler to pass through the country.

Reginald Kauffman, a business man of Brooklyn, reported being charged $60 at the border of Jugo-Slavia for a visa entitling him to cross that country into Rumania. When he protested the Serbian authorities threatened to eject him from the train. Kauffman said he was calling the situation to the attention of the State Department at Washington. It cost him $400 for visas in the course of his six weeks' tour of Europe.

Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark are among the few countries that are an exception to the general practice.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH
DRAMA AND THE MOVIES
PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 19, 1923. PAGES 1—8.

If Chicago Dislikes Play It's Sure to Be Good, Says New Yorker

"Tweedles," by Tarkington and Wilson, Declared Case in Point—It Lacks Heft and Red Blood, but Is Delightful Fun.

By Heywood Broun,
Dramatic Critic of the New York Morning World.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.

THE scheme may not work for anybody else, but we have discovered a practically infallible method to determine in advance whether or not we are going to like a play. We need only ascertain how it fared in Chicago. If it failed there we look forward to the opening eagerly, sure of a delightful evening.

Probably it is red blood which rears the barrier between our own taste and that of Chicago. And it is a thick barrier. Chicago goes in for ''important'' plays and ''strong'' ones. As a rule we hate both varieties. Chicago likes heft in drama. All lighter forms of foolery are regarded as little short of dishonesty in the city beside the lake.

Accordingly, Chicago did not like "Tweedles" at all. The new play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson is undeniably light. Not one of the actors is allowed a single opportunity to thump a fist upon his chest. The problems of the world remain unsolved even at the final curtain. There isn't a message and the audience is neither uplifted nor educated. All samples of the best types of American manhood being absent, the play cannot qualify for the Pulitzer prize. In fact, the only thing which can be said for "Tweedles" is that it is just about the best fun in the world.

Message Not Stressed.

AS far as messages go the play has one, but this may very well be overlooked because the authors refuse to get excited about it. Mr. Tarkington and Mr. Wilson have undertaken to show that pride of name is a silly business, but this point is not stressed. No sound of axes being laid heavily against family trees is likely to follow in the wake of the play.

For our part, we have become convinced that the only plays which we find engrossing and important are the light ones. Tragic plays don't often move us much. When an author indicates in his opening act that he purposes to wring our heart we become stony and resistant and our unconscious self says in effect, "Let's just see if you can." When that mood is on us heroines may go mad and heroes end it all without disturbing our smug complacency.

But we are often trapped into melting fits by farces and light comedies. Only in such plays does pathos leap out at the spectator suddenly and catch him off his guard. He may even begin to laugh at the very line which suddenly turns about in his brain and reveals itself as something poignantly wistful. Characters in tragedy generally pour out their troubles and provide so much pity for themselves that the need of outside sympathy is not always apparent. Man becomes appealing when he tries his best to laugh and joke at his own inadequacy. Lazarus at the end of dinner swapping funny stories with his guests could make us feel a great deal softer than Job with all his misfortunes. Job, at least, knew what it was all about.

Ruth Gordon's Ecstasy.

AND so the young moron who provides the laughs in "Tweedles" is not an altogether comic figure to us. We grinned at the things that he said and did, but we felt a little bitter also that his dignity should be put upon so shamefully. Dignity, by the way, ought to have been mentioned in the Declaration of Independence as an inalienable human right. It is fully as important as the pursuit of happiness.

The heroine of "Tweedles" is also a somewhat ridiculous figure. We were mellowed, then, when she and the moron fell in love. Even though Tarkington pretended to be playful about this passion we feel sure that he was impressed by it. Certainly Ruth Gordon was. There were times when she looked at the young silly who was her beau with a rapt expression such as might have fitted a figure in the niche of a church. After all he was the only person she had ever loved and it was absolutely essential that she should think of him as a somebody.

Donald Meek's Triumph.

NOT many plays which come along this season are likely to be better acted than "Tweedles." Donald Meek, for instance, gives one of the most completely comic performances we have ever seen. Moreover, he served to make the reviewer humble and avoid generalities and set taboos. Until seeing "Tweedles" we should have felt perfectly safe in saying, "The most overworked figure in the American theater is the country Constable. He has been done so often that there isn't a remote possibility of making him amusing any more. The thing is just a stencil. If we ever see another comic Constable on the stage we shall cry out in agony."

And then we saw Donald Meek as Philemon Tweedle. He had a star on his coat and all the rest of it. But in spite of the thousands who have gone before him he was funny and he was real.

Now and again we begin to feel strongly about the undiscovered geniuses of the theater. At such times we feel sure that talent is lying about everywhere frosted by neglect. And so we were delighted at the announcement of Will Morrissey that all the people in his show, "The Newcomers," were new. It isn't enough. We went and saw them. In fact we are now convinced that an actor or an actress may be entirely ordinary even if the world never has heard of him.

Patricia Salmon Stops Show at 'Follies' Debut

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.

OUT of the West and into the Ziegfeld ''Follies'' came Patricia Salmon last Monday night, and the patrons, many of them Westerners in town for Tex Austin's rodeo, gave her a plainsman's welcome. She sang a song, gargled a yodel and exchanged quips and pleasantries with other members of her act. At the curtain she received three vociferous recalls from a happily diverted audience.

The setting was a panorama of the town of Shelby, Mont., where Miss Salmon was discovered by drama critics sent thither to cover the Dempsey-Gibbons prize fight. In the foreground were the famous banks, bereft of the famous $300,000, while on the bluff loomed the arena. Miss Salmon and a quartet of boys from the wide open spaces were revealed idling by the cook tent of the tent-show in which she was playing during the week of the combat.

The outstanding diversion of the act was Miss Salmon's yodel. It was a fine, free yodeling song, with none of the frivolous graces of the Swiss milk-chocolate school. It was more of an old-time minstrel yodel, with a rollicking abandon of the larnyx seldom encountered in the present effete state of this once fine art.

"Rogers" and "Garages."

THEN, too, she sang a ballad both tender and naive, with rhymes which would have excited emotion in W. S. Gilbert, to the effect that she "gave up Jimmy Rogers, who owned two garages," and also "passed up Dan McKiver, the taxicab driver," and in addition, "I'll tell you, no joshing, I'm taking in washing." These tragedies, if we may believe the refrain, were "All for the love of Mike."

According to the Times, "Miss Salmon revealed an attractive appearance and a sweet and adequately powerful voice. Her efforts met with the thunderous approval of the audience, whose celebrities included Will H. Hays, and the applause temporarily halted the start of the next act. There were those who feared her appearance would demonstrate again the advisability of letting gems of purest ray serene blush all unseen in their native tent shows. These pessimists were happily surprised."

The Evening World critic—no other than Bide Dudley, one of Miss Salmon's discoverers—justified his opinion as follows: "From a tent show in Shelby to the 'Follies' in a month is a long leap, but little Patsy made it and landed squarely on both feet. Her contribution to the show is refreshing in its newness. With her simplicity and Western sweetness, Miss Salmon gave the Ziegfeld show a new note."

"Miss Salmon sang three songs," remarked the Herald reviewer, "selected by herself, entitled 'All for the Love of Mike,' 'Sleep, Baby Sleep,' and 'The Swiss Mountaineer,' during which her yodeling punched the air as full of holes as a Swiss cheese. The first night audience was very cordial to Miss Salmon.

"She seemed a bit nervous at first, but soon regained a poise which carried her voice, you might say, clear across the continent without any broadcasting apparatus."

Applaud for 17 Minutes.

SAID the Tribune: "Journalists who neglected the fight at Shelby, Mont., to inundate their respective papers with accounts of Patricia the marvelous, daughter of a juggler, tent-player and untraveled aboriginal of the West, were vindicated last night when Miss Salmon of Whitefish made her 'Follies' debut.

"Heywood Broun and Bide Dudley, the little performer's chief sponsors, may breathe freely again

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

MARY PICKFORD is about to fulfill her promise of two pictures this year. Almost simultaneous with the New York opening of "Rosita," her recently completed offering, she will launch forth upon a new cinema venture—a version of the widely read Charles Major novel, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

In "Stephen Steps Out," Douglas Fairbanks Jr.'s first Paramount starring picture, Theodore Roberts is to be featured with the 13-year-old star, with Noah Beery and Harry Myers heading the list of supporting players. Frank Carrier and Bertram Johns are also to be members of the cast.

James Cruze has completed "Ruggles of Red Gap," his production for Paramount of Harry Leon Wilson's popular novel, with Edward Horton, Ernest Torrence, Louis Wilson, Fritzi Ridgeway, Charles Ogle and Louise Dresser featured.

Widespread popularity is predicted for the film version of "West of the Water Tower," by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president in charge of production of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. It will be Glenn Hunter's first starring picture for Paramount. Work on it has just been started at the Long Island studio.

Announcement has been made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation that Percy MacKaye's "Scarecrow," the third of the Film Guild Productions for release through Hodkinson and starring Glen Hunter, has been titled "Puritan Passions."

John Griffith Wray kept Blanche Sweet, William Russell and George Marion, the principal actors in "Anna Christie," rehearsing all one day for a scene which is probably the longest continuous emotional scene in the films. They were then too tired for the filming, so Wray sent them home for a night's rest before using the camera.

Eddie Phillips has started work as a young college boy, a leading role in "George Washington Jr.," for Warner Brothers, before completing his underworld part of the Glad-Rags Kid in "The Daughter of Mother McGinn," for Cosmopolitan. However, the remaining scenes in the latter are night ones, so by strenuous work he can handle both at once.

Two of the prize screen roles of the season were awarded this week. Corinne Griffith was selected to play Madame Zattiany, Gertrude Atherton's middle-aged heroine who is rejuvenated by science, in the screen version of Miss Atherton's celebrated best seller, "Black Oxen." At the same time Blanche Sweet was chosen by Thomas H. Ince to play the title role in "Anna Christie."

Interest is being evinced in the forthcoming of the Associated Authors' production of "Richard The Lion Hearted." This cinematic attraction is based on the Sir Walter Scott novel, "The Talisman" and relates the adventures of King Richard during the time he left his kingdom on the Third Crusade. Wallace Beery will be seen in the title role, one he made famous in "Robin Hood." The cast includes Charles Gerrard, Kathleen Clifford, Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers, Clarence Geldert, George Siegman, and Wilbur Higby.

"Dust of Desire," a story of love and political intrigue in Algeria, is to be Norma Talmadge's next First National special. In this picture she portrays a native dancing girl who is used as a decoy by native leaders who are plotting the overthrow of the French. Joseph Schildkraut will enact the leading masculine role. Others chosen for principal parts are Arthur Edmund Carew, Hector Sarno, Laurence Wheat, Earl Schenck and Mario Carrillo.

Phillips Smalley is the latest addition to the cast of "Flaming Youth." The play, an adaptation of Warner Fabian's story, is being interpreted by a cast including Colleen Moore, Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Myrtle Stedman, Sylvia Breamer and Ben Lyon.

Three members have been added to the cast of "The Dangerous Maid," the 17th century English comedy drama in which Constance Talmadge is starring for First National. They are Otto Matiesen, Danish character actor; Wilson Hummel and Ann May. Mattiesen will play Lord Chief Justice Jeffreys, Hummel will enact the role of his secretary and Miss May will appear as a 17th century "flapper."

Ben Alexander, who played "Penrod" in "Penrod and Sam," will have a prominent role in Maurice Tourneur's next First National feature "Jealous Fools," a story of Paris slum life.

The leading role in Rida Johnson Young's picturesque play, "Maytime," which Peggy Wood first enacted on the New York stage, has been given to Ethel Shannon to portray in the film version soon to be started by Preferred Pictures.

"The Scarlet Lily" is the next of Katherine MacDonald's starring vehicles to be distributed to the theaters of the country via First National. The story is described as a domestic drama, moving against a lavish society background, with Miss MacDonald in the role of a misunderstood wife. The star's supporting cast includes Orville Caldwell, Stuart Holmes, Edith Lyle, Adele Farrington, Gordon Russell, Grace Morse, Jane Miskinin and Lincoln Stedman. Victor Schertzinger directed. "The Scarlet Lily" is presented by B. P. Schulberg through First National.

A stable of 20 horses and 30 burros is a feature of the filming of a big robbery scene made at Aladdin Rock Farm near Stamford, Conn., for Marion Davies' next Cosmopolitan picture, "Yolanda." This is a costume picture of the fifteenth century. Charles Major was author of the book.

Corinne Griffith, in "The Common Law"—Kings.

"Broadway Gold" "The Broken Wing" and "Salomy Jane"

"The Common Law" Goes Into Second Week at Kings—Delmonte Has Big Review of Metro Successes.

A FILM version of Bret Harte's "Salomy Jane" is the feature attraction at the Missouri Theater starting Saturday. Jacqueline Logan is the star of the picture which depicts the history of California in the historical days of '49. The story was filmed where Bret Harte conceived the story. The indefinable atmosphere of the gold rush is reproduced. The robbery of the old stage coach, the ride of the Vigilantes through a great storm and the dramatic rescue of the hero by the girl are some of the high spots. Barney Rapp and his Hotel Chase Orchestra are retained another week. Joseph Littau, new conductor of the Missouri grand orchestra, offers selections from "Pagliacci." Tom Terry, organist, plays "Morning, Noon and Night," by Von Suppe. John Rohan, tenor, sings several popular numbers. A comedy and news weekly complete the bill.

The second week of the Municipal Opera stars and the introduction on Grand avenue of a new screen favorite feature the week's program at the Grand Central. Elaine Hammerstein is the cinema artist. The picture is "Broadway Gold" and the supporting cast includes Kathlyn Williams and Elliott Dexter.

The Municipal Opera favorites, including Frank Moulan, Elsie Thiede, Craig Campbell, Detmar Poppen and Grace Brinkley, offer a presentation, "At the Roof," a scene showing a roof garden in which they present a cycle of songs and a series of dances. Popular numbers and selections from the comic operas in which they have appeared will make up the program.

"Broadway Gold" opens backstage in a New York theater, but following this brief scene does not touch on the city's theatrical life. It concerns the mysterious murder of a well-known man, with evidence strongly pointing to Sunny Duane, an innocent chorus girl.

A film version of the Paul Dicky-Walter S. Goddard stage piece, "The Broken Wing," is this week's offering at the Lyric Skydome and Capitol Theaters. The cast includes Kenneth Harlan, Miriam Cooper, Walter Long and Miss Du Pont. A Harold Lloyd comedy revival, "Haunted Spooks," and the musical specialties by Dave Silverman's orchestra at the Skydome and Billy Kitts' at the Capitol will be added features.

"The Broken Wing" is a story of air thrills and romantic complications on the Mexican border when a dashing young airman strives to make a cross-country flight. He runs into serious trouble and, with the snapping of a wire that causes a broken wing, plunges into the living room of an old Spanish family.

The shock results in the loss of memory and he falls in love with the daughter of the house. A Mexican bandit who also loves the girl takes advantage of a chance to imprison his rival, but then comes the unexpected "twist" that introduces mystery into the story.

Douglas MacLean will be featured at the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric the last half of the week in "The Sunshine Trail," a light comedy.

The management of the Delmonte Theater has arranged another big revival week, starting today. Nothing but Metro productions will be shown, with a change of program daily. The schedule:

Today and Monday, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," featuring Rodolph Valentino and Alice Terry.

Tuesday, Mae Murray in "Peacock Alley."

Wednesday, another Rex Ingram production, "Turn to the Right."

Thursday, Rodolph Valentino and Alice Terry in "The Conquering Power."

Friday, Ina Claire in "Polly With a Past."

Saturday, Rodolph Valentino and Mme. Nazimova in "Camille."

A Hall Room Boy comedy, "Dumb Waiters," will be shown daily.

The musical score, which was especially written for "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," will be played by the Delmonte orchestra.

As an extra attraction the management has arranged the Delmonte Municipal Revue, featuring Elmer Lutz, Laura Tuckerman and Louise Heimueller, winners of the $500 Municipal Opera scholarships. Members of the Municipal Opera chorus also will appear.

Gladys Walton in "The Untameable" is featured at the Rivoli this week. She enacts a dual role. An orphan with a great inheritance she falls into the hands of an unscrupulous doctor, who tries to gain her wealth through hypnotic influence. He is on the verge of success when another enters into the plot and thwarts the scheme. Malcolm McGregor and Etta Lee are the other principals. On the program also is a Baby Peggy comedy.

"The Common Law," a moving picture of rare distinction, goes into its second week at the Kings Theater. This is a picturization of a famous Robert W. Chambers novel. The settings and appointments have unusual beauty and grandeur and there is a notable cast with Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle in the leading roles.

The Greater Movie Season is Here

THE progress of the art of the movies is so swift that if you were to leave this planet for one season, and then visit, say, The Missouri Theater, you would exclaim:

"Why, this new art makes as much progress in ninety days as other arts have in ninety years!"

The arts of painting, music and sculpture took centuries to develop. Sometimes many years would pass in between one work of importance and the next.

The motion picture is a fusing of several old arts with several new ones, and its power to please and thrill millions is in proportion.

Amid a raking fire of criticism from every angle—intellectual, moral, commercial—it has accomplished its early growth with tropical energy.

And in so brief a period!—anybody over twenty-one can remember the time when there was hardly a worth while picture to be seen or a comfortable theatre in which to see it!

But now, the first of the Greater Movie Seasons is here!

New and splendid triumphs of dramatic voltage are visible.

Remember only the pictures of the past that caused you to live more vividly—the principles of their production have been developed hand over fist in these pictures of this greater season—and they are ready for you now.

The Greater Movie Season is here: prove it by going!

Accept the Helpful, Personal Service that goes with American Express Travelers Cheques

Helpful, personal Service to American travelers, varied as it is full and efficient—is the aim of more than 2,000 American Express employees abroad—and of more than 30,000 Express offices in the United States and Canada.

It is this individual Service, added to their insured money value everywhere that makes American Express Travelers Cheques the most desirable form of travel funds.

ABROAD—the American traveler is always directed to an American Express office for anything he wants or wants to know. 32 years of experience in helping travelers everywhere has given this Service its "magic" fame.

AT HOME—the United States and Canada, Express offices not only cash American Express Travelers Cheques, but render any local assistance to the traveler, in their power. These Cheques are honored everywhere by banks, and accepted at hotels, shops, on Pullmans, etc. The signature of the owner, signed when the Cheque is presented, to duplicate his signature, signed on the Cheque when it is purchased, insures and protects its money value.

Some Human Facts and Figures of American Express Service Abroad

American interpreters and couriers meet steamships and are at important railway terminals and frontier stations. Our offices are headquarters for business or social purposes; mail and cablegram address; home newspapers; help in arranging business deals or shopping; local tours; return steamship passage; shipment of foreign purchases.

In Paris alone, 501 American Express men are serving visiting travelers; 50 of them exclusively arranging further travel.

Upwards of 300,000 letters and 50,000 newspapers addressed to our patrons, and 20,000 forwarding instructions are cared for each year by the Paris office alone, as a courtesy to our patrons—35 people are required for this mail work.

New equipment enables us to handle 20,000 letters a day.

Each train or boat arrival brings its load of Americans carrying American Express Travel funds. Day by day we are called upon to tell them what to see, where to buy, send them to doctors, dentists, opticians, hotels and restaurants; and to help business men, who do not speak French, conduct their business deals.

And, as in Paris, so in London, Rome, Hongkong, Calcutta, Cairo; wherever travel for business or pleasure is paramount, there you will find American Express Service—an expert, human, personal Service—extended fully and freely with the hospitable spirit and business efficiency of a great American institution.

As an additional safeguard, and for greater convenience, use the $250 and $500 American Express Travelers Cheque Exchange Orders. These Orders are convertible into regular Travelers Cheques of smaller denominations without extra cost at American Express offices.

Grand Guignol Is Soon Coming to America

By a Special Correspondent of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Aug. 4.

SHORTLY before I sailed for France, I was told that the Grand Guignol Theater is the mecca of all tourists visiting Paris. The full reason was not clear to me until I had actually visited this curious little playhouse tucked away in the Rue Chaptal.

As I sat last night galvanized by the terrifying sense of reality created by Andre de Lorde on the tiny stage of this the smallest theater in the world, I was fully conscious that it is like nothing else, for in no other house where the drama is presented may one traverse such especial spheres of life and its emotions. I learned afterward from M. Camille Choisy, present director of the destinies of the Theatre du Grand Guignol, that it was for the purpose of dramatizing these especial spheres that the Grand Guignol organization began its existence 35 years ago.

It seems that M. Oscar Metenier conceived an idea of a theater which would be a sort of dramatic museum presenting the realities of life—its ordeals, its brutalities, its enchantments, its violences and its beauties, without discrimination. To furnish relief from the tension necessarily created by the hair-raising plays of such dramatists as Andre de Lorde, M. Metenier selected a couple of spirited comedies for each bill of short plays.

Housed in Artist's Studio.

THOROUGHLY in sympathy with Metenier was M. Rochegrosse, the distinguished French painter, who offered his studio, located at the further end of the Cite Chaptal, for the establishment of Metenier's unique theater. Owing to the diminutive size of the stage it was decided to call it the Theatre du Grand Guignol (Theater of the Big Puppet-Show), and thus began an organization which has for 35 years attracted the attention of the entire world.

"It wasn't so easy as it sounds though," M. Choisy assured me, as I shuddered out of my tiny box at the back of the Theater du Grand Guignol when the curtain was lowered after the presentation of Andre de Lorde's creepy "Figures de Cire."

"It is a great satisfaction to be director of this remarkable organization now, but when Metenier launched the Grand Guignol idea it was an uphill road to gain the attention of the public," M. Choisy told me, "Metenier began with a thriller of his own, entitled 'Lui,' and De Lorde's 'Le Systeme du Docteur Goudron et du Proffesseur Plume.' The novelty of both went forth, and a curious public stuck its nose in the tiny doors of the Theater du Grand Guignol to see what it was all about. Shuddering with horror, the first comers fled the place. For a time the reaction was bad for business. But the first Grand Guignol plays had stirred the imagination of Paris, and once stirred it had to be further satisfied. The crowds came. Then the tourists arrived—and the project was launched.

"These first plays with their compelling originality will be included in the 10 weeks' engagement in New York, when the Selwyns present the Grand Guignol Players to America in October. Although we have a repertoire of more than 200 plays, there are none more vivid or more virile," the present Grand Guignol director concluded, as the uncanny pounding which announces the curtain was heard through the little lobby of the curious playhouse, where the audience was refreshing itself with beer or Bordeaux.

A Terrifying Performance.

I FOUND once more the tiny box where once again I sat gripping the edge of my chair through "Sur La Dalle," a one-act drama by George Simone Hermann and Robert Seller.

No women in the cast of "Sur La Dalle;" no love story, yet never was there greater drama on any stage. Nor greater acting. Bernier brought the house to its feet 15 times. One needed no understanding of the French language, for Bernier spoke the common tongue of human emotion, and spoke it with terrifying virility. With flawless psychology one saw the cruel trick of a human brain turned back with tragic consequences upon the mind which conceived it.

M. Buarini and M. Rabini have charge of the American engagement. Rabini will personally accompany the organization to New York. Bernier, Brizard, Defresne, Mlle Duclos, seen here in Paris, props and costumes, will all be transferred to America.

I have found that every Frenchman will consider it a personal calamity if the Theater du Grand Guignol is not received in America with an appreciation of its distinctive art as great as that accorded it here. It is a question of national pride—this plan to transfer the Grand Guignol organization to New York in October—and every real Parisian with whom I have talked feels that it will be an intolerable reflection on France if the project falls short of the most brilliant success.

Orpheum and Gayety Reopen Next Sunday.

THE Orpheum and Gayety theaters will reopen with matinees next Sunday, and the Rialto will resume operations on Sept. 2. The Orpheum, for its seventh season, promises an early appearance of Ethel Barrymore in Barrie's "The Twelve-Pound Look." The Gayety will begin with a two weeks' engagement of Jimmy Cooper's Revue.

The variety bill at the Grand Opera House this week includes the Bob Pender troupe, Bob and Peggy Valentine in a comedy, "On a Moonlight Night"; the Four Bell Hops, in a skit called "In the Lobby"; W. C. Dornfield, late of the Elsie Janis company, in a chatter turn; Carol and Louise Dore, violinist and pianist, and Arthur Nelson's happy family of cats and rats.

PATRICIA SALMON STOPS SHOW AT FOLLIES' DEBUT

in the knowledge that their critical reputations are safe. Their protege stepped on the New Amsterdam stage, sang three brief songs and batted her big brown eyes, after which the audience stopped the show with fully 17 minutes of such applause as the sophisticated acoustics of Mr. Zeigfeld's playhouse seldom have experienced."

The Daily News related that the hit of the act was Miss Salmon's retelling the romantic story of her summons by Ziegfeld after making a hit with newspaper men at the big fight. "Then she sang the songs she has been singing to the cowboys out West. Enthusiastic applause greeted her yodels, especially 'The Swiss Mountaineer,' written by her father, Barney Salmon. For a moment Broadway forgot to be sophisticated, and enjoyed them as much as Shelby. Miss Salmon appeared first in cowgirl garb, and then in a simple frock bought for her by Billie Burke. The girl's stage appearance is attractive, and her manner is modest."

Another Play After Dickens.

A PLAY based on "The Mystery of Edward Drood," by Dickens, has been turned out by Guy Bolton and Everett Shinn, and will probably be played by Norman Trevor next season. * * * William Faversham and Emily Stevens are to appear in a new play by Monckton Hoffe. * * * William Archer, critic and author of "The Green Goddess," has written a play based on the life of Martha Washington. * * * Michel Fakine is rehearsing a ballet and pantomime for "Casanova," which opens in Baltimore on Sept. 10. Lowell Sherman will play the famous philanderer, and three of the ladies who appear as his victims, or beneficiaries, will Be Marry Ellis, Gypsy O'Brien and Irene Vanessi. "The Mad Honeymoon" creaked away to the storehouse tonight, after a span of two weeks at the playhouse.

It is now decided that the Ziegfeld "Follies" will close at the New Amsterdam Theater on Sept. 15, and on the following Monday will take to the road, with Boston as the first stop. It will have played 67 continuous weeks in New York. "Sally" will return to the New Amsterdam for two weeks, with the original cast, including Marilynn Miller, Leon Errol and Walter Catlett, and will then be sent on tour to make room for the eighteenth edition of the "Follies," now in preparation. For the first time, two organizations called the Ziegfeld "Follies" will be playing simultaneously.

When Pauline Lord returns from London at the end of this month, she will find a new play awaiting her in the office of her manager. She remained abroad after the other members of the cast of "Anna Christie" sailed for home. . . The new all-negro revue from the pens of Aubrey Lyle and Flourney Miller, and financed by George White, will be called "Running Wild," following a court decision against the proposed use of "Shuffle Along second edition," as a title.

Jolson to Tour in "Bombo."

IT is announced that Al Jolson has been signed up to play another year, on the road in "Bombo," including a tour of the South, a section in which he has never before appeared. . . Florence Reed is to star in Edward Knobloch's new play, "The Lullaby." . . . George M. Cohan's latest opus, "So This Is Broadway," starring Lynn Overman, and Frederick Lonsdale's drama, "But for the Grace of God," will have their premieres in Chicago instead of New York. . . Neysa McMein, artist, will sit in final judgment on the selection of girls for the forthcoming "Music Box Revue." . . . Rube Goldberg, cartoonist, has been engaged to indite some lyrics for the "Greenwich Village Follies."

PATRICIA SALMON STOPS SHOW AT FOLLIES' DEBUT

Under the name of "Enter Kiki," an English adaptation of Andre Picard's comedy, has been presented in London, with Gladys Cooper and Ivor Novello in the cast. According to the verdict of the critics, the work is not destined to reach a ripe old age over there, despite its long run, with Lenore Ulric, in New York. . . The report comes that David Belasco and Lionel Atwill have parted company professionally. . . . John Drinkwater lets it be known that his "Robert E. Lee" will be produced in Richmond, Va., in a few weeks.

Jacinto Benavente, the Spanish playwright, confides to an inquiring newspaper correspondent in Madrid that in the future he will write exclusively for the United States. The difficulties of production and the harshness of the critics in Spain, he says, make it impossible for him to write anything for his native land. He says he found American critics "absolutely impartial." Senor Benavente will return to this country in March. . . "Minnie and Me," having failed to create a pandemonium in Boston, is being rewritten by Zelda Sears.

Zoe Akins is doing the adaptation of Molnar's "The Swan," which the Frohmans will produce in September. . . . Ethel Barrymore and David Wallace are collaborating in a series of short stories of theatrical life. . . In an effort to prevent the nuisance of late arrivals, the producers of "The Breaking Point" will try to enforce a new rule expressed in these words, printed on the back of each ticket: "Void if not presented before 8:30 p. m." . . . Else Janis has signed up for a concert tour, including St. Louis.

St. Louisan in Opera.

ELDA VETTORI, former St. Louisan, has been engaged to sing dramatic soprano roles next season with the San Carlo Opera Co., both in New York and on tour. She was born in Venice and came to this country when a child. She became a member of the cast of the Delmar Garden Stock Co. in St. Louis, made her operatic debut at the Odeon some years ago in "Cavalleria Rusticana," and appeared in the open-air production of "Aida" in Forest Park. She has since been coaching in New York under Signor Riccardo Dellera of the Metropolitan Opera staff. Present arrangements look forward to appearance for Miss Vettori in "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Aida," "La Tosca," "Boheme," "Il Trovatore" and "Madame Butterfly."

"Alice in Wonderland," developed into an opera by Edgar Stillman Kelley, has had its premiere recently at the hands of the summer opera company of Cincinnati. The version is in six scenes and takes about an hour for performance. The work was pronounced admirably adapted to the entertainment of children. It is scored for full symphony orchestra. The scenes deal with Alice's meeting with the white rabbit, Alice and the Cheshire cat, the Caucus Race, the Forest of Forgetfulness, the Lion and the Unicorn and the banquet in the palace of the Red Queen.

GRAINS O' GOODNESS

Acre after acre of golden, sun-ripened barley yields the grain for Bohemian Malt Syrup.

Only the choicest grade and only the fully matured grains are used, however. Experience, over a period of more than 75 years, has taught us that inferior grain must be culled out if the finest Barley Malt Extract is to be obtained.

It is this care in selection and manufacture that gives that mellow, inimitable, quality flavor to—

REDUCTION IN PRICES BY WILLYS-OVERLAND

Notification of Cut in Wilys-Oevrland Line Surprises Motor Industry.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 18.—John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, O., today caused a furore in automobile circles by his announcement of immediate price reductions and great improvements in the 1923 Willys-Overland line.

This action, embracing a drop in price on the Willys-Knight touring car and roadster models from $1235 to $1175, f. o. b. factory, and on the Willys-Knight coupe sedan from $1595 to $1550, came as a distinct surprise to the automobile industry and motoring public.

The new values in Willys-Knight and Overland cars are the direct result of the sales and production records by the Willys-Overland company this year, eclipsing any previous period in its history, which determined the officials of the company to share with the public the appreciable saving in costs made possible by an enormous increase in business.

This announcement has great significance because it marks a new valuation record for automotive products in the face of a generally rising market in raw materials.

Traffic Shows Farm to Market Trend.

Traffic studies made by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads show an increasing flow of commodities from farm to market by motor truck, indicating the influence highway transport is having on rural life. At the same time, according to Firestone truck tire men, economic studies by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce disclose a growing use of automobiles by those formerly living in the city, but who now are suburbanites or even living in rural districts contiguous to some cities.

Tire production 1922 was 36,340,000 while the number of persons employed in motor vehicle and allied lines numbered 2,431,400, according to Firestone statisticians.

1924 STEARNS-KNIGHT "FOUR" IS ON DISPLAY

The 1924 Stearns-Knight "Four" five-passenger touring car is being displayed by the Schroeder Motor Company, distributors, at their salesroom, 3506 Lindell boulevard.

The new car sells at $1595, F. O. B. Cleveland, and for $1765 laid down in St. Louis with extra tire and cover. It has 119 inch wheel base and the same motor used so successfully in the 1921, 1922 and 1923 models. The regular five-passenger touring car comes finished in the stylish biege brown color. Closed models will be on show at the Schroeder salesroom within the next ten days. Vari-colored bodies form the completed line. The 4-passenger is Midnight Blue; the Coupe-Brougham, Brewster Green; the Sedan, dark Gunmetal Gray.

ENTHUSE ABOUT CITY AS BUILDER OF TRUCKS

St. Louis is to take its place as a truck manufacturing center if the prediction of two prominent northern automobile parts manufacturers comes true.

James H. Foster, president of the Hydraulic Press Steel Co. of Cleveland, and F. H. Moor, vice president of the Wisconsin Parts Co. of Oskosh, Wis., spent several days here last week visiting officials of Victor Motors, Inc., completing arrangements for co-operating with the Victor Co. in the furnishing of parts for the manufacture of the six models of Victors, including speed and heavy duty trucks, taxicabs and busses.

Both Foster and Moor are enthusiastic about this new St. Louis enterprise and have promised every co-operation possible in building up a large production.

Competition for Polish Market.

Adverse foreign exchange rates have little effect on the market for American cars in Poland, for there is no domestic manufacture of motor vehicles in that country, according to S. J. Dalferes, American vice consul at Warsaw. The Polish purchaser of a motor car or motor truck must figure his cost from foreign currency.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB INSPECTS ROUTES

Covers Highways Between St. Louis and Kansas City to Settle Controversy.

Because of a controversy over routes and at the request of commercial clubs of cities in the central part of the state, the Automobile Club of Missouri recently sent a scouting party between St. Louis and Kansas City, and has just made public the log of the inspection trip between St. Louis and Fulton, the preferable route was found to be through St. Gharles and Warrenton. From Fulton to Kansas City, the situation was as follows:

Over the northern route, through Columbia and Boonville there were 112 miles of good roads and 76 miles of bad roads.

Over the southern route, through Jefferson City, Sedalia and Warrensburg, there were 144 miles of good roads and 58 miles of bad roads.

The northern route is 13 miles shorter than the southern route but the trip over the southern route was made an hour faster because of better roads and because crossing of the river is made by bridge instead of by ferry, as on the northern route.

The Automobile Club of Missouri has adopted the policy of giving inquiring tourists the logs and maps of both routes, together with late information concerning rains and detours, and letting the tourists decide whether he wants to go through Columbia, the home of the State university, or Jefferson City, the State capital.

Market Movement Aids Poultrymen.

Motor camping during the summer season reverses the familiar farm-to-market movement of certain products to a market-to-farm situation. Especially is this noticeable in the sale of eggs. Thousands of farm houses along the State roads are offering "Fresh Eggs" to the tourist customer.

Meriden, Conn., displaces the usual command to slow down to a specified number of miles per hour by a sign which requests "Please Drive Considerately."

GARDNER WINS RACE HELD AT EVANSVILLE

Racing against a splendid field of entries, a Gardner Special driven by "Red" Campbell, well known race driver of Benton, Ill., won the annual twenty-eight and one-eighth mile Tri-State classic at Dade Park, Evansville, Ind., according to a report just received from the Gardner Motor Co., of St. Louis.

Campbell's time for the twenty-eight and one-eighth mile grind was 31 minutes, 29 2-5 seconds.

Winners:

First—Red Campbell, Benton, Ill., Gardner, 31:29 2-5.

Second—Ed Bell, Owensboro, Ky., Chevrolet, 31:43¼.

Third—Charles Rogers, Jr., Owensboro, Ky., Chevrolet, 33:13½.

Fourth—E. K. Tabscott, Owensboro, H. M. Special, 34:22.

Fifth—Marion Walker, Louisville, Hupp Special, 37:27.

TELLS AUTOMOBILISTS TO "HIT THE DIRT"

Many automobilists drive thousands of miles each season yet never see the real country, according to E. H. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Automobile Co., distributors of the Oakland car, Pontiac, Mich. With the summer waning and autumn, one of the most beautiful motoring periods of the year, approaching, he advises pleasure drivers to "hit the dirt."

"Stay on the concrete if you are bound for a specified destination," he says, "but if you are taking the family out for a week-end or Sunday trip away from the city leave the improved, main-line arteries once in a while. Those dirt crossroads you so scornfully shoot past are not as bumpy as you think; they are far safer to drive on and lead to enchanting places you never dreamed were so near home.

"Along the road are real farms, not a few acres of tilled ground just existing until the real estate speculator cuts them up in subdivisions. Likely there will be a stretch of forest with big trees casting their shade over the road. Further on is a brook with grassy slopes that invite the family to spend an hour in old-time picnic style.

"What if there are a few ruts? Automobiles today are built to stand strains, and, anyway, a rough place in the road taken at moderate speed does not hurt a car as much as the sudden brake application to speeding cars on concrete.

"Speed is no object, at 15 to 20 miles an hour one can view the scenery with real enjoyment, and if there is a particularly beautiful view, one can halt at the side of the road without the fear of having a score or more of impatient drivers honking to pass."

AUTOMOBILE DEALER WINS BASEBALL FLAGS

William Groff, secretary of the Ward-Groff Motor Corporation, could probably get a job in the big leagues based on his reputation, providing he would give up handling the Cleveland Six. This is the fourth year Groff has had a team in the Municipal Baseball League.

Three straight years Groff's team won the division pennant and played for the city title. Once his team won the city championship and, according to authorities, it is the only St. Louis Municipal champion that has won every game played in intercity series.

This year Groff's team in the Independent League is called the Cleveland Sixes. But two games have been lost this year and two remain to be played. If the Cleveland Sixes win either one or if the Rexalls, the runners-up, lose one of their three games, a team of William Groff's will be playing for another championship.

NEW TWO-TON MODEL GENERAL MOTORS TRUCK

A new model in a two-ton truck with a wheel base of 191½ inches has been added to the regular line of the General Motors Truck Co. of Pontiac, Mich.

The new model was added by this company to meet the demand of lumbermen, furniture dealers and moving van operators for a truck which would cart a long body but at the same time not demand an excessive weight.

It has also been found that this chassis is admirably suited to bus work and the factory has made special provision to equip this new model with vacuum tank, pneumatic tires, special fenders, gas tank and extra large generator.

JULY FORD PRODUCTION SETS TWO NEW RECORDS

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 18.—July brought two new sales records to the Ford Motor Co.

July carried the sales figures for the year past the million mark. Figures, just announced, show that from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1 this year sales of cars and trucks by the Ford Motor Co. totaled 1,050,966 in the United States alone. Sales for the first seven months of the year were 391,796 greater than for the same period last year when they totaled 659,190.

July sales mounted to 156,908, an increase of 36,821 over the same month a year ago.

Housewife Profits From Tourists.

Home owners are making a profit from the tourist trade this summer by letting rooms to motor campers. The number of signs offering these accommodations are legion. Prices are around 50 cents to $1 per room per night. This movement does not compete particularly with the hotel trade, but offers a change to the tenting tourist.

1905 CAR STILL RUNS; FIRST OWNER HAS IT

Among the interesting records uncovered by the Franklin Automobile Co. as a part of its Twenty-first Sales Anniversary Celebration is the fact that a 1905 Franklin runabout is still running and is being operated by W. R. Elliott of East Grand Forks, Minn., the original purchaser.

It has been driven over 200,000 miles and runs like a clock today, according to the owner. It is still in daily use and Mr. Elliitt says he would not part with it at any price inasmuch as no car made today is as good, according to Mr. Elliott's theory. During eighteen years, it has cost him less than $100 for repairs.

—He Preferred to Save His Automobile

He has driven his car 12,715 miles, using a little less than thirty-nine gallons of Streett's Motor Oil [heavy pale] with sixteen complete crankcase drainings.

If he had used cheaper oil, he could have saved 25c. a gallon, or about $9.75. The way his engine operates now convinces him that he has saved many times this amount in the conservation of his car.

If you want to talk to him, we will tell you his name. Use Streett's Motor Oil of the consistency recommended for your car, and you will feel as he does about it.

Hupmobile Motor Smoother, More Powerful

More than ever, the Hupmobile motor satisfies those performance demands upon which nearly all motor car owners are most insistent.

To say that it is the smoothest, steadiest motor Hupmobile ever built will signify much to you when you realize that Hupmobile motors have always been especially noted for smooth and steady going.

The Hupmobile motor of the past was greatly admired for its instant settling down to quiet, easy action. In the motor of the new Hupmobile, this feature has been heightened. You will now notice a new quality in its performance, which actually conveys a coasting, skimming sensation.

This is accomplished through still smoother motor operation, still better engine operating balance, an increase of power.

The crankshaft is heavier, and counterbalanced, with bearing areas 20 per cent larger. The pistons and connecting rods are lighter.

The new Hupmobile is like a flash in getaway. It drives with delightful ease. A new two-plate clutch affords silent gear changes at all speeds.

Come in and see this more beautiful, larger, longer car. A fifteen minute ride will prove what a brilliant performer it is,—and we will be delighted to demonstrate.

TELLS OF HUDSON SEDANS HISTORY

"In offering the new five-passenger sedan at a list price of less than $2000, the Hudson Motor Car Co. is keeping up the fast pace it has always set for this type of car," says A. S. Frampton, vice president of Hudson-Frampton Co., distributor here for Hudson and Essex cars.

"It is a matter of history that Hudson originated and built the first car of the sedan type in the United States. This was in 1914 with the series of Six Fifty-four cars. Up to that time it had been felt generally that enclosed cars must necessarily be driven by chauffeurs. Hudson changed that idea.

"A little later, when other motor car manufacturers had entered the sedan field, Hudson brought in the sloping front at the windshield. This not only aided in the weather tightness and general visibility of these cars, but it improved the appearance.

"The new five-passenger sedan is an aluminum enclosed car—which insures lightness and a high-luster finish. The upholstery and cloth finishing of the interior are in good taste, and have the practical virtues of long wear. Both front and rear seats are comfortable and restful, and there is ample room for each passenger. Upholstery is extra deep, and the seating angles assure a comfortable posture.

"This car is possible at this price only because every proper economy and specialization is practiced in its construction. It is selling at a recordbreaking pace."

HYMAN IN CHARGE OF STUTZ MOTOR SALES

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 18.—The appointment of Herbert R. Hyman as head of the sales department of the Stutz Motor Car Co., Inc., announced by William N. Thompson, president of the Stutz organization, again marks the rise to a place of highest executive responsibility by a former member of the newspaper fraternity.

The foundation of Hyman's experience in motor car merchandising was laid as a member of the reportorial staff of the Indianapolis Star. Joining the Cole Motor Car Co., Hyman was prominently identified with this concern for seven years, as director of advertising and sales promotion.

Leaving the Cole Co., Hyman joined the staff of the Charles H. Fuller Co. of Chicago, where he remained for little more than a year. During this period, he was retained by the Stutz Co. in an advisory sales and advertising capacity.

When Charles M. Schwab and his associates acquired control of the Stutz Co. a year ago, Hyman was made director of advertising and sales promotion, at the Stutz factory.

His present advancement entrusts into his care every branch of Stutz sales and merchandising activity, giving recognition to the prominent part that he has played in the rapid advance registered by Stutz since the first of the year, during which period sales have doubled last year's output, and the Stutz dealer and distributer organization has more than trebled in size.

NEW FOUR-DOOR NASH COUPE MAKES A HIT

"Outspoken admiration has been expressed by those who have seen the new Nash four-door coupe at our showroom during the past week," says F. C. MacDonald, president of the Southwest Nash Co.

"There is no question but that the new four-door coupe is a destined leader in the closed car field," says MacDonald.

"Through use of every interior inch the car has been made spacious and yet it is so compact that handling is easy. The body, finished in maroon, is set off with black running gear and fenders. Five maroon-toned disc wheels, with the fifth wheel mounted at the rear, are standard equipment. There is a rear view mirror, kick plates, an instrument board with all instruments under glass.

"At the rear of the car is a sturdy trunk, in-built, while strong nickel plated bars add a decorative note. The upholstery is of mohair and is taupe in color."

"Don't overload," is the emphasized advice of Firestone truck tire experts to motor truck operators. It may mean more pay-load for the time being, but the loss of life for your tires will offset your supposed added haulage income.

The E. A. Dodge Motor Co. has been appointed Buick distributer for Madison, Granite City and Venice, Ill. The salesroom is located at 1926 State street, Granite City. E. A. Seeing a chance to develop greater sales with an organization, he formed the new company, which has established itself in a very few days and is already selling a large number of the 1924 four-wheel brake Buicks.

The Best of Everything in the New Jewett Six
Twelve Major Improvements with No Advance in Price

Twelve Major Improvements

1 Larger brake drums.
2 Heavier wheels.
3 Pressure oiled chassis.
4 Improved valve mechanism.
5 Improved Rayfield carburetor.
6 More convenient gear shift.
7 New type spark and throttle control.
8 New instrument board—oval panel.
9 Non-glaring reflectors in headlights.
10 Thicker upholstery in open models.
11 Deeper front seats—tilted.
12 Velour upholstery, closed models.

THOUSANDS of fair drivers have made the new Jewett Six their own—they say it is their ideal personal car. The sedan is especially preferred for its all-weather convenience—its generous capacity on shopping trips—its smart comfort on the afternoon spins with "the girls." Wayside marketing is only one of the many pleasures that they enjoy and you'll see Jewett Sixes everywhere on such buying trips.

Women like Jewett's easy handling. It steers with finger guidance. Parking it is but play. It crawls along in nerve-racking traffic at only 2 miles an hour, its eager motor-heart subdued, quiet, constant. Dainty foot pressure signals it forward instantly—it picks up from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds, in high gear. Seldom is there call for shifting gears—and then a bare 3-inch movement of the lever does it. Paige-type clutch and transmission contribute much to Jewett's quiet, easy handling, its sure, smooth response.

Jewett is husky in its 6-inch-deep frame; in its Paige-Timken axles, front and rear; in its all-steel universal joints. Springs are 80% of wheelbase. Women who drive Jewett revel in its big car riding ease at moderate car cost.

Women, too, quickly grasp the economy of this moderate-priced Paige-built Six—the "six at the price of a four." Long life in Jewett's powerful 50-horsepower motor is assured, they find, because of the high pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system. This sends 2 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings. Months and years of spirited service—continual gay delight in passing most any car on any hill—that's the kind of service Jewett Six gives.

Among the fifty-odd thousand Jewett Six owners the percentage of women drivers is unusually high. Women eagerly seize the opportunity of driving this "he-man" car, because it is utterly safe, perfectly simple in all its operations.

Let your wife have a demonstration. Watch her smile as she thrills to the performance of the new Jewett's 50-horsepower motor—as she senses her easy mastery of such performance.

Uses Double-Check System.

is a system enforced at the Motors Corporation, Moline, that assures the purchaser of a Velle car.

For a long time only one inspector was employed to place the final stamp of approval on Velle cars. He represented the factory. Now the sales department has a skilled man who goes over every part of the car after the factory inspector has done his work.

In commenting on the new system, H. L. Schnure, Velle distributer of St. Louis, said: "This is only another indication of the sincerity of the Velle officials to give the public the best car that can be bought at the price."

You save in first cost when you install dependable Champion Spark Plugs because the price is but 75 cents for the Blue Box Line. You save also in oil and gas and your engine will perform much better.

This is because Champion is a better spark plug as is shown by the fact that it is regular equipment on motor cars from Ford to Rolls-Royce, including more than 70 per cent of the makes of cars selling for $2,000 upwards.

It is better because of its wonderful core—identified by the Double-Rib—which is the greatest insulator ever devised. Champion is sold by dealers everywhere.

TELLS WHY MOTOR CARS CATCH FIRE

Automotive Experts Discusses Seven Causes for Burning Up of Machines.

"Every owner and driver ought to know what to do in case the car begins to burn up," says Erwin Greer, President, Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago, Ill.

"The principal cause of such fires is back firing. The chief cause of back firing is too lean a mixture fed to the cylinders. When there is a back fire a sheet of flame comes from the air intake of the carburetor. If there is anything inflammable nearby it is very apt to catch on fire.

"Gasoline vaporizes so rapidly that if there is gasoline in the drip pan there is almost sure to be a sufficient mixture around the carburetor to make trouble. Therefore, keep the drip pan free from gasoline. See that there is no leak in the supply pipe or in the connection to the carburetor. Also see that there is no overflow coming from the carburetor due to poor seating of the float valve.

"Running a car at high speed for a long distance may cause the exhaust pipe to become hot. If it is next to any wood, this may cause a fire, especially if there is an accumulation of grease and oil on the woodwork. Therefore minimize this danger by driving a little slower than top speed and by keeping the woodwork free from grease and oil.

"The exhaust pipe also heats up when the engine is run with a greatly retarded spark. Sometimes it will become red hot and set the woodwork on fire.

"Fires have been known to catch by opening the muffler cutout in starting up. This danger is greater inside the garage than out of doors, since there is usually more or less of grease and gasoline on the garage floor.

"Another cause of fire comes from short-circuiting of the ignition of lighting systems. A short circuit may heat one of the wires red hot and burn off the insulation. If there is any accumulation of grease or oil or gasoline by, a fire may start.

"Static electricity is sometimes a cause of fire. This is generated when gasoline is filtered through chamois under certain conditions. Some funnels have a chamois strainer. If such a funnel does not touch the gas tank a static spark may cross the gap and set fire to the volatizing gasoline.

"It is taken for granted that the owner of a car has insured it against loss by fire. His car is much more apt to burn than his residence, and practically everyone nowadays protects his home through fire insurance against loss by fire. Another form of fire insurance protection which ought to be a part of the equipment of every car is one or two fire extinguishers. Some fire insurance companies insist that there be fire extinguishers on all cars they insure, and most insurance concerns give a reduced rate to cars thus equipped.

MANY ADVANTAGES TO NEW PACKARD BRAKES

"In the application of the new four-wheel brakes to the Packard single eight advantages occur in addition to the functions of stopping and avoiding skidding," says G. M. Berry, president of the Berry Motor Car Co., St. Louis Packard distributors.

"Important among other advantages is the simplicity of the adjustment. The turning in or out of a single adjustment screw accomplishes the adjustment for each brake on each wheel. The brakes are fully equalized as between each of the two front whels and each of the two rear wheels and also as between the two equalizers. This means equal pressure on all four wheels "Because there are brakes on all four wheels, we find there is need for less pressure on the brake linings. In the Packard brakes the braking effort is accomplished by the usual brake pedal. The mechanism is entirely mechanical and its simplicity is best illustrated by the fact that in all four brakes there are only 27 pieces.

"The brakes are all of the internal expanding type, which permits of enclosing them so as to keep out dust and dirt. A hand brake lever is provided in addition to the pedal brake and the hand lever operates the same rear wheel shoes as are operated by the foot or service brakes, but through a separate set of brake connections."

MOTOR TRUCKS BRING BETTER RURAL SCHOOLS

Arthur Capper, United States Senator and farm periodical publisher, sees better education and improved living conditions for the farmer through use of the motor car and motor truck.

If you were a farmer, the Senator writes in Advertising Fortnightly, "your ingenuity would devise a 'consolidated school plan' comprising a fine, big schoolhouse with many rooms, a motor truck to gather the children for miles around and a comfortable home to house several teachers.

"And that is exactly what is happening to rural education. It is happening slowly, but it is happening surely.

"Nowadays distance is measured by minutes rather than by miles. Closer and closer come the farms to the cities. Larger and larger grow the rural trading centers as gasoline propels the farm family further and faster. Gasoline begets good roads. Good roads widen the social and business radius. They broaden the mental horizon."

561 MILES IN DORRIS ON THIRTY GALLONS

"It may be of interest to you to know that on my recent trip to Michigan I toured to Chicago and from there to Michigan, making a total of 561 miles," says F. C. Weber, St. Louis florist, in a letter to J. F. Culver, general manager of the Dorris Motor Car Co.

"On this trip I consumed 30 gallons of gasoline. Having fresh oil in the engine when I left, I changed on my arrival there.

"The average mileage was 18½ miles to one gallon gas. The entire trip, which I made coming and going, was 1185 miles, consuming 70 gallons of gasoline. This made an average of 16.9 miles to one gallon of gas. On leaving Michigan I added one and one-half pints of water to my radiator and I was indeed surprised that I did not have to add more.

"My running time was 25 to 35 miles per hour. I made the trip in 16 hours from St. Louis to Chicago. Coming back from Michigan, I made the trip in 23 hours, total time on the road."

Farmers are coming into the market in increasing numbers for light trucks. Heavy trucks have also been in good demand throughout the Middle West.

Motor busses in use throughout the country number 40,000, Firestone truck tire men estimate. Fifty-six street railway companies use them as auxiliaries.

POTATO SHORTAGE IN GERMANY SERIOUS

Constitutes One of Gravest Problems for New Chancellor.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—Shortage of potatoes is the universal complaint in Germany. It played a part in the downfall of the Cuno Government and indicated the most important task for Chancellor Stresemann in taking over control in the food and financial crisis.

Frederick the Great fought the Potato War. He and his brother, Prince Henry, led Prussian troops in 1778-79 against the Austrians to obtain food supplies. The food shortage also was one of the chief causes of the collapse of the German empire, which forced former Emperor William to become an exile.

So German history is merely repeating itself, and the republic's inability to feed itself is emphasized by the depreciation of the currency, which makes purchases outside the country impossible. Lack of grain has forced Germany to a large extent to forego the bread, which plays such a part in the diet of the French and other wheat-growing neighbors, with the result that the potato is of more importance in Germany than in Ireland.

When Peru sent potatoes to Central Europe by way of Spain and Sir Walter Raleigh popularized them in the British Isles, an important economic factor entered Europe. Esthonia is scoffingly called "The potato republic" by Russians, who dislike that country. But Esthonia is proud of the title, and declares its people were fed on potatoes when the Russians were starving and that the independence of the nation is founded on potatoes.

Germany's potato shortage is due partly to the lateness and wetness of the season, partly to the unrest in the cities and shortage of currency to facilitate purchases and shipments from rural districts and from abroad. But the market basket without potatoes is empty to German housewives, and the full market basket is as necessary to popularity of the German Government as is a full dinner pail in America.

WHEN AND HOW THE LAW CAME TO COFFEYVILLE FOR A GRAND CLEANUP OF CROOKS

One City Where Inexperience Is Regarded as the First Requisite of a Good Policeman

After Finding That the Experienced Ones Were Inclined to Deal Leniently With the Denizens of the Underworld, New Men Who Knew Nothing About This Phase of Life Were Put on and Told to Bring All the Lawbreakers In—Soon the Jails Were Crowded, but Specially Selected Judges, With Views Coinciding With Those of the Mayor and Chief of Police, Meted Out Rapid and Ruthless Punishment— Why the Ku Klux Klan Boldly Claims the Credit, Declaring That Each of Its 1400 Members and 500 Women Auxiliaries Is an Assistant Policeman and Informer.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Aug. 18.

THE Coffeyville crooks are on the run. Killers, train robbers, highway robbers, burglars, automobile stealers, sneak thieves, con men, gamblers, moonshiners, bootleggers, dope peddlers, wifebeaters, plain drunks, wild men and wild women. The Tall Terror of the Invisible Empire is after them.

The Tall Terror is Walter McCrabb, the six-foot six-shooter Sunday school superintendent Ku Klux boy chief of Coffeyville. Back of him is the Ku Klux police force and Ku Klux Mayor McClelland and the Ku Klux City Commissioners, and the Ku Klux Police Court Judge and the Ku Klux City Court Judge and 1400 Ku Kluxers and 500 "Ku Kluxees," as the women members call themselves.

Behind these and co-operating with them, are the Sheriff and County Commissioners and the District Judge and thousands of klansmen in Montgomery County and an aroused unaffiliated populace of city and county.

And they say around here it is only the beginning, with the cleaning up of Montgomery County and the other counties along the Kansas-Oklahoma border to come next.

Prior to about three months ago Coffeyville was described vividly as "the wildest, wooliest, wide-openest, hell-bentest" town on the border. It swarmed with lawbreakers, who let the rest of the people stay there only because they were good-natured when they were having things their own way, but collected heavy ransom for the privilege.

All Done by An Inexperienced Police

Now it is, oh, so different! The nightly murders which used to be one of the leading attractions have gone out of fashion. It is possible for a leading citizen to take a walk in the cool of the evening without being "beaned" and robbed. The way of the transgressor is no longer soft. Lawbreakers have no rights which the police feel bound to respect. The citizens of Coffeyville are running the town. They think, when they get used to it, they are going to like it. It will be a change anyway.

The crooks who remain are either locked up or lurking in dark places. The main body is streaking across Oklahoma. There are some newcomers who haven't heard the news. In a little while they will be locked up or headed hence.

Not that Coffeyville is a spotless town or is likely to be. Its location, almost on the Oklahoma line and not a great distance, as the jackrabbit runs, to Missouri and Arkansas, a half-way station between wicked Kansas City and equally wicked Tulsa, with railroads criss-crossing, makes for a more or less constant influx of lawbreakers, but they won't stay long. So, from now on, it is a safe guess that dust will be rising pretty constantly along the border.

All that has been done has been done by an inexperienced Chief of Police and inexperienced policemen and a backing, mentioned above, mostly inexperienced. Amateurs, you might say. What they will do when they get their hands in and going good is hard for amazed and incredulous onlookers to envision.

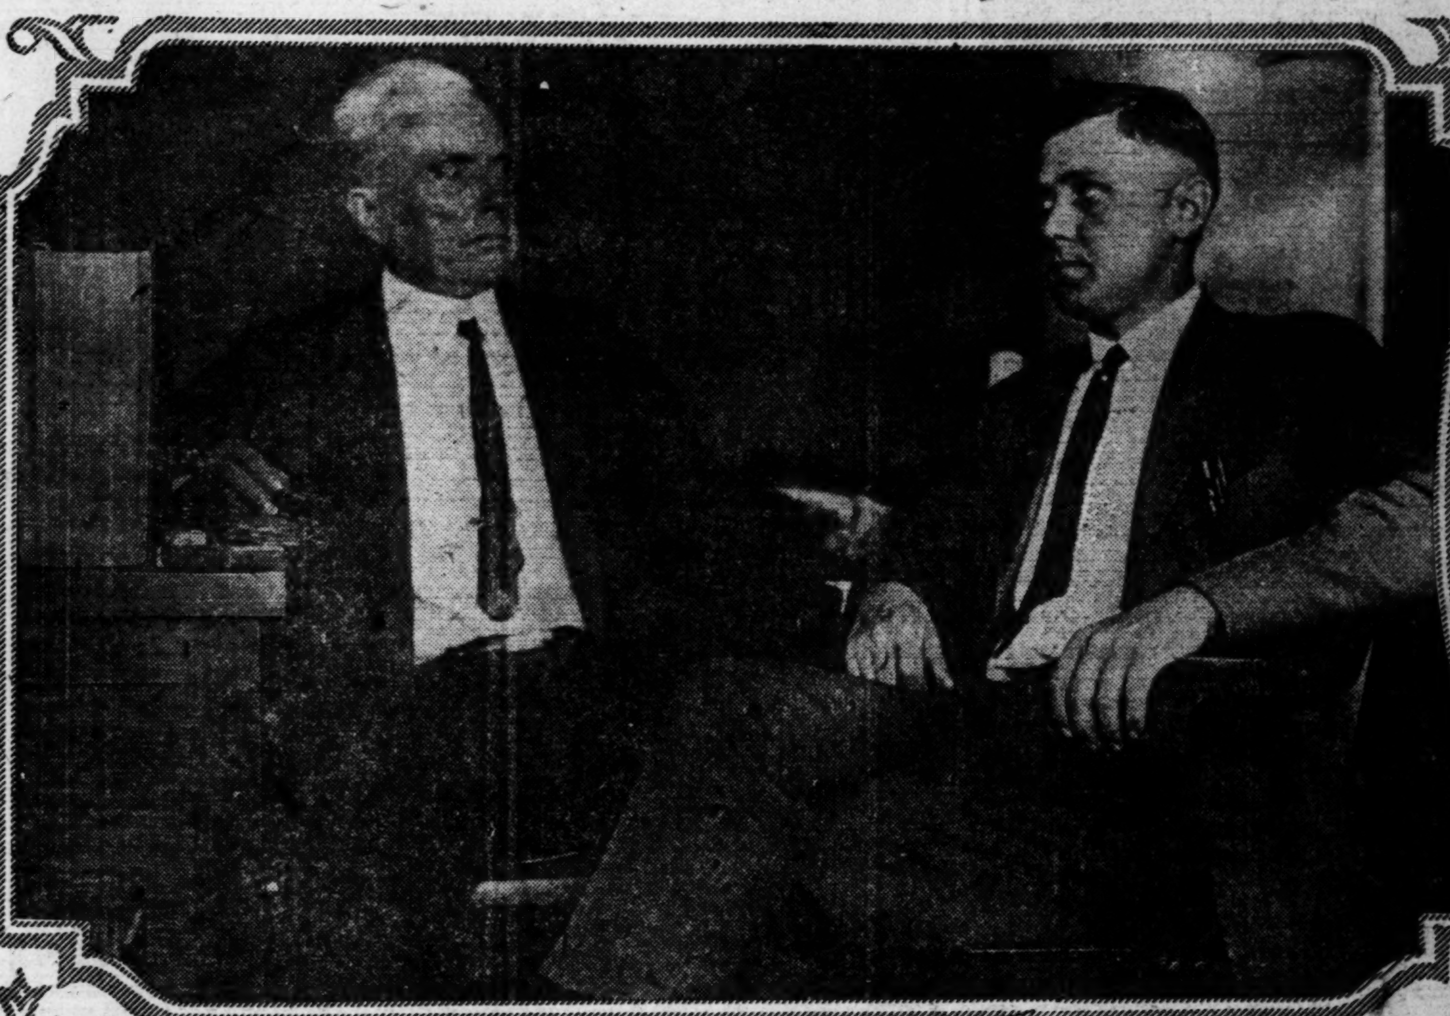
Coffeyville, although most of its people, now numbering about 15,000, with about 2000 to 3000 in the environs, are as good as people anywhere, has always been tough. The proximity of the border, half a mile south of the city limits, has made it the haunt of bad men of Oklahoma and of Indian Territory before Oklahoma's day. "South Town," across the line, has been vantage ground for lawless invasions of every sort. Difficulties of law enforcement were increased, on both sides of the line by the facility with which lawbreakers could slip back and forth.

An Old Mayor With a New Policy

Efforts of successive administrations to control the criminal element, whether or not in good faith, were ineffectual. For one important reason, there was either public indifference or a lack of cohesive public support. Police efficiency was impaired by the traditional practice of depending upon experienced policemen. Take it from Mayor Frank McClelland, that is the biggest mistake in the world. The only good policeman, he thinks, is the inexperienced policeman. Since Coffeyville has been cleaned up by inexperienced policemen, it looks like there might be something to his theory.

Coffeyville had experienced policemen in 1920, without going any further back. They were so experienced that, according to friendly critics of Mayor H. H. Deichler, who resigned under a Governor's investigation that year, they could mislead the Mayor, and that was the principal reason that his administration failed.

Hopes for a cleanup under George R. Snelling, elected Mayor in November, 1920, were not greatly realized because he died the following June. The city was ruled then as now by a commission composed of the Mayor, a Commissioner of Finance and a Commissioner of Utilities. The other two Commissioners and the City Attorney, on the recommendation of an advisory committee of 18 citizens which had been started by Frank McClelland, real estate and insurance man, named him as Snelling's successor. He entered office in June, 1921. He retained most of the Snelling organization and, as he was filling his predecessor's unexpired term and had not been elected by vote of the people, did not undertake any radical reforms during his appointed term.



The two "Macs"—Mayor McClelland and Chief of Police McCrabb, in conference.

Twin terrors of the Coffeyville lawbreakers The policy of each of them is to give the offender who comes into court without extenuating circumstances the limit.

But last April he was elected on a cleanup platform, over spirited opposition, and immediately began the scrubbing which has relieved Coffeyville of most of its smirch.

For one thing, he was through with experienced policemen. He had tried them and found they wouldn't do.

"A policeman," he explains, "has every inducement under the sun to be crooked. His contacts are with crooks who have every incentive in the world to make him crooked if they can. Even if he is strong enough to withstand bribery, ways are found to place him under obligations. Mighty few stand up under it and remain free to say, under all conditions, 'Come with me.'"

So the first thing he did was to look around for an inexperienced Chief. In the meantime a strong Ku Klux Klan had been built up. Its secretary was Walter McCrabb, 30 years old, born on a farm in the Flint Hill district of Calloway County, stationary engineer at $300 a month for an oil company week days and superintendent of the junior department of the First Christian Sunday School on Sundays.

City Judge Clement A. Reed, Exalted Cyclops of the Coffeyville Klan, says Walter McCrabb was chosen for Chief because he was secretary of the klan. It was partly that, partly the fact that he was inexperienced and partly the fact that the leading men of Coffeyville, without regard to affiliations with any organization, believed in him.

These men, members of the Chamber of Commerce, had a meeting, at which McCrabb was suggested for Chief of Police. The response was emphatic. He was nominated and elected pronto. His inexperience and other qualifications suited Mayor McClelland and it was a pleasure for him to confirm McCrabb's "election" by appointing him Chief. So McCrabb gave up the job at which he was experienced, which paid him $300 a month, and went to work as an inexperienced Chief of Police at $200 a month.

There were some who doubted the wisdom of the selection. They held his inexperience against him and, while they liked him and respected him, they were not sure that he had the makings. The crooks were tickled pink.

"Har, har!" they chortled. "A Sunday school superintendent. He'll make a hell of a Chief of Police."

Well, for the information of the wide world, he did. And the Coffeyville crooks devoutly hope they will never again come across such another "hell of a Chief of Police."

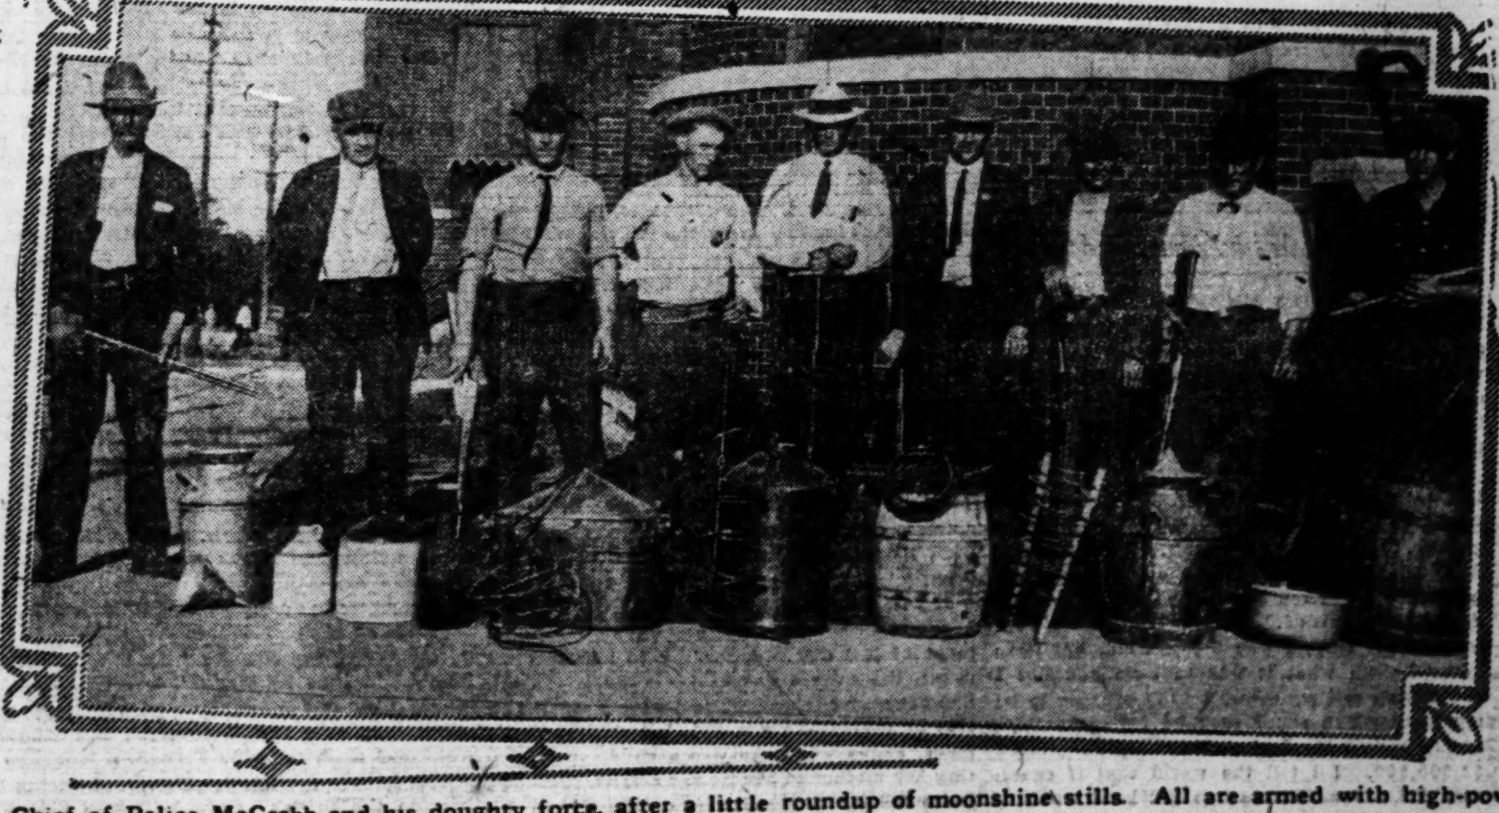
The first thing the inexperienced Chief did was to fill up his force with young and inexperienced policemen, most of them not a great while from the farm. There was only one holdover, Charles Lee, who had been a patrolman two months and had exhibited such qualities that he was made Night Chief.

The fact that all but one of the policemen are klansmen might be a coincidence, but nobody thinks it is, any more than is the fact that this one is the only one in the city administration who is not a klansman. This unaffiliated person is a good policeman and the fact that he is not a klansman is not prejudicial to him. The only reason he hasn't joined, he says, is that he is not the "jinin'" sort, but the others have hopes that he will make it unanimous.

With an inexperienced police force that could be depended upon to go get 'em, a hard-boiled Police Judge was needed to soak 'em. The Judge they had was a man of high character, a veteran of the Civil War, but he was too kind. He couldn't find it in his heart to say "$500 and a year in jail." Five and costs was about as high as he ever went. He arose to the situation and resigned.

N. W. Downey had been a Justice of the Peace at Yates Center and had been a terror to evildoers in that sector. He had moved to Coffeyville and was eligible. He was put on the police court bench and the work started off with a bang.

The day that the new police force went into action the lockup was empty. "Go get 'em," said the boy Chief, and his doughty dozen took to the byways in full cry. Next morning there was standing room only, and not much of that. Breakfasts were ordered for 23. That only whetted the appetites of Chief Mac's men. The chase has been keen ever since. With the increasing wariness of the game the bag has varied from day to day, but the average haul has been 200 a month.



Chief of Police McCrabb and his doughty force. after a little roundup of moonshine stills. All are armed with high-powered rifles which they know how to use.

"The way to do it," said Mayor McClelland, "is to arrest everybody who violates the law, without regard to age, sex, color or previous condition of servitude. We have no friends among lawbreakers. A new policeman came to me one day. 'What about Soandso,' he said, 'Do we want to spare him?'

Rockpile as Influence for Good

"'Spare nobody,' I said. 'We have no friends to reward and no enemies to punish. If he's a lawbreaker, go get him.'

"If the preacher of my church was a lawbreaker we would go and get him and we wouldn't let him know we were coming.

"We do not always lock them up. It depends on the circumstances. Sometimes I hold informal court myself. Yesterday two girls were brought in, the short-haired, short-skirted sort, who go to picture shows every night and hang around the streets afterward. One lives over in Oklahoma. I know her parents. They are good people. I had the Chief take her home and tell them what would happen to her if we caught her on the streets again. The other lives here. I let her go on her promise to behave.

"A woman came in last week and said her husband wasn't supporting her and was running with another woman. I had him brought in here and told him if he didn't give his wife all his wages next payday I would put him on the rockpile at a dollar a day and his wife would get the dollar. The rockpile is a wonderful influence for good."

A motorcycle whizzed by. The Mayor's face lit up. "There goes one of Mac's men after somebody," he said.

An automobile came to a quick stop at the curb and the young Chief bounded out. The Mayor went to the window.

"Come in here, Mac," he called.

"All right, Mac," the Chief replied.

He came breezing in, six feet of him, topped by a huge soft hat shading a smiling, boyish face and frank, round, blue eyes, which, nevertheless, gave one the impression that they could harden into steel behind the sight of a police gun.

"Not a Bit of Leniency," His Policy

He had bad news. The lockup was empty, for the first time since he had been Chief.

"You don't say!" said Mayor Mac.

"Yeh," said Chief Mac. "It shows that they are learning how to behave. It will give us a chance to clean up the place. But it won't be empty long. This is Saturday. The boys will bring in a lot of 'em tonight and more tomorrow. We'll have 'er filled up by Monday morning. If we don't get anything else we'll get a lot of South Town drunks and would-be bad men."

I suggested, timidly, that leniency didn't seem to be in his line.

"Leniency?" His musical voice tapered off into a laugh of sheer enjoyment, like the gurgle of an infant that has been tickled in the ribs. "Not a bit of leniency in the world," he said.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 18.

A SHOT fired a few nights ago from a clump of bushes, wounding a man who was taking leave of Sigrid Holmquist, a movie actress, on the threshold of her home at 2185 Argyle street, has suddenly revived interest in the mysterious murder of William Desmond Taylor, nationally famous cinema director, who was found dead on the morning of Feb. 2, 1922, in his luxurious bachelor bungalow in this city.

Mary Miles Minter, former motion picture star, until recently lived at the Argyle street house, and had visited Miss Holmquist there a few hours before the latter's guest was injured by the would-be assassin. It is the theory of detectives that the assailant mistook Miss Holmquist for Miss Minter and attempted to kill her, but missed his aim. The wounded man, whose name has not been revealed, said he knew no reason why anyone should attempt to harm him.

Miss Minter, who now says she was engaged to marry Taylor, was one of the principal figures in the investigation into his death. The police theory was that the crime was committed by a jealous rival of the director. Sheriff William I. Treagor of Los Angeles County declared:

"One woman and one man are responsible. The woman supplied the incentive and the man did the killing."

Calls "Mother's" Illness Only a Ruse

Previous incidents of a suspicious nature are related by Miss Holmquist as having occurred since she bought Miss Minter's former home. Once two men who declared they were detectives pushed their way into the house and searched it from top to bottom. On another occasion, Miss Holmquist was awakened in the night by a noise, and by the glare of a flashlight thrown upon her face. She screamed and leaped up, but when the house was searched no one was found. The two actresses are intimate friends, and Miss Minter frequently visits Miss Holmquist.

Simultaneously, public notice was drawn to Miss Minter by her threat to sue her reputed mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, for an accounting of her earnings, variously estimated at from one to three millions of dollars. Miss Minter took occasion, during the controversy, to reveal the fact that she is an adopted daughter of Mrs. Shelby, and that her real name is Juliet O'Reilly. She was born in Shreveport, La., April 25, 1902. Her parents separated when she was very young and Mrs. Shelby adopted her.

Mrs. Shelby went to a hospital in Los Angeles about two weeks ago, and her daughter, Margaret Shelby, gave out a statement to the effect that her mother was at the point of death, that Mary had disappeared, and that Mrs. Shelby appealed to the actress to hasten to her bedside for a final farewell.

How Quarrel With "Mother" Arose

Reporters had no difficulty in tracing Miss Minter to the home of a married girl friend in a cottage at Pasadena, where the former star was amusing herself by baking cakes and biscuits, and caring for her friend's babies. She telephoned to the hospital, and was informed that Mrs. Shelby was not seriously ill.

"This is just another of my mother's tricks," exclaimed the actress. "She isn't near death, or anything like it. It's only a ruse to get me to call off my lawsuit. I have no affection for my mother. Let the world condemn me if it will. Even a worm will turn in time, and I have turned. I have been the family meal ticket since I was 5 years old, but have never known what it was to have a dollar I could truly call my own. I don't propose to let my mother and sister prey on my sympathies any longer. My last contract alone yielded $1,300,000. I'll tell the world that if necessary I'll sue my mother to get back some of the money I earned."

After the actress gave out this interview, Mrs. Shelby made a hasty recovery and left the hospital. A friend of Miss Minter relates that the girl was awakened to the state of her financial affairs one day when she happened to refer to "my home," and was gently but firmly corrected by her mother. It appeared that the house was owned by Mrs. Shelby. Mary inquired about other possessions, and found they were all her mother's property.

"What have I got?" finally demanded the actress, in desperation.

"Why, my dear," the reply is said to have been, "you have your health."

It was shortly after this that Miss Minter left her mother's home and set up an establishment of her own. According to her own account, the actress was 21 years old last April. She came of age—which is 18 for a woman in this State—three years ago, but continued the habit, begun when she was a child, of permitting her mother to handle her affairs. Besides, for publicity purposes, Miss Minter had remained at the age of 17 for several years in a row, and she was loath to allow herself to grow older in the public mind.

"I've had entirely too much of my mother and sister," Miss Minter is quoted as saying recently. "I've earned board and keep for the three of us almost since I was a baby. But I've never been allowed to do anything I wanted to do, or to handle a single one of the hundreds of thousands of dollars I was earning. Now, I want what is mine. I'm Irish, and when I start a thing I go through with it.

"My mother has never refused to make an accounting to Mary," replied Margaret Shelby through the newspapers. "My mother's constant prayer is for a reconciliation. We both love Mary dearly, and no matter what she says, it will make no difference in our attitude toward her."

Plans Return to Speaking Stage

In the meantime, Miss Minter, who announced she was "through with the movies" when the Famous Players-Lasky corporation failed to renew her contract last January, says she is planning to buy a country home in New York State, study music, return to the speaking stage, and perhaps marry.

Louis Sherwin, playwright and scenario writer, is quoted as saying that he hopes to wed Miss Minter as soon as he can get a divorce from his wife, who is said to be living with their three children in an abandoned mill on Long Island. Mrs. Sherwin says he'll never get the divorce if she can prevent it.

When Mary Pickford seceded from the so-called motion picture trust, Mary Miles Minter was one of several young actresses brought forward as "rivals" for Miss Pickford in ingenue roles—those of "sweet, unspoiled young girls." She was 17 when she first met William Desmond Taylor, and he made an unforgettable impression by addressing her as "Miss Minter." "Before that," she said, "I had always been called Mary and treated like a child."

Taylor was a man particularly fitted to make an impression on feminine hearts, in addition to his position as one of the Czars of the screen, who could make or mar an actress according to his whim. He was 50 years old at the time of his death, but he came of an Irish family noted for the good looks of its men, and about him hung a glamor of romance. He had ventured all over the world, had dug for gold in the Klondike, and made and spent two fortunes. It was said that on one occasion, to save his life, he had himself smuggled out of Alaska in a barrel. He was besides an erudite scholar, who took an especial interest in seeing that his feminine proteges read only the best books, and who encouraged them to study French, a language in which he was proficient. He served during the war in the British army—he was a native of Cork, Ireland—and had risen in a few months from private to Captain.

On the afternoon of Feb. 1, 1922, the director took a dancing lesson at a Hollywood academy, telling the instructress that he wished to "brush up on some of the old steps," for the purpose of using them in a picture production. He returned home and had dinner, just after which there arrived Miss Mabel Normand, one of the half dozen actresses who, after Taylor's death, confessed they had at one time or another been engaged to the popular director.

Miss Normand said she called to get a book which Taylor had promised, and remained about 45 minutes. Taylor accompanied her to her automobile, and chatted for some moments with Miss Normand and her chauffeur. He chided her for the frivolous character of some magazines she had in the car, and told her she should read Freud and Nietzsche. She last saw him standing on his porch and waving, as she drove away.

From several cigaret stubs found the next morning on the back stoop, it is thought that during Miss Normand's visit the murderer was standing waiting, nervously, in the shadows, until she departed. Some minutes later, Mrs. Douglas McLean, a movie actress and neighbor, heard a sharp report, but thought it was a backfiring motor or a punctured tire. Not long afterwards, Taylor's chauffeur rang the bell several times, but on receiving no answer concluded that his employer did not wish to be disturbed, and went away.

Miss Minter Questioned by Police

The lights in the house burned all night, but this aroused no curiosity among the neighbors. They knew it was Taylor's custom to sit up late at night studying. The next morning, his negro houseman let himself into the house, and a minute later burst through the door, screaming.

He had found his master lying dead beside his desk. At first, it was supposed he had died of a hemorrhage; and during the interval before it was discovered that it was a case of murder, and before guards were placed in the house, someone, not yet identified, took from Taylor's desk a packet of letters written by Miss Normand, Miss Minter and other movie actresses. Several days later the letters were found hidden inside a boot, in a closet.

Detectives convinced themselves that Taylor was standing, with uplifted arms, when he was shot, because the relative position of the bullet holes in the coat and vest showed that the former garment was raised out of its normal position. The bullet entered the left side, towards the rear, about six inches above the [illegible], ranged upwards and emerged from the [illegible]. On the desk was a bundle of canceled checks, for the director was in the act of making out his income tax schedule. A purse containing $78 and several articles of jewelry were untouched.

The murder created a national furore, and soon the mystery acquired its touch of scandal. Several movie actresses, including Miss Normand and Miss Minter, were questioned by the authorities concerning their relations with the director. They all agreed that he was the soul of honor, "the most wonderful man" they ever knew, a thorough gentleman. Usually they had been engaged to him, but had broken the affairs off by mutual consent.

Because it appeared that she was the last person to have seen Taylor alive, except the murderer, Miss Normand was during the first days of the case more prominently before the public than Miss Minter. At the funeral, attended by an outpouring of movie folk, Miss Normand fainted. But Miss Minter gradually took first place in the mystery, after it was learned that she had been questioned at length by the District Attorney. A handkerchief with the initials, "M. M. M.," was found among Taylor's effects, and Miss Minter claimed it. She also confessed to writing several love letters among those unearthed from the boot.

The investigation brought to light the fact, unknown even to his intimates, that Taylor had made his career in the movies under an assumed name, that he had been married and divorced, and that he had a daughter 19 years old. His real name was William Cunningham Deane-Tanner, and he at one time had been connected with a Fifth avenue art store. In New York he married Ethel May Harrison, one of the dozens of young women who were reported to be members of the "original sextet" in "Floradora." In 1908 he withdrew his money from the bank, telephoned his wife that she would never see him again, and disappeared. While the police in America and Scotland Yard in England were searching for him, he was working his way around Cape Horn on a sailing vessel. For some years he was an actor in various stock companies, thus gaining the experience which raised him to the top in the movie game.

ROBLEM OF KANSAS' POOR LITTLE "CAVE GIRL" AND HOW WELFARE COURT HAS SOLVED I

She Was Happy Living Primitively in Island Paradise but Will She Be in New Surroundings?

"I am Like a Fish Out of Water," She Plaintively Declares, When Well-Intentioned Agents of the Law Take Her From Her Father and Brother, Put Her in Dresses and Shoes and Stockings Like Other Girls and Begin Their Efforts to Mold Her to the Conventions—Never Had Any Women Associates Since Her Mother Went Away and Never Saw but One Movie in Her Life, but Her Parent Was Kind to Her and His Only Offense Was in Letting Her Run Wild.

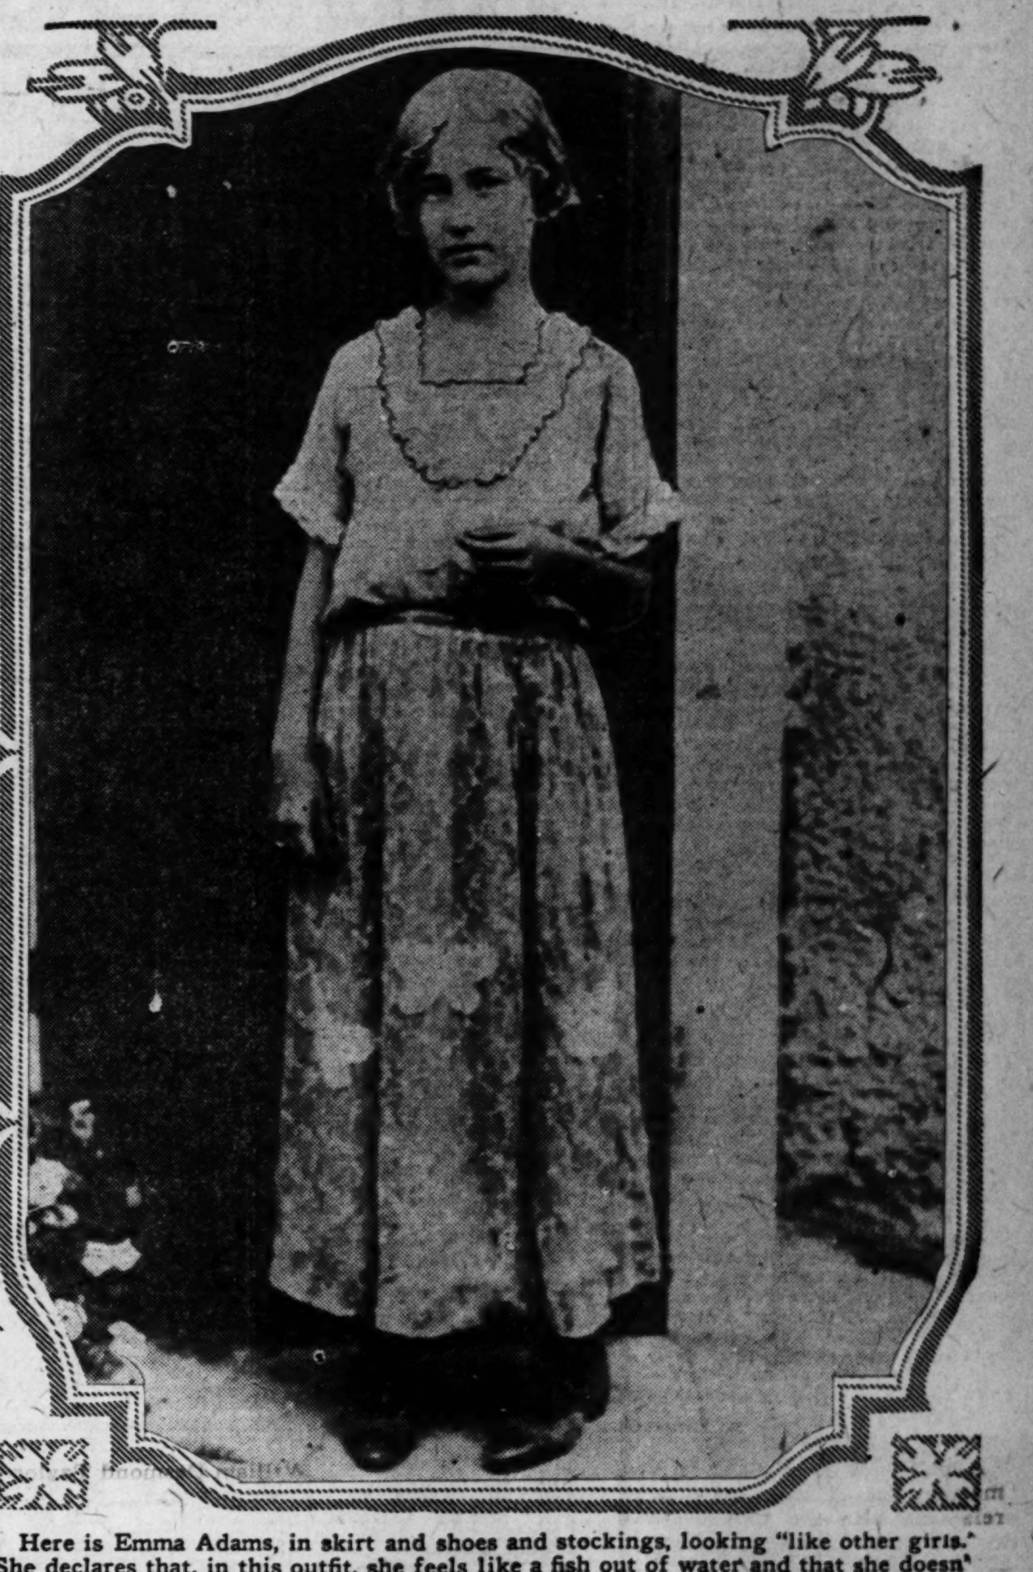
While the court officers were trying to convince the girl's father, on their visit to her island home, that he wasn't able to take proper care of her and pointing to the fact that she was inadequately clothed, she exclaimed, "Oh, I have other clothes!" Running into her cave, she returned soon in this outfit.



Here is Emma Adams, in skirt and shoes and stockings, looking "like other girls." She declares that, in this outfit, she feels like a fish out of water and that she doesn't think she will get used to such trappings.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 18.

EMMA ADAMS, 15 years old, Kansas' now famous "cave girl," so called because she was found in a cave on an island in the Kaw River 15 miles west of Topeka, is to have all of the things a normal girl of her age usually craves. She is going to get them even though she prefers the cave, overalls, barefoot days and the companionship of her father and brother to fluffy ruffles, powder puffs, the movies and girl chums.

Shawnee County has taken the girl away from her cave and her father and brother and is going to give her a good home and the things that other girls have.

Two or three weeks ago a woman appeared in the office of the Probate Court and told the officers that a man and his son and daughter were living in a cave on an island in the Kaw River near Willard, about 15 miles west of Topeka. At first the woman refused to tell her name or her interest in the affair. Finally she admitted she was the girl's mother and that she and the father had separated. She was supporting herself at whatever work she could find and at that time was sorting potatoes on a truck farm.

Welfare Officers Start Inquiry

Miss Eva Corning and T. D. Williams, county welfare officers, drove out along the Kaw River opposite the island. "Andy" Adams was fishing along the bank of the island. The river runs swift along both sides of the island and the water is deep and muddy. Adams smiled as the officers urged him to come over and get them so they could take a look at the island home and the girl that the father admitted was on the island. "Andy" evinced no interest in their project and continued his fishing.

Then Williams discovered a boat hidden in the bushes along the river bank and the two officers rowed across to the island. They had not searched long till they came to a cave. They took a look at it.

It was about 10 by 10 feet, partly above and partly below ground. Two bunks were built along the side.

There were ducks and chickens and geese which had the same access to the cave as the humans and there were evidences that the fowls roosted under the beds. Then the girl came in from some work she had been doing on the island. She was barefoot and wore a shirt and overalls. Her brother and father were garbed in exactly the same way. She had her overalls rolled almost to her knees. Her hair had been bobbed rather short, almost as short as that of her brother. But there was every evidence of happiness upon her face. She thoroughly enjoyed living the primitive life of her island home.

Father in Threatening Mood

"Andy" Adams just plainly "lowed" that Emma was not going to leave the island. The girl frankly and honestly agreed with him and so did Fred, the 17-year-old brother. The two officers argued, urged and threatened. The father declared that his daughter was not being abused and he was not going to let her be taken away from him. He glanced threateningly at two rifles which stood in the corner of the cave home. The officers told him they would bring out the Sheriff and a lot of deputies.

"That means someone is going to get hurt," replied Adams.

Miss Corning took the girl off under the shade of a big tree and talked to her while Williams talked to the father and brother. After half an hour the girl expressed her willingness to go. But the father was obdurate. But a little later the father and brother were persuaded that it would be much better for the girl to have a good home and live like other girls.

Then Emma balked. No siree! she would not leave her father and brother.

"What would happen to my pets!" she exclaimed. The ducks and geese and chickens gathered around her, lay down on her feet, climbed up into her lap and played as only real pets can play. She told the officers that she din't care two whoops for a red hair ribbon; that she never had used and didn't need a powder puff; that she had seen only one movie in her life and that was eight years before and she didn't care to be bothered with skirts which she thought hampered Miss Corning quite a bit.

"Jest look at her. She can't hardly get around!" she naively exclaimed. The girl had gone to school two sessions, but had not attended for several years, as there had not been sufficient ice in the river to enable her to walk across the 100-yard channel to get to the mainland. But she could read a little and there were some old newspapers and magazines about.

After two hours of argument, cajolery and threats to use force the girl was persuaded to go with the officers and the father gave his consent. She was taken to the Shawnee County detention home for neglected, dependent and delinquent children. There she had a warm bath in a real bath tub, the first one she had ever seen. Then she was fitted out with clothes—a girl's clothes.

In the course of the next few days the girl went to church, the first time in her life, and she went to the movies and was taken to an amusement park and was shown Topeka in the evening and in the day time. She had other girls of her own age to play with and she had a doll, the first that she could remember. The other girls powdered her nose and tried every way to be nice and friendly.

The girl saw and heard in open-mouthed wonderment. She seemed to thoroughly enjoy her new world. She was given nice shoes and stockings.

Alice in Wonderland Over Again

It was Alice in Wonderland all over again. She said she would like to go to school and her first experience in Sunday school and church were quite interesting and enjoyable and she would like to go again.

But when she was taken to the Probate Court to see what was to be done with her she flew straight into the arms of her father and then to her brother.

"I want to go home," she said. She inquired about all her pets, calling many by name and insisted upon details of what her father and brother and her pets had been doing during the four days she had been away. She wanted to know how many fish were caught and how large they were and how much was received for them. And every few sentences she would inquire about one of her pet chickens, ducks or geese and how they were getting along.

When court was called the statements of the officers were taken as to the conditions they found on the island home. Then the father was called. He told the court that he formerly was a railroad man with a good position in Western Kansas. He quarreled with a superior about the handling of some work and was "fired."

Then the father, mother and two children went to a farm. They could not make the farm pay and "Andy" Adams and his wife could not get along in their changed conditions. Mrs. Adams did not like the drudgery of farm life and the isolation which it entailed. She didn't mind working, but she wanted a little fun with it and this was not possible on a farm far from a city and one where they were barely able to eke out their own living.

Mrs. Adams left the home and came to Topeka to work and live. Adams took his son and daughter to Willard and found that no one lay claim to the island in the river. The island is about a quarter of a mile long and varies in width from a few feet to 150 feet. He built the little cave, cleared out a space for a garden and took his family there to live.

The father talked with tears in his eyes much of the time. He admitted he had been a failure, but was doing the very best he could for his children. He told the court he would like to have them have all of the advantages that other boys and girls had. But over and over he told the court of his love for his boy and girl and how he could not bear their being separated from him.

"I Like Daddy and Brother"

First the brother and then the girl were called upon to tell of their life on the island. Both were happy and contented they said. The father worked at odd jobs among the farmers and sold his fish and chopped wood and was able to get them plenty of things to eat and they had ample overalls and shirts and in the winter had warm clothes. The cave was comfortable in winter and summer and they had lots of fun hunting and fishing and swimming. The girl insisted that her father never let her work, except to do the cooking and such housework as was necessary. She said he would not let her help him chop wood, but that she did it frequently just for fun.

The girl declared over and over that she "liked" her daddy and brother and that life in the cave on an island and the companionship of her father and brother were to be preferred to life in the city—at least as far as her experience went.

When the case was ended Judge J. D. M. Hamilton of the Probate Court told "Andy" Adams that it was quite apparent that the girl was not delinquent or dependent. "You have never abused her or mistreated her in any way except to neglect her," said the Court. "She ought to have the companionship of other girls of her age and that of good women. She ought to go to school and church and do as other girls do."

The Court decreed that the custody of the girl should be intrusted to Miss Corning for the present. "The Court has no desire to separate a child from a worthy parent, but you are guilty of neglecting her. She must have a proper home and until you are able to do so we must take care of her."

Adams said he had a sister living near Willard. The sister teaches school during the winter and the father suggested that the sister would be able to provide a suitable home for the girl.

The Court directed Miss Corning to conduct an investigation and if the aunt were able and desired to provide a proper home and surroundings for the girl Emma should make her home there.

Whatever arrangements may be made for the care of the girl will be in a home near Willard and the island so that the father and brother may visit Emma Adams frequently and she is not to be denied the privilege of visiting her island home for a short time as often as she pleases.

But the girl's days of overalls and barefoot bliss are ended. She is to have a home just like other girls.

Emma Adams cannot be said to be a veritable Diana of the wilds. In girl's clothing she is ill at ease and awkward. But dressed in overalls rolled almost to her knees, a soft shirt open at the throat and the sleeves rolled to the elbow she has all the grace and poise that come to an out-of-doors child and in the environment to which she is accustomed she is just a joyful, unspoiled creature.

An Attractive Child of Nature

She stands straight as an arrow. She has brown hair and lots of freckles and her face, shoulders, arms and legs are tanned to healthy brown of an outdoor life. Dressed in her shirt and overalls the girl wears a perpetual smile. She is just bubbling over with the joy of living. She talks interestingly and entertainingly of her outdoor life and the birds and fish, her knowledge of which is that of a naturalist.

Put her in ordinary girl's clothes and her smile fades. She is continually fearful of doing something which would not be proper. Her walk changes from a free, graceful, swinging movement to a cramped and restrained step. To anyone the girl has every appearance of a wonderfully healthy, wholesome looking, energetic, bright, unspoiled child of Nature, who doesn't know what to do under the conventions or how to do it and is just old enough to realize her shortcomings and to fear that everybody is watching her to see what she will do next that is wrong.

Now how will this Kansas experiment in taking her from her natural environment and putting her in one that to her is thoroughly artificial turn out?

"I am just like a fish out of water," she says.

Her case has attracted State-wide attention and there is a great body of opinion that holds that the authorities have been guilty of "meddling," though with the best of intentions, and that the girl will be lucky, indeed, if her whole career is not muddled and spoiled.

HOW THE LAW CAME TO COFFEYVILLE FOR GRAND CLEA-UP

"Leniency encourages crime. You can't compromise with crime. At first I used friendly argument in some cases, but I haven't used any lately. If a man don't respect the law he isn't entitled to respect. I tell my men to go and get 'em and treat 'em rough. Knock a leg out from under 'em if necessary. That's the way to enforce the law. Let 'em know you mean business. We work fast. We get to 'em quick and knock 'em in the crick. When we want a man to hold up his hands we tell him to 'get 'em up' quick.' When we make a raid we wait a reasonable time, meaning a short time, for the door to be opened, and if it isn't opened we open it.

"I've got no friends violating the law. Some of them may think I'm their friend, but they'll be disappointed when we catch up with them.

"When I came in some of the fellows down here in the South End came to me and said: 'Are you going to let us live?' I said, 'Yes, if you live right. If you don't, I'll kill you all off. I've been offered $50 to pour out a half-pint of whisky and forget it. I'm not in this for the money I can make out of it, but for the fun I'm getting out of it.

"Police Young, Keen for the Hunt."

"The first month we made 197 arrests, the next month 199 and last month 200. The fines used to average $700 a month. Now they average $1600 a month. Stealing automobiles used to be one of the popular outdoor sports. Two, three and four a week disappeared. Since we came in five have been stolen and we recovered four. The fifth was a rented Ford which we were unable to trace. We take right in behind them and don't aim to come back without them."

If that sounds like bragging it is because this writer has difficulty in putting into it the sheer joyousness of a strong man who knows his strength, the eagerness of the fit athlete, sure of himself, for the test of strength and speed.

Mack's men are like that, young men, keen for the man-hunt, eager for the credit of bringing 'em in.

If this seems brutal, the answer is that most of the culprits who are hunted down and brought in are persistent offenders, hobitual outlaws who prey upon the defenseless and show no mercy. That is why Chief Mac gurgles like a tickled infant when you talk to him of leniency.

The telephone rang and McCrabb answered it. "That's fine and dandy," he said, as he hung up. "A good friend called me up," he said, and told me of a bonded shipment that's coming in. The Police Department needs and has the co-operation of the good people of the town."

"Other towns sometimes throw it up to us that if they had a police force of 1500 they could clean up, too.

"Another thing that the police need is the backing of good judges. Ours are as good, I reckon, as there are in the country. Ninety-five per cent of our arrests are followed by convictions. If Judge Downey, who hears most of our cases, believes a man guilty he gives him all that's coming to him."

"Judge Downey knows how to say $500," said Mayor McClelland. "His lowest fines are $10 for plain drunks and jay driving. For drunk and disorderly it is $25. For speeding, first offense is $25, doubled for the second and jail for 20 days for the third.

Costly to Drive Auto While Drunk.

"The minimum for driving while intoxicated is $500 and 90 days in jail. For the second we would like to hang them, but we can only repeat the dose."

Judge Downey has jurisdiction over all violations of city ordinances. Judge Reed has county-wide jurisdiction over violations of State laws and deals particularly with offenses among residents of the sections closely surrounding the city. Harrison Shaw, Marshal of that court, has authority all over the county and exercises it with an iron hand.

Reed is the teacher of one of the largest men's Bible classes in Kansas, with an average attendance of between 200 and 300 and sometimes 1000. Many of the members of the class are known to be klansmen, but Reed says klan matters are never mentioned in the class. It is connected with the First Christian Church.

All the other members of the administration are church men, but belong to different churches. Coffeyville, however, is not a strong church town.

Chief Doesn't Require Much Rest.

McCrabb is supposed to be on duty only in the day time, but he is on day and night. They say around the city hall that his hours off are 3 to 6 a. m. and that he sleeps most of that time. To save his men, however, police court is held at 9 a. m. and 7 p. m., enabling them to appear as witnesses during the hours on duty without losing sleep.

When Judge Downey sits in judgment, culprits tremble. City Attorney A. R. Lamb is at his disposal if needed, but the Judge does most of his own questioning, going straight to the heart of the matter, without much regard for the rules of evidence. Fine legal points do not interest him. His is not, as in McCrabb's case, the excellence of inexperience. He has been a Sheriff, Deputy Sheriff, Justice of the Peace and was a policeman in the early days at Lawton. He is hard. His rule of action is: "Hit 'em as hard as the ordinances will allow."

"The violators we have to contend with," he said, "are persistent. We've got to hit 'em hard and keep hitting 'em. Their only vulnerable spots are their pockets and their fear of jail.

"I had a woman dope peddler in here the other day. I fined her $500. Later she said she could raise $250. I took the $250 and paroled her on her promise to stay

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when properly prepared and taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest quality Willow charcoal powdered to extreme fineness, then compressed in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but, on the contrary, great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. They are also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

HOW THE LAW CAME TO COFFEYVILLE FOR GRAND CLEA-UP

"All Elected by Ku Klux Klan."

"Another woman has been before me three times. The first two times I fined her $500 and gave her six months in jail. She appealed both cases and when she was brought in again I fined her $200 and gave her a jail sentence on each of three counts. The District Court, to which she appealed all her cases, may send her to the penitentiary as a persistent violator.

"My fines last month were $1657. In June they were $1774. We've got a mighty good police force. I'll tell you a secret. They were all elected by the Ku Klux Klan. Every man about the city hall, except one, is a klansman."

Judge Downey has a scale of fines for first offenses where the circumstances are not particularly aggravated. He frequently deviates, however, and gives the limit. His regular scale, posted in the police station as a warning to transgressors, is as follows:

1.	Plain drunk	$ 10.00
2.	Drunk and disorderly	25.00
3.	Resisting an officer	50.00
4.	Speeding, automobile or truck	25.00
5.	Drunk and speeding	100.00
6.	Drunk and driving an automobile	100.00
7.	Jay driving	10.00
8.	Disorderly house	100.00
9.	Unlawful cohabitation	100.00
10.	Gambling	100.00
11.	Possession of intoxicating liquor	100.00
12.	Possession of still	100.00
13.	Disorderly conduct	25.00
14.	Petit larceny	50.00
15.	Drunk, speeding and resisting an officer	150.00
16.	Possession of concealed weapons	100.00

Mayor a Bit Evasive About Klan.

The Ku Klux composition of the administration is no secret. Mayor McClelland is a little evasive about it. He says he has never attended a klan meeting, but will not deny that he is a member. When Gov. Allen had a man here investigating the klan, in connection with his effort to oust it from the State, McCrabb was called and questioned. He answered without hesitation that he was a member and that he had been secretary when appointed Chief, but had given up the office because of pressure of police duties. He has given up the Sunday school superintendency for the same reason.

Judge Reed, without being asked, said yesterday:

"I am the exalted cyclops of Coffeyville klan."

He added that the membership was 1400, which is 100 less than the figure commonly reported.

Violations of the State prohibition enforcement law come before him. He inflicts fines of $100 to $500 and imprisonment from 30 days to six months. Under second convictions the penitentiary is the punishment. The minimum for having a still is six months in jail. The narcotics law is the same as the liquor law. He grants no paroles except under maximum sentences, so that the suspended punishment will be severe enough to deter.

Judge Reed says McCrabb was made Chief of Police because he was secretary of the klan.

"He got so busy as Chief," the Judge said, "that he had to give up the secretaryship. He has the backing of 1400 klansmen and 500 klan women, who are determined to support the constituted forces and see that the law is enforced in this town. We do not hope to make it entirely clean, because of the transient criminal element, but it is going to be mighty near it. Chief McCrabb is cool-headed, intelligent and courageous, and the finest type of Christian gentleman."

HOW THE LAW CAME TO COFFEYVILLE FOR GRAND CLEAN-UP to the Coffeyville police. They are Deputy Sheriffs as well as policemen, and can make arrests anywhere in the county. And as for the State line, Chief McCrabb and his men foregt all about it when they are in pursuit. If they catch a criminal over in Oklahoma, who is wanted in Kansas, they bring him back and prosecute him. If he belongs to Oklahoma they notify the Oklahoma authorities to come and get him. It is the saying around here that "Mac don't know there's a border."

One of the principal uses of the border used to be to enable lawbreakers to avoid arrest by moving across it at the approach of officers from either side. That is all past now. Simetimes the Kansas and Oklahoma officers manage to meet at the line and catch the crook between them. Usually, though, the border is treated as non-existent for the purposes of catching criminals.

"Red Cloud" Scruggs ignored that little peculiarity of Chief McCrabb and now he is dead. He and a couple of companions, the night of June 1, were blockading the highway between Coffeyville and Nowata, Ok., robbing everybody who came along. The chief heard about it. He took Assistant Chief Lee, Policeman "Toots" Near and Marshal Shaw and Julius Payne, a former United States Marshal, and went over there.

They found the bandits' car parked by the roadside. The officers left their own machine and approached the robbers. Scruggs, masked, stepped into the open from behind his machine, holding a pistol in his hand. One of the officers fired at the bandits, who returned the shots. Chief of Police McCrabb, using an automatic shotgun loaded with goose shot, aimed and fired at "Red Cloud." The half-breed was hit. He started to run. After running about 20 paces, he fell, face downward, dead. His accomplices escaped into the high weeds along the roadside and made their getaway under cover of the darkness. None of the officers were injured.

Fame of Police Force Spreads.

Payne, one of the officers who engaged in the fight with the Scruggs gang, had known the leader for many years. "Red Cloud," he declared, had been a violator of the law in the old Indian Territory and since statehood. In late years, he had been engaged in stealing automobiles, highway robbery and, for a time, he was associated with the Al Spencer gang of bank robbers. He was about 60 years old. Following his death, his body was held in a Coffeyville morgue for more than a week while efforts were being made to find his relatives. When no one claimed the body, burial was in a Coffeyville cemetery at public expense, near where members of the notorious Dalton gang, killed in Coffeyville following an attempted bank robbery 30 years ago, lie buried.

All in all, the fame of Coffeyvile's police force is spreading along the border. A Coffeyville business man was down in Oklahoma the other day. He mentioned that he was from Coffeyville. A man said:

"That's where you've got that Ku Klux police force, ain't it?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's sure raisin' hell."

MINTER FAMILY ROW REVIVES INTEREST IN TAYLOR MYSTERY

rested and afterwards released, and although hundreds of "clews" have been run down, the Taylor murder remains as deep a mystery as ever.

And at last Miss Minter, who is reputed to be the daughter of a printer in Dallas, Tex., adds a new angle to the case by declaring that her mother was in love with the director.

"She wanted William Desmond Taylor to herself," she says. "Therefore, because he loved me, she forbade me to see him or even telephone him. He used to call at our house, but she put a stop to his visits when she found I loved him. Then she turned against him.

"Despite all obstacles, we became engaged. When I told mother about it she became furious and took me to Europe. Mr. Taylor also went to Europe, but mother saw to it that our paths never crossed."

To which Mrs. Shelby, informed by a reporter of her daughter's charge, replied: "Leave me alone with my grief."

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

BOOTLEG TUBE MAKERS LOCATE IN NEWARK, N. J.

Imitation Detectors and Amplifiers of All Types Manufactured.

The bootlegging of vacuum tubes used in radio receiving sets has grown to be one of the most widely practiced and highly profitable by-products of prohibition, according to the Newark Sunday Call. Its importance is second only to the business of rum-smuggling itself. With a potential market of nearly $1,000,000 worth of tubes per month, the radio bootlegger is playing a big game. His net profit is generaly as large, if not larger, than that of the whisky runner, and his danger of apprehension and punishment seems much less.

Beginning about a year ago on a small scale with the manufacture of various crude types of tubes which were easily spotted, the radio bootlegger has developed his business to the point of so skillfully and accurately counterfeiting the products of several prominent manufacturers that only an expert is able to detect the difference, in the course of examining the receiving sets of about 40 amateurs a day for the past year and a half, the Sunday Call has been afforded an unusual opportunity of examining a large variety of vacuum tubes, and whereas it was formerly a very simple matter to detect a bootleg product because of its faulty construction, the job has now become one requiring the closest examination.

The manufacture of the so-called "standard" vacuum tubes is in the hands of a closely knit group comprising the General Electric Co. and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., from whose factories come the U. V. 200, U. V. 201, U. V. 201-A, U. V. 199, W. D. 11, W. D. 12 and, in addition, a series of tubes used largely in transmitting circuits. These tubes are sold through the Radio Corporation of America to the jobbers and dealers of the country. From these factories also come a series of tubes identically the same as listed above, but bearing the trade designation C. 300, C. 301, C. 301-A, C. 299, C. 11 and C. 12, and the signature of E. T. Cunningham.

Steal Fruits of Research.

The development of "standard" vacuum tubes to their present high point of efficiency has been achieved only after the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the patents resulting from this costly experimentation represent a form of protection for the manufacturer against the pirates of industry who seek to profit by the fruits of another's labor and brains.

Patents mean nothing to the radio bootlegger, however. Not only does he steal the fundamental principle which has taken years to develop, but he completes the job to the last detail by counterfeiting the tube in size, shape and even in the design of the trademark.

It is believed that in Newark, N. J., there are approximately seven "factories" engaged in the manufacture of bootleg tubes. The combined capacity of these plants is figured at 8500 tubes a day. There are five additional factories in New York and Brooklyn, this latter group being capable of producing about 2000 tubes a day.

The reason Newark is such a big manufacturing center for bootleg tubes is because this city and vicinity affords the greatest market for skilled labor and materials, vital necessities to the bootlegger.

In nearby lamp factories trained and experienced labor is recruited by agents of the bootlegger, who are said to have approached workers leaving the factories. Higher wages is the usual bait, but bonuses are offered to the girls skilled in the more delicate branches of the work.

With this labor at his command the bootlegger is better able to carry out the details of counterfeiting standard tubes. It is difficult to tell the copied tube from the original. Its weakness is in its extremely short filament life, the average bootleg lasting only a few hours as against 1000 hours, the normal service of a standard tube. The bootleg 199's examined have a higher rate of current consumption than the genuine and a low percentage of electron emission, which means poorer service. This is largely because the bootlegger is unable to obtain the proper filament material and is obliged to substitute a flattened platinum wire, which, incidentally, is also obtainable locally.

The counterfeit U. V. 199 is distinguished by the fact that the R. C. A., G. E. and W. trade-marks impressed in white on the glass may be erased by rubbing a moistened finger over them. On the genuine these trade-marks are etched on the glass and cannot be removed. The printing on the base of the tube is frequently badly smudged on the bootleg, whereas on the genuine it is quite clear and readable.

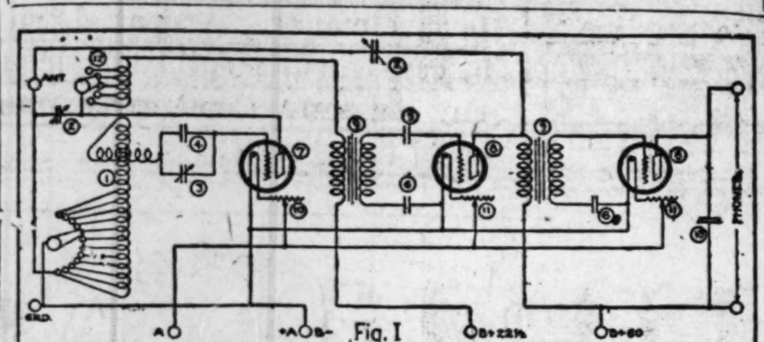
The Loud Speaker at Its Best.

Never try to use a loud speaker with any set unless there are at least two stages of audio frequency amplification. If the receiving station is located very close to the broadcasting station, it is sometimes possible to use only one stage, but as a rule it takes two stages to really work the speaker at its best.

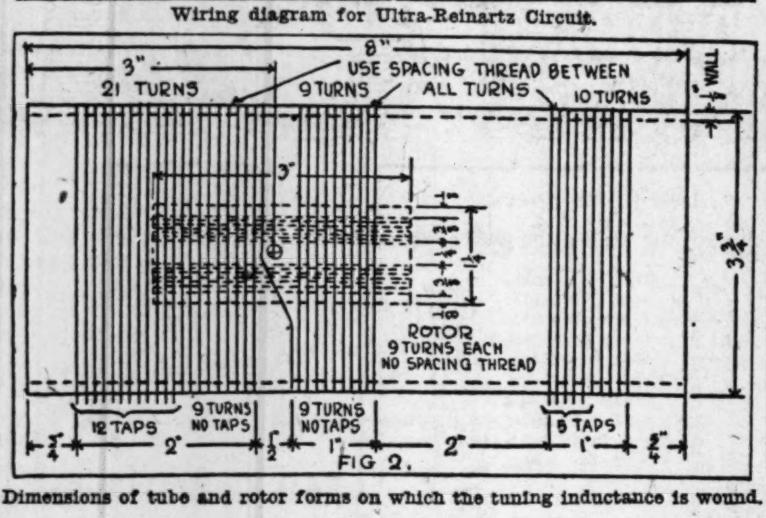
An Inefficient Aerial.

A sagging aerial that is being blown to one side or the other during a windstorm will cause signals to fade.

A Tested Ultra-Reinartz Circuit



Wiring diagram for Ultra-Reinartz Circuit.



Dimensions of tube and rotor forms on which the tuning inductance is wound.

Surprising Results Promised for Experimenters Interested in Reinartz Hook-Ups.

The Reinartz hook-up which appeared in these columns some weeks ago was not found to give particularly satisfying results, and for the benefit of those who are interested in Reinartz circuits, the one shown herewith will be of special interest. It has been tried and proven and according to H. J. Marx, of the Radio Digest, excellent results have been obtained.

The tuning inductance consists of a specially constructed variometer, an explanatory "close up" of which is shown in Figure 2, with necessary details and measurements given. The results obtainable with any receiving set depend largely upon the efficiency of the tuning unit, and it is important that the instructions be followed carefully in order to avoid disappointment when the set is finally completed and given its first try out.

The primary circuit of the tuner, as in the old form of Reinartz, is controlled by a tap switch which varies the number of turns in use, while the grid circuit is controlled by the variation of the self-induction similar to the variometer in the so-called two-variometer circuit.

The primary winding starts with 12 turns tapped every turn. Nine turns are then wound with taps, and after leaving a half-inch space, nine more untapped turns are wound. The end of this winding is connected with the winding on the rotor, either by means of a pigtail braid, or through the rotor shaft.

The rotor winding consists of two sets of nine turns each, wound with No. 22 d. c. c. wire not separated by spacing thread. A quarter-inch space is left between the two sets of turns. The free end is connected by a pigtail connection to a binding post on the large tube.

The feed-back winding is spaced two inches from the finish of the last winding on the large tube. The first five turns are each tapped, but the last five are not. All taps should be staggered around the tube so that sufficient clearage may be had for making soldered connections leading to the contact points of the two switches. The leads should run direct without crossing or touching.

Fiber, bakelite, or even cardboard tubing can be used for the large tube.

Number 18 double cotton covered wire is used, and in winding, a spacing cord (any light weight string or heavy thread) is kept between each turn of wire. Another method is to wind No. 20 bare copper wire right next to, and beside the No. 18—winding them together. When finished and the tube and windings are given a coat of collodion, and when this is dry, the bare wire is removed, leaving the insulated winding fixed in position with eve nspaces, giving a minimum of between-turns capacity in the coil.

Following is a list of the necessary apparatus accompanied by figures which correspond with the respective instruments in the diagram:

(1) Tuning unit.
(2) Two .0005 mfd. vernier variable condensers.
(3) .001 mfd. vernier variable condenser.
(4) .0015 mfd. fixed condenser.
(5) .0025 fixed condenser.
(6) Two .00015 mfd. fixed condensers.
(7) Detector tube.
(8) Two amplifier or hard tubes.
(9) Two audio frequency transformers.
(10) Vernier rheostat.
(11) Two ordinary rheostats.
(12) Taped tickler and choke.
(13) .002 mfd. fixed condenser.

Eight binding posts, three tube sockets, one panel (approximately 10 by 22 by ¼ inches), two switch levers and 17 and contact points.

Radio Station Near Vienna.

The Marconi Company has taken over the Austrian Government radio station at Laaerburg, just outside of Vienna. This has necessitated negotiations between that company and representatives of the Naval Communication Service regarding charges for traffic handled in the future for the Naval Communication Service. This station has formed since the war, a link in the Naval Communication Service in Europe from Paris to Constantinople. Messages are sent from Paris by telegraph via Coblenz to Vienna. Navy enlisted personnel in the telegraph office at Vienna receive these messages and transmit them by telegraph a short distance to the radio station at Laaerburg where navy operators, utilizing the Vienna radio transmitter during certain hours of the day, transmit the messages to American vessels in the Mediterranean and at constantinople. Service will continue at heretofore via the Austrian radio station, but a certain rate per word will be paid to the Marconi Company for dispatches transmitted through the Vienna radio station.

Radiograms.

A radio station is being erected in Warsaw, Poland, and it is said to be one of the most powerful in the world. The cost of the station will approximate $2,000,000.

The highest aerial in the world is being erected between the mountain peaks of the Bavarian Alps, south of Munich. The aerial, when completed, will be 6000 feet above sea level.

The main aerial of the U. S. S. Leviathan, which is suspended between two top masts, is more than .600 feet long, and is 200 feet above the water level.

What is believed to be the first radio picnic in the United States was recently held at Marysville, Cal., by Arizona and California. No fewer than 1500 persons attended.

Good Ground Connections.

Sometimes the lack of clear sounds in the receiving set can be blamed on a poor ground connection. If it is connected up to the water meter in the cellar, the pipe should be scraped clean for about three inches on each side of it, and the wire should be fastened so that the current will go around the meter and not through it.

To Avoid Humming Noises.

The continuous hum that is many times heard in receiving sets, both in and out of transmitting hours, is often due to nearby power lines. The remedy is to remove the aerial and lead-in wires from the vicinity of the power lines, and if possible to run the aerial at right angles to them. Other mysterious and irritating noises are caused by induction from neighboring motors, elevators and telephone lines.

An Important Adjustment.

The adjustment of the rheostat on the detector tube is one of the highly important points in receiving broadcasting. If too much current is passed through the filament, the set has a decided tendency to squeal and howl, and if there is not enough, the set will be either altogether silent or the signals will be very weak. A vernier attachment is essential to really get this little point half way in between the squeal and silence.

The "Push-Pull" Circuit.

A push-pull circuit is one in which two tubes co-operate in such a way that their grids receive opposite charges simultaneously, and their plates as a result develop alternating potential in relation to each other.

You Don't Need Tubes to get out of town. Even in summer we receive concerts over 400 miles with my CRYSTAL HOOK-UP. Over 1000 miles in winter. Thousands have bought my plans and remodeled their sets or built sets like mine. Satisfaction GUARANTEED. Send self addressed envelope for further information.

SILENT RADIO TRIBUTE PAID LATE PRESIDENT

Almost Complete Cessation of Broadcasting Throughout the Entire Country.

The important part played in our daily life by radio was forcibly impressed upon the public when, following the death of President Harding, a majority of the broadcasting stations throughout the country closed down for varying periods as a mark of respect.

The almost complete cessation of broadcasting brought home as could nothing else the important niche which radio has carved out for itself in our daily routine in the past two years. People in all walks of life commented upon the gap in their evenings, which they found hard to fill, and while practically all agreed that it was but fitting that the broadcasting of entertainment should temporarily halt while the country sorrowed, probably nothing else connected with the final honoring of our dead President made as deep an impression.

In the death of President Harding, radio lost a good friend. He was one of the first officials of the Government to turn radio fan when, following the first radio conference in 1922, the attention of the country was turned toward the new method of entertainment. The set built for his use in the White House was the last word in reception, but, while he liked to "play" with it, he had but little time to devote to amusement and found himself for a long time unable to cope with the interference which prevailed when there was but one wave length for broadcasting.

In many ways the President evinced his interest in radio. He gladly accepted the invitation extended to him by the National Press Club of Washington to attend the exercises incident to the "christening" of its receiving set, and while the music and speeches which were to have been broadcasted from a near-by Government station especially failed to "come through" the President "stuck around" like the "good fellow" he always was, chatted with the members of the club—which is composed of newspaper men—and gave them a little talk on the difficulties of being President which gave them much inside dope on the great task which confronts the nation's executive from day to day.

While the failure of Congress to pass the White radio bill kept radio from becoming an official subject of consideration at the White House, Mr. Harding frequently expressed his interest in the matter and the hope that legislation could be enacted to eliminate interference, give the amateurs the privileges they desired and which he thought they were entitled to, and put Radio on a concrete foundation.

President Harding was radio's friend, and the silencing of the broadcasting stations of the country was but a fitting mark of respect to a man who laid down his life for his country as surely as if he had died on the field of battle. No finer tribute could have been paid than the silencing of more than 500 stations, quiet while the country ceased its activities and a hundred million people mourned.

When Making a Varicoupler.

Thoroughly dry the cardboard tubes in a warm oven, and then give a coat of schellac both inside and out. As soon as this has dried, the outside is given another coat. This should leave the surface quite glossy. The wire is then wound in the usual manner, the ends being secured through holes in the edges of the tube. The wire is then "painted" with wood alcohol, which the covering absorbs greedily; then the coil is set away to let the alcohol evaporate. Keep away from fire. The alcohol softens the schellac, and this in turn sticks to the cotton covering of the wire where it is in contact with the tube. It will be found that the wire is held securely enough for couplers and variometers, also the rotors of these, but not for tuning coils with which a slider is used.

VALUE OF RADIO TO THE BLIND EMPHASIZED

Letter From Sightless Girl Tells of What It Means to the Afflicted.

In lieu of the inspiration which the artist derives from the upturned, expectant faces of her audience, the singer at the radio broadcasting station, if she has imagination, can picture hundreds of homes where sit invalids, blind men and women and even many deaf people, thrilled at her every note.

Letters which come to the radio broadcasting station emphasize the enjoyment which "stay-at-homes" get from broadcast music. To many of them "air" entertainment is the only pleasure that breaks the monotony of passing time. To many radio brings for a time at least forgetfulness of suffering. One such letter is that received recently by station W G Y at Schenectady, N. Y., from a young blind woman who lives in Seneca Falls, N. Y. She was graduated from college after working her way through aided by the limited means of her parents. While taking a year's work in normal school to fit herself for teaching a serious illness brought on blindness. She had to provide a living for herself, her aged father and mother and she became a masseuse. Writing to W G Y she says:

"If you could know how much we enjoy the voice of the Schenectady station you would be glad that God gave you such a gift. My father, who is very hard of hearing, can hear you distinctly and knows your voice already, although we are only two weeks old in the radio world. Father could get nearly all the service and sang the hymns with the choir.

"The work of massage is so very exhausting that even when there is an invitation to get some recreation, physical weariness makes it impossible to enjoy anything. The constant association with sick people, the worry of expense and the strain of trying to do things without sight, the care of a father who has been feeble a long time, and the anxiety of a mother 74 years old, who has had to work so hard to serve a deaf husband and blind daughter, all these things brought me to a dreadful state of mind, distrusting everybody and sorry for myself. No honors conferred on a celebrity could have given greater pleasure than the church service gave two people, one deaf and the other blind and hungry for something good and helpful. The talk which I heard about Christ and Christianity was a greater banquet than any that was ever spread before the greatest man.

"I do wish that some philanthropist who would like to do something for the blind would furnish radio sets to those who are less fortunate than I."

RADIO A BOON TO LIGHT KEEPERS

Radiophone communication between light stations in isolated territory has been found very successful by the Lighthouse Service, according to reports to the Department of Commerce. Complete stations were installed at Cape Sarichef and Scotch Cap Light Stations, Alaska, in 1921, and after overcoming some difficulties of operation during the first year, due to burnouts of the motor generator and wrecking of one of the steel antenna masts by a storm, communication between the stations has continued uninterruptedly for the past year.

The two stations are about 17 miles apart. Keepers at both stations have mastered the code, so as to be able to exchange messages with mail steamers, and have been able to communicate for a distance of 6 miles by voice and 165 miles in code. The telephone installation at these stations consists of a type C. W. 936 short range radio telephone set, two three-quarter K. W. 32-volt Delco engine-driven generators, two 70-ft. steel poles and the antenna and ground system.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer

Q. (1) I am making an Erla Reflex set using a crystal detector. What distance can I get with this set during the winter? (2) What type of tube is best for a detector? For an amplifier? (3) In making a set using a varicoupler, two variometers and two variable condensers will radio frequency increase the volume? (4) Will honey-comb coils be needed? G. T.

A. (1) Too many factors enter into the operation of a receiving set to estimate, with any degree of accuracy, the receiving range it will cover. An efficient Erla reflex set should, when connected to an outdoor aerial, cover between 500 and 800 miles in winter, under favorable atmospheric conditions. (2) A "soft" tube is best for use as a detector—(UV200, C-300). A "hard" tube (UV-201, UV-201-A, C-301, C-301-A, UV-199 and WD-12) make the best amplifiers. (3) Yes, if properly constructed. (4) No.

Q. (1) My tube is labeled 5 volts for the filament. Will it burn out if a 6 volt battery is used (2) Could a 6 volt ignition dry battery be used with this tube? M. McN.

A. (1) Not if a rheostat is connected in series with the tube. (2) Yes, but if the tube consumes more than .25 of an ampere, the life of the battery will be comparatively short.

Q. (1) Would a potentiometer improve the efficiency of an Erla reflex set? (2) Would it take the place of a rheostat? H.

A. (1) No. (2) No.

Q. Is New York City located in a radio "pocket?" H. M.

A. We have never heard that it is, but the great amount of steel surrounding the broadcasting stations on Manhattan Island have a damping effect on the signals they transmit.

Q. The selectivity of my variocoupler—twin-variometer receiving set is about the same as a single-circuit set. My aerial is 100 feet long, connected by a 25 foot lead-in. What can be done to correct the difficulty? P. C.

A. Try shortening your antenna about 25 or 30 feet.

Q. (1) I have trouble in tuning in distant stations. Local stations come in very well, but distant ones are very weak, athough the carrier waves are audible. (2) Can you give me some pointers on tuning? W. B.

A. (1) Your trouble may be due to too short an aerial, or an inefficient aerial or apparatus. It is also possible that you are not yet familiar enough with the set to tune it sharply. It requires a set that is almost one hundred per cent efficient to pick up distant stations during the summertime. (2) Ability to tune a receiving set only comes with practice.

Q. Would a 48-plate vernier variable condenser be of any value in a crystal detector set? If so where should it be connected? C. D.

A. A 43-plate variable condenser would perhaps help to make the tuning more sharp if connected either across the aerial and ground, or, in series with the aerial and set, but the vernier is of no value in a crystal set.

Q. (1) Could I load my single-circuit set having a normal range up to 600 meters, so that I could receive signals transmitted on 25,000 meters by the addition of a honeycomb coil of the correct number of turns? (2) Is a loud-speaker which functions without batteries as satisfactory as one which requires batteries? (3) Could a small step-down transformer connected to 110 volts alternating current be used to take the place of an "A" battery? W. R. T.

A. (1) No. To work up to 25,000 meters, a long antenna and large honeycomb coils are required. (2) Yes, satisfactory for many people, but for very loud signals and great amplification, one which uses an external battery is employed. (3) Not with any great degree of satisfaction. It has been done, but the methods as very complicated, for the enthusiast, who has not had a great deal of experience in constructing radio apparatus.

Class B Broadcasting Stations.

There are now about 30 class B broadcasting stations operating on individually-assigned frequencies between 1000 and 550 kilocycles (300 and 546 meters). These stations furnish programs of high quality and employ transmitting sets of 500 to 1000 watt power to secure the privilege of frequency assignment in this band.

For Economy's Sake.

Before putting a set of expensive tubes in a new set, whether home-made or bought, always test the circuits to be sure that the high voltage B battery circuit has not become shorted across the filament lines. This can be done with a little flash lamp. This simple test may save considerable money.

Radiograms.

The Pennsylvania State College teaches radio reception and transmission by correspondence.

Crop and market reports are broadcast by radio to 24,000,000 rural dwellers throughout the United States.

An experiment was recently carried out in Brooklyn, N. Y., when a young man was hypnotized by radio and his body became as rigid as a bar of iron.

The Department of Commerce formids the operation of amateur radio transmitters between the hours of 8 p. m. and 10 p. m., standard time, and Sunday morning during church services.

BIG FUTURE FORESEEN FOR RADIO COMPASS

Considered by Engineer, to Be One of the Most Important Navigational Aids of Future.

Position finding by wireless is destined to be one of the most important navigational aids of the future, whether employed alone or in conjunction with sound to obtain synchronous signals, in the estimation of D. W. Hood, M. Inst., C. E., engineer in chief to the Corporation of Trinity House, London, who was among those present at the International Congress of Navigation, held in London last month. George R. Putnam, Commissioner of Lighthouses, was among the American delegates to the convention which was declared to be the most important meeting of the kind ever held.

In his report, Mr. Hood referred to the fact that various countries have different direction-finding systems of their own, and recommended that an investigation be made to find the most effective method, not by individual countries but by one agency under an international agreement.

The establishment of radio fog signals was the most important advance in lighthouse work in the United States during the past ten years, according to a paper read at the conference by Commissioner Putnam. The first of these signals were placed in service on May 1, 1921, when three were put into commission in the vicinity of New York harbor. The number of such stations has been increased during the past year and others are in course of preparation.

Each of the radio fog stations in United States waters sends automatically during fog or low visibility radio signals of a distinctive characteristic, on a wave length of 1,000 meters, which are used by vessels equipped with radio compasses. Very results are being obtained, Mr. Putnam declared.

For the Notebook.

A run-down battery will make the set extremely noisy.

For the best results, the aerial should be insulated carefully.

Keep wires straight; a kink in a wire may cause it to break.

To keep wires evenly spaced on a coil, wind cotton cord between them.

The low current consumption tubes will run from a battery a long time without having it recharged.

Joining Wires Without Solder.

When it is impossible to solder a joint the wires should be scraped until bright, twisted securely together and wrapped tightly with tinfoil or lead foil at the joint. Cover the tinfoil with friction tape in such a way as to keep the water from entering the joint. By this method the wires are kept free from corrosion caused by the elements.

Radio on Lifeboats.

Lifeboats on the Leviathan, America's greatest passenger liner, are equipped with radio apparatus. The sets are as powerful as those on the average cargo vessels.

APARTMENT BLOCK SALE FOR $900,000 FEATURES DEALS

Week Otherwise Reported Comparatively Quiet, Due to Warm Weather and the Vacation Season.

By Berry Moore.

The week in realty was reported as comparatively quiet. This condition was due to the warm weather, together with the fact that an unusual number of persons are away from the city, according to Fred G. Zeibig of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, who, apparently, was not perturbed.

The chief transaction of the week was the sale of a West End apartment block for $900,000, negotiated by Singer-Klein Real Estate Co. The location of the property and the identity of the buyer are withheld, pending execution of final papers. Negotiations are pending for many other buildings of this character, as well as for a number of large West End hotel structures, recently completed or in course of construction.

The salient feature of this time is the interest centered in flats and apartments. Buildings under these classifications are engaging the attention of both speculators and investors, especially in view of the fact that owners are becoming more susceptible to offers than formerly. This refers principally to owners of apartment buildings of which there has been an appreciable number erected since the first of the year.

The demand for apartments on the part of renters, however, apparently, is increasing in proportion with that of the supply. If there has been any reduction in rentals it has been concealed through concesions or extensions of rental dates, but these instances, doubtless, have been few and far between. As a reason for the sustained rental demand, realtors point to the growth of the city, which is characterized as phenomenal.

Judging from surface indications, the fall season will be marked by a spirited movement in the flat and apartment building district. The supply of flats available for purchase is, however, limited, except at fictitious prices.

Even the more conservative members of the fraternity are optimistic as to the future, with the mounting costs of building material restricting construction. The expenditures to be made under the $88,000,000 bond issue will sustain the present real estate movement 10 years longer, according to Henry L. Cornet, of the Cornet & Zeibig trust.

Prices here are substantially lower in comparison with those of other large cities, notably Chicago and Detroit, according to Eugene Hartrich of the John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co., and Louis Cartain of L. V. Cartain & Co., and other local realtors. Hartridge and Cartain have returned from a study of the situation in those cities, thoroughly convinced that virtually everything here is on the bargain counter.

There is a noticeable lull in vacant ground, due primarily to the continued high prices of construction, according to Zeibig. As a result, houses, flats and apartments, sooner or later, will reflect higher prices, he declares.

A noteworthy demand is fast developing for property of a business and a semi-business character on the part of buyers of both the professional and the investment type, which promises to be most pronounced throughout the fall and winter. The business district east of Eighteenth and Twelfth streets which has been practically at a standstill, as regards building operations, is scheduled for an era of large construction. There is an acute shortage of office buildings, hotels, and business houses, owing to the suspension of construction in this section as the direct reult of high cost of building and labor.

Increased Construction in Missouri.

July building contracts in Missouri amounted to $9,541,0000, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was an increase of 11 per cent over the June figure, and a decrease of 24 per cent from July, 1922. This year's record of building contracts continues to run ahead of last year's, by a margin of nearly 7 per cent. Construction started during the first seven months of this year has amounted to $73,882,600, compared with $69,192,700 for the corresponding period of last year.

The July record included: $3,188,000, or 33 per cent for residential buildings; $2,540,000, or 27 per cent for social and recreational projects; $1,561,300, or 16 per cent for public works and utilities; $790,000, or 8 per cent for educational buildings; and $758,700, or 8 per cent for business buildings.

MOORLANDS HOMES WORTH $450,000; MORE ASSURED

Number of Beautiful Residences Are to be Built in the Addition this Fall; Streets and Other Improvements Built.

Homes to the value of approximately $450,000 are now under construction or have been completed in the Moorlands, and surveys are now being made by recent purchasers of homesites and plans being drafted in preparation for building during the fall building period.

Henry Peterson, superintendent of A. Leschen & Sons Rope Co., is now occupying his beautiful home on Boland place, and Mrs. I. C. Muckerman is soon to move into her new home recently completed. The home of Mrs. Louise Bauer is nearing completion, and F. L. Wendler expects to move into his new home within the next month. Homes built for T. Francis Campbell of Campbell & Co., and for R. A. Casting on Moorlands drive are now ready for occupancy, and a home for Edwin H. Wagner on Wydown boulevard and Moorlands drive is under roof. Two English type residences being erected on Claverach avenue by Wesley M. Bachman, of the firm of Preston J. Bradshaw, architects, will be ready in 15 or 20 days, and work is rapidly progressing on a home for Harry E. Krisman.

Charles A. Shaw has plans drafted for an English type, eight-room residence, with two-car garage, on Wydown boulevard, at Glen Ridge avenue, and construction will begin immediately on a colonial home on Wydown boulevard for E. W. Francis.

The Moorlands is located a few blocks west of Forest Park, between Wydown boulevard and Clayton road, and is one of the largest residential parks now under development, comprising more than 200 acres. It is exclusively for homes, and among other conveniences will have a large public school building located in the center of the addition, the School Board of Clayton having recently purchased an entire block of ground in the addition in preparation for erecting the building.

Shaw & Francis report that although weather conditions during August have been unfavorable to subdivision selling, sales in the Moorlands have continued steadily.

A remarkable record in subdivision development has been made in the Moorlands in the last three months. According to Shaw & Francis, special agents for the Moorlands working through the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., an improvement program was laid out early in the spring, and this program is now practically completed, and homes which are now being completed are fully served with all conveniences, including gas, water, electricity, telephone and sewer service.

Approximately three and one-half miles of concrete street pavement has been completed, and all of the major street program has been finished with the exception of 300 feet of concrete pavement on Moorlands drive, and the paving of two short side streets. In Moorlands Park, a part of the addition, virtually all of the sewer system is installed. Development of parkways and sunken gardens will be begun immediately, and it is expected that shrubbery will be planted and other landscape work finished before winter.

5-STORY BUILDING ON NORTH SEVENTH SOLD

Martin & Breitt announce the sale of the five-story and basement building at 816-18 North Seventh street to Mrs. Pauline Smith.

The building has a frontage of 40 by 120 feet on the east side of Seventh street and contains approximately 30,000 square feet, steam heat and electric elevator. The building will be used by the Smith Furniture Co., as a salesroom and for additional warehouse space. The company has let contracts for a sprinkler system and for remodeling the building at a cost of approximately, $25,000.

The sale was made for the account of Philip C. Platt. Martin & Breitt represented both parties.

Van Ness bought as a speculation and turned them over at a profit. The increased rental return makes them a good investment for the new owner. Price reported $11,500.

CHARGES STANDARD FIXES OIL PRICES

Georgia Attorney-General Writes to Governor Walker Concerning Possible Action by State.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 18.—Gasoline prices in Georgia "fluctuate at the nod and beck of the Standard Oil Company which has virtual control of the situation locally," it was charged by State's Attorney General George M. Napier late today in a letter to Governor Walker, following an investigation during the week of prices on that commodity in the state.

The Attorney-General's investigation will continue "until a satisfactory solution of the situation is obtained," according to the letter, which added that during the week, despite "well concealed machinery on the part of the Standard Oil Co., manipulation of prices is going on in the State."

If necessary the State can institute legal proceedings under the laws concerning monopolies and combinations in restraint of trade in order to effect a lower gasoline price, the Attorney-General rules, but the State must have a strong case against the oil company in order to succeed, he added.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 18. — City Commissioner John H. Hopkins announced today bids would be opened Tuesday for construction of a 12,000 gallon gasoline tank to supply gasoline to city departments. Hopkins declared he had received no word indicating there would be an increase in gasoline prices here but if they do go up he would try to persuade the city council to allow the city to go into open and immediate competition with oil companies. The city recently authorized a vote next spring on the question of amending the city charter to permit the city to engage in the retail gasoline business.

South Dakota Price Not Followed Elsewhere by Standard.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—While officials of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana were reported tonight to be watching closely the gasoline price situation in South Dakota where independents announced a two-cent advance, effective today, there was no indication that either Standard or independent companies expected to alter the price elsewhere immediately. Reports here were that a uniform price had not been put into effect today in South Dakota by the independents, some putting the advance into effect and other selling at 16 cents.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today cut one cent a gallon from the export price of gasoline, quoting 26.15 cents a gallon for U. S. Navy specifications in cases for cargo lots and 12½ cents a gallon in bulk.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 18.—Gasoline price, retail, was cut from 19 to 18 cents here today. Companies declared it was not a price war but the result of accumulated stocks.

HEAD OF LUCEY MFG. CO. CONTRADICTS RECEIVERS

Says Explanation of Cause of Receivership Is Not Borne Out by Facts.

By the Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 18. —J. F. Lucey, president of the Lucey Manufacturing Co. of New York, which was thrown into hands of receivers in New York yesterday, and head of the Tennessee company bearing his name which also was placed in receivers' hands a fortnight ago, tonight issued a statement in which he took issue with C. E. Miller, one of the receivers, who gave out a statement in regard to the company's affairs.

In the statement credited to Miller it was stated that the receivership for the New York firm was precipitated by the failure of the local company and that plans for a reorganization of the New York firm were well under way when the local creditors of the Chattanooga company filed a petition for a receiver. Both of these statements, according to Lucey, are contrary to the facts.

Lucey said that the receivership for the New York company was the result of an agreement and compromise between the company officials and the security holders and creditors and was entered into when all efforts at a refinancing of the company had failed. He states further that instead of the Tennessee company's receivership having precipitated the receivership for the New York company, the latter's failure to meet its obligations to the Tennessee company was the only cause for the petition for a receivership in the Chattanooga courts.

MUSICAL.—Music is the science, and the art, of the rhythmic combination of tones, vocal or instrumental, embracing melody and harmony, for the expression of anything possible by this means, but chiefly anything emotional. It is an art of beauty and expression. To transpose music is to change it to a different tonality; to write or play music in a different key, as to transpose a tune from G to B flat.

D. W.—Originally the word "etiquette" signified a slip of paper, affixed to a bag or other object, to indicate its contents, a tag, a label. The word came probably to possess the secondary meaning which we now attach to it, of the forms or decorums observed in the intercourse of life more particularly on state occasions, from its having been customary to deliver such tickets instructing each person who was to share in a ceremony as to the part which he was expected to play. The cards on which the order of the dances is set forth at balls and evening parties are of this nature.

HOUSEWIFE.—The recipe for Spanish pickles is as follows: 1 peck of green tomatoes, thinly sliced; 4 onions, thinly sliced; 1 cup of salt; ½ of an ounce of cloves; ½ of an ounce of allspice berries; ¼ of an ounce of peppercorns; ½ of a cup of brown mustard seed; 1 pound of brown sugar; 4 green peppers, finely chopped; and cider vinegar. Sprinkle alternate layers of tomatoes and onions, with salt, and let them stand overnight. In the morning drain, and put in a preserving kettle, adding remaining ingredients, using enough vinegar to cover all. Heat gradually, to the boiling point, and boil one-half of an hour.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

R. E. A.—The insurance policy would be payable to the beneficiary named in it.

JACK.—If you are living under an assumed name, and you bought property under that same name, it would be legal.

MISS L. A.—Your case is too involved for an answer in this column. You should see a prosecuting attorney.

X. Y. Z.—Your question would require too long an answer to state in this column. Limit your question to one state and write again.

VERY DOUBTFUL.—The men who married the sisters are not brothers-in-law to each other, but they are uncles to each other's children.

S. D. S.—The lodge has a right to make the investigation mentioned, before giving you the money left to you by one of its deceased members.

E. C.—If a man married a widow with one child, on her death he would receive one-half of her estate, plus certain specific exemptions, such as her clothing, personal property, etc.

J. H. C.—Whether or not you could sue the lodge for the money, would depend upon the policy and the by-laws of the lodge in question. You had better see a lawyer.

CONSTANT READER.—If the husband's move is bona fide, his wife is guilty of desertion in refusing to go with him, and therefore could not demand or collect support from him.

A. H.—If the deceased was a resident of Missouri, and left no widow, the older brother, who is a resident of the same state, can be administrator of his property. The property descends to his folks equally, mother, sister and brother.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

K. T.—It is impossible to answer your question, as you do not state your age, or sex, or give any other particulars, which are necessary, for an understanding of your condition.

FRANK.—Your condition is, no doubt, a balanitis, and circumcision is the best remedy for this. However, a wash of boric acid solution in connection with strict cleanliness, will do doubt rectify it to some extent.

J. J.—If the lumbago is acute, 10 grains of salicylate of soda every 3 or 4 hours, will relieve it. If it is chronic, the following will be of use: Salil iodidi, 2 drams; kalii acetat, 2 drams; tinct. colchici, 2 drams; syr. sarsaparil, enough added to make four ounces. Take two to three teaspoonfuls one-half hour before meals. Be sure constipation is remedied if it is present.

You were never all alone.

And as we gaze on the many beautiful flowers,
That decorated your home and your grave,
We think of the many happy hours,
That to others you freely gave.

Doing little acts of kindness
To all who came your way;
We hope the dear Lord will be kind to you,
And for this we earnestly pray,
Hoping to meet you in heaven at the end of a perfect day.

You always loved babies and little children
And wanted them for your very own
So the dear Lord placed you among them
Close to His heavenly throne.

And little Carl and Grandpa were waiting
Within the beautiful gates ajar,
To give you a loving welcome,
To your beautiful home above the stars.
Sadly missed by all who loved her.
MRS. C. A. KIMMEL.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my dear wife, Mrs. Bertha Rauh, who departed this life Aug. 19, 1922.
She bade no one a last farewell;
She said good-by to none,
Her loving heart had ceased to beat;
And before I knew it she was gone.
And when I lost you, dear wife,
I lost my dearest pal.
I love you and I miss you
And forever shall.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, HENRY, AND CHILDREN AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

A year ago you left us;
A voice we loved is still;
Bernice, we loved you dearly,
No one your place can fill.
But God, who loved you better,
Thought best to call you home
For he needed another angel
To hover around His throne.
In loving memory of our dearly beloved daughter and sister, Bernice Owens, whom God called home one year ago, Aug. 20.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND FATHER.

In sad, but loving remembrance of our dear daughter, Rowena C. Duckworth, who died the sixteenth day of August, one year ago.
Surrounded by friends, we are lonesome,
In midst of pleasure, we are blue.
A smile on our faces, still our hearts ache;
Aching and longing for you.
There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
Sorrows so deep in the human heart
That cannot be revealed,
And when we lost our Rowena,
We lost our dearest pal.
Sadly missed by father, mother, brothers and all those who loved her.

I Want A Traveling Sales-manager

For various reasons I have to make this a blind advertisement, but I can assure anyone answering it that their communication will be held absolutely confidential.

Our firm manufactures advertising calendars and specialties of various kinds, selling direct to the advertiser.

Our plant is located in the Middle West.

We are doing a fair volume of business, which is gradually increasing.

So as to broaden our scope we want to find a young man with some experience in handling salesmen and selling goods—someone between the ages of, say, 27 and 35—who is willing to devote perhaps three weeks out of every month traveling throughout the country, hiring salesmen and teaching them to sell our line, if necessary.

Such a man must be a hard worker and, if married, his wife must be one who will help, not hinder him, who is willing to forego seeing quite so much of him today, so that they may both enjoy life more in the future.

If I can find the right man, and he is capable not only of making a success in the work for which he is hired but can broaden out as time goes on, he will later on undoubtedly have the chance to become a stockholder and officer of this company.

The salary to start will not be over $5000, maybe less, according to his qualifications.

If you think you have the qualifications, write fully why you think so, and if it seems desirable, I'll arrange a personal interview.

Address Box J-68, Post-Dispatch.

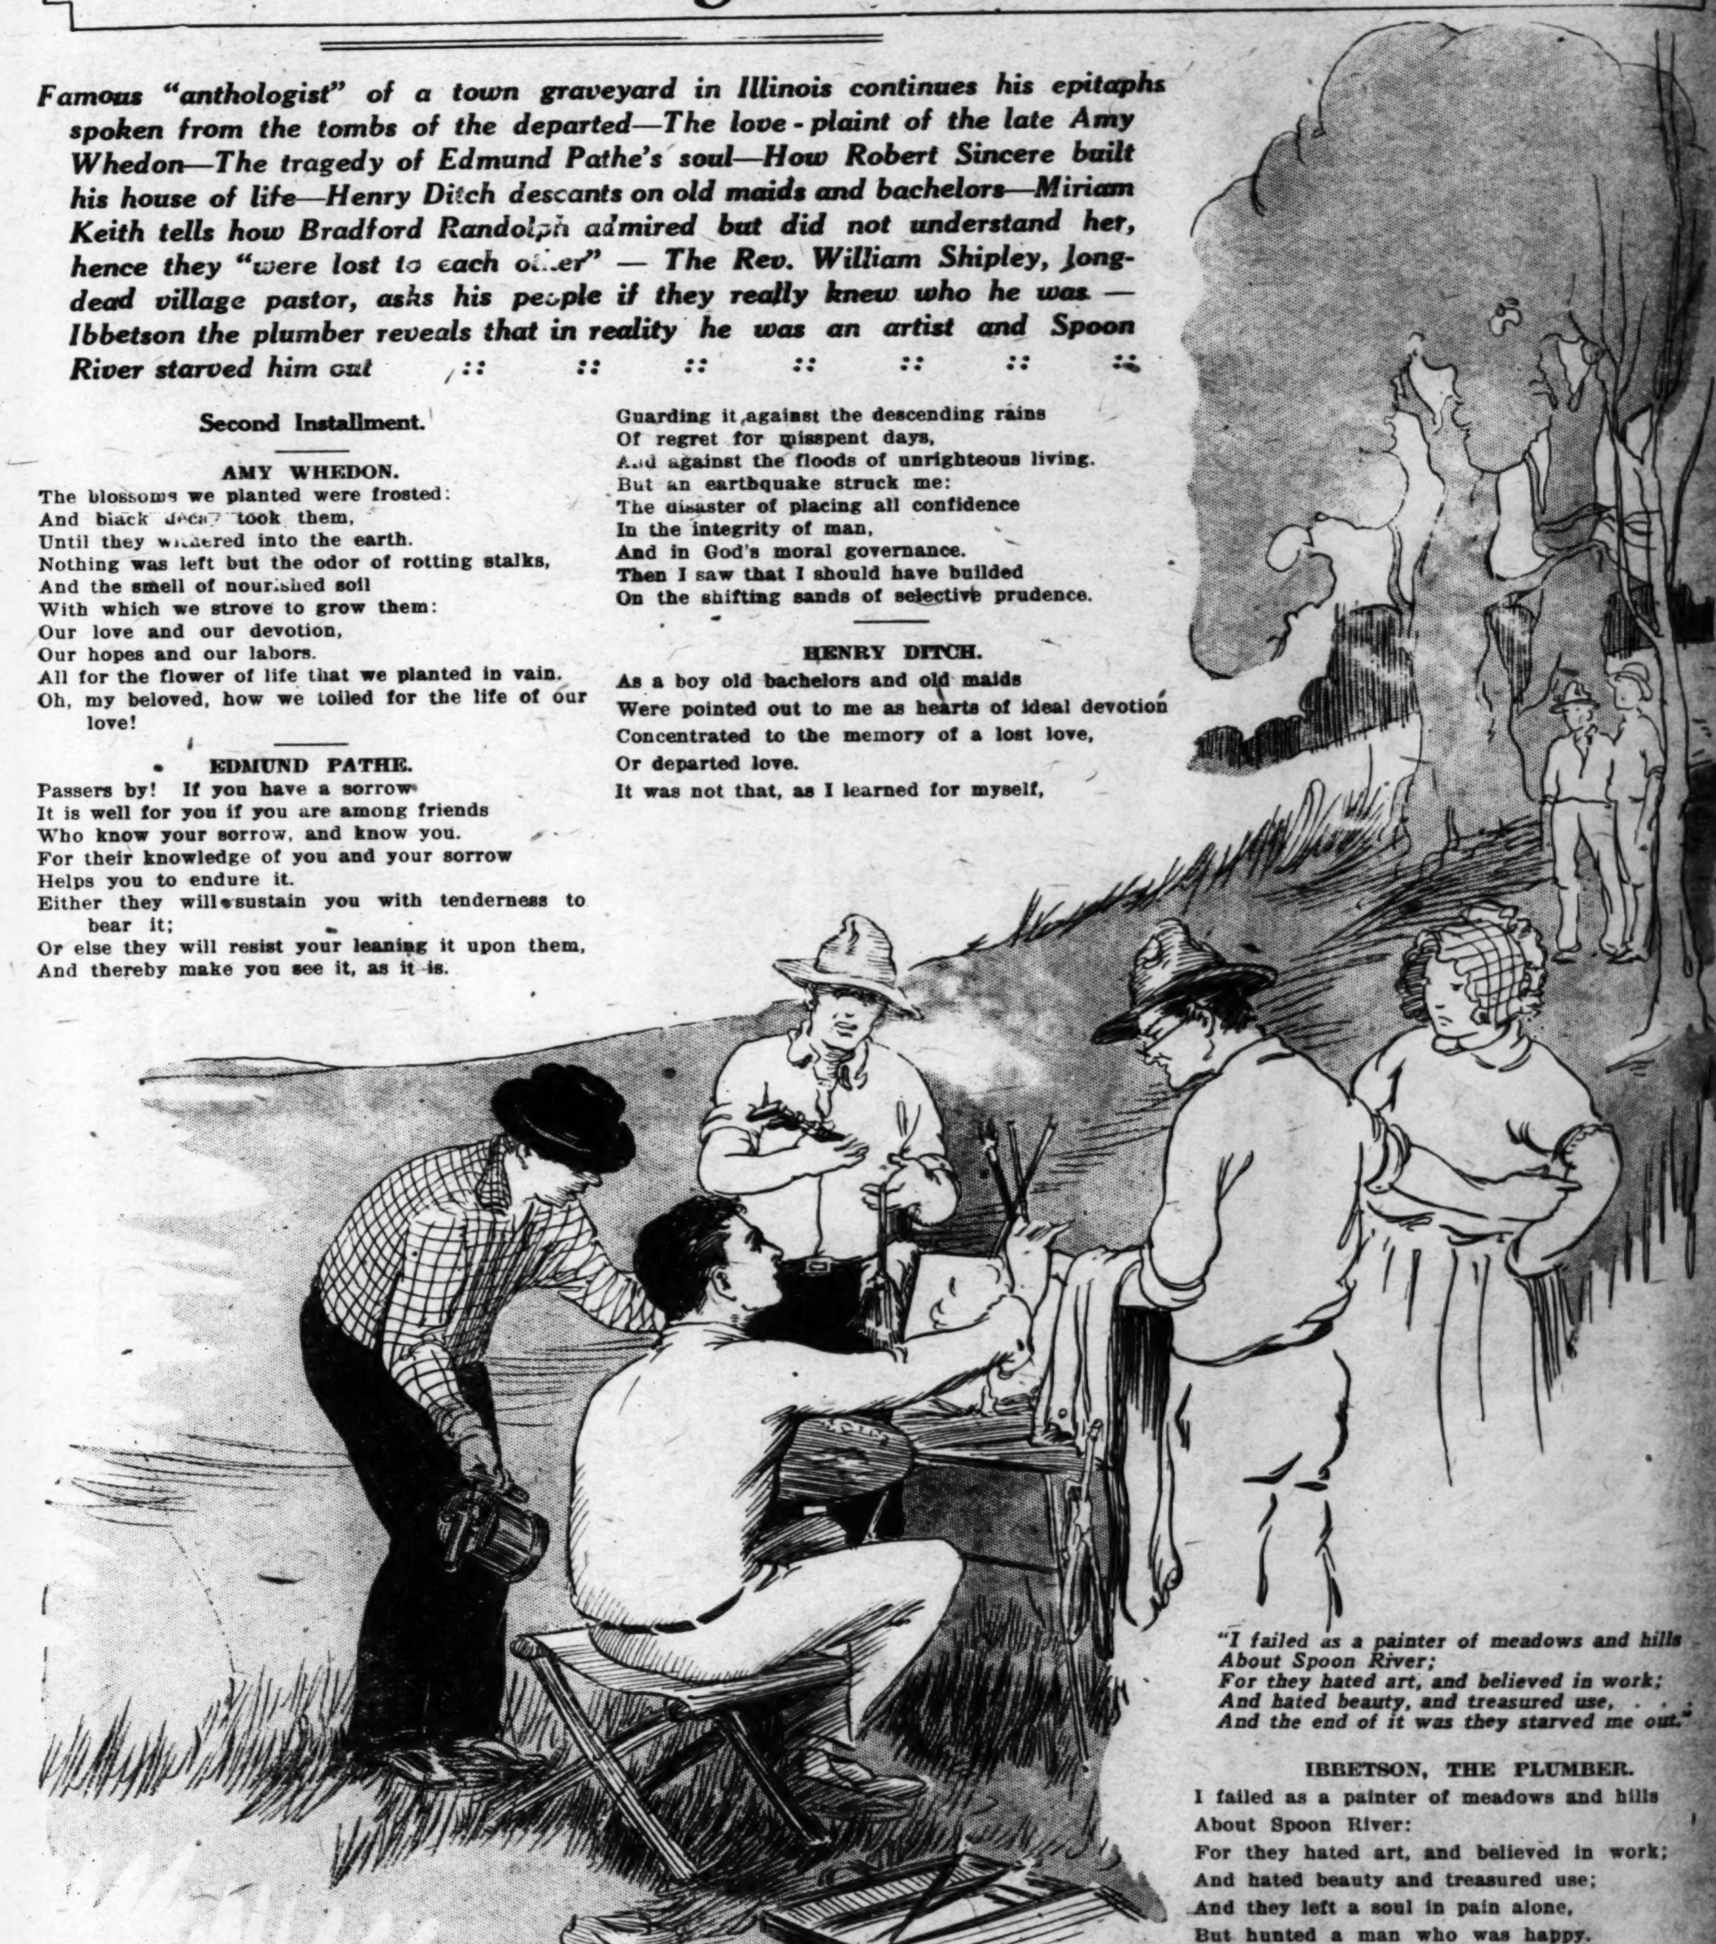
SPOON RIVER EPITAPHS

A Series of New Verses By

Edgar Lee Masters

Famous "anthologist" of a town graveyard in Illinois continues his epitaphs spoken from the tombs of the departed—The love-plaint of the late Amy Whedon—The tragedy of Edmund Pathe's soul—How Robert Sincere built his house of life—Henry Ditch descants on old maids and bachelors—Miriam Keith tells how Bradford Randolph admired but did not understand her, hence they "were lost to each other" — The Rev. William Shipley, long-dead village pastor, asks his people if they really knew who he was — Ibbetson the plumber reveals that in reality he was an artist and Spoon River starved him out :: :: :: :: :: :: ::



Second Installment.

AMY WHEDON.

The blossoms we planted were frosted:
And black decay took them,
Until they withered into the earth.
Nothing was left but the odor of rotting stalks,
And the smell of nourished soil
With which we strove to grow them:
Our love and our devotion,
Our hopes and our labors.
All for the flower of life that we planted in vain.
Oh, my beloved, how we toiled for the life of our love!

EDMUND PATHE.

Passers by! If you have a sorrow
It is well for you if you are among friends
Who know your sorrow, and know you.
For their knowledge of you and your sorrow
Helps you to endure it.
Either they will sustain you with tenderness to bear it;
Or else they will resist your leaning it upon them,
And thereby make you see it, as it is.
But, oh, what a fate was mine, who lived to the time
When only a few knew me,
And no one knew or remembered my sorrow.
That is the tragedy of the soul
In pain and alone as the darkness deepens!

ROBERT SINCERE.

I built the house of my life
On the rock of invincible character,
Guarding it against the descending rains
Of regret for misspent days,
And against the floods of unrighteous living.
But an earthquake struck me:
The disaster of placing all confidence
In the integrity of man,
And in God's moral governance.
Then I saw that I should have builded
On the shifting sands of selective prudence.

HENRY DITCH.

As a boy old bachelors and old maids
Were pointed out to me as hearts of ideal devotion
Concentrated to the memory of a lost love,
Or departed love.
It was not that, as I learned for myself,
That kept their souls from marriage:
If the sun of March bring April breezes,
And tempts the blossoms forth
To the numbing fingers of sudden frost,
And the flail of bitter snow,
The soul of the tree sinks down exhausted,
And cannot bud again.
And that is love forced back by fear,
And robbed of its power to try again
In life's precarious garden!

"I failed as a painter of meadows and hills
About Spoon River;
For they hated art, and believed in work;
And hated beauty, and treasured use, . . .
And the end of it was they starved me out."

IBBETSON, THE PLUMBER.

I failed as a painter of meadows and hills
About Spoon River:
For they hated art, and believed in work;
And hated beauty and treasured use;
And they left a soul in pain alone,
But hunted a man who was happy.
And the end of it was they starved me out.
So I set to work to drain Spoon River
Of all its deadly refuse,
With pipes and sewers and porcelain tubs,
And the boon of running water:
But, oh, Spoon River, where is the plumber
To make you clean of ignorance,
And cruelty, and the money lust
That colors its yellow bacterial plots
With pulpit spewed morality?
And who can mend the sewers of hate
That keep you sick, Spoon River?

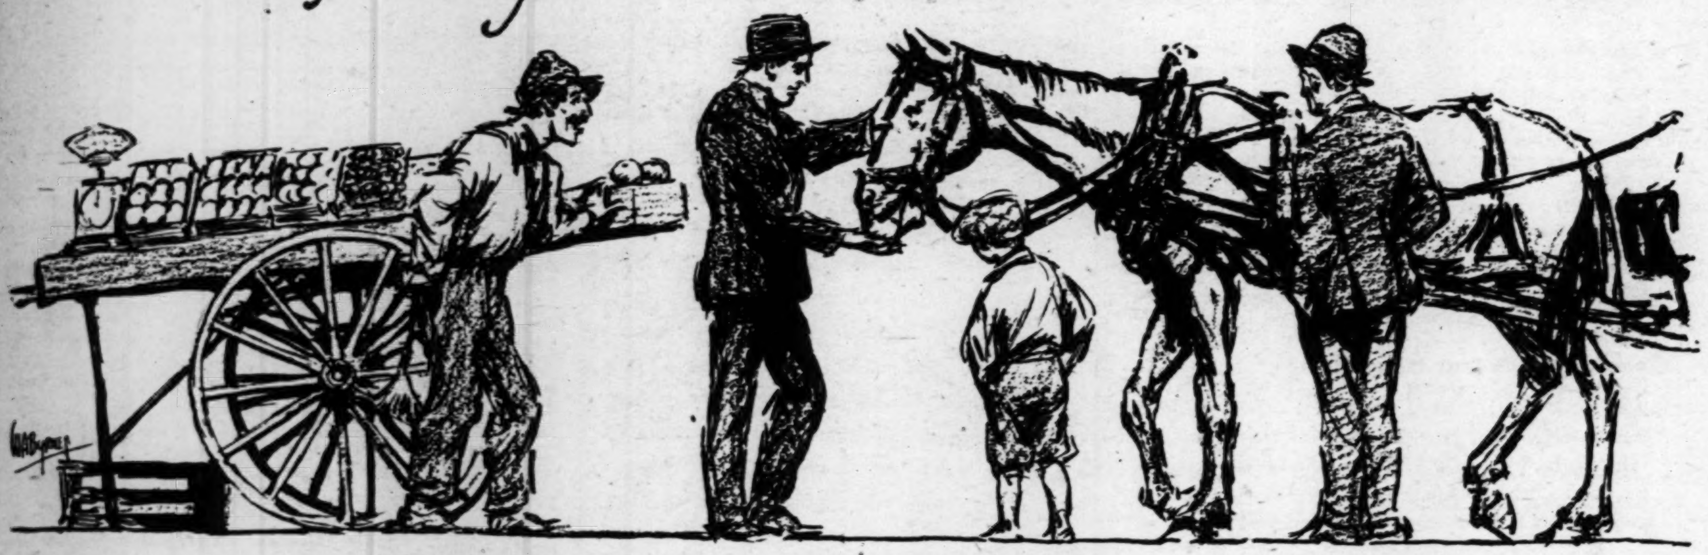
Steve O'Grady Writes His Own Memorial



Christopher Morley prints in his New York Evening Post column a remarkable human document—Letter written in an hour of spiritual exaltation by a newspaper man of St. Louis and many other cities, who died recently—Steve tells how he fed apples to a weary workhorse, entered a chapel to pray and heard a marvelous singer, recovered a suitcase which he had left under Morley's desk three years before and forgotten where he had left it—Contained his mother's picture (a rare one), the crucifix he had carried for 20 years, a copy of Thomas a Kempis which saved him when he was tempted one night in St. Louis, and other sacred souvenirs :: :: :: ::

(The linotype operator upstairs has been instructed to follow copy in reproducing this recent full-length column by Christopher Morley from the editorial page of the New York Evening Post, for which paper Mr. Morley writes a daily column called "The Bowling Green."

There seems to be no reason why any elucidation of Mr. Morley's day's work is necessary—it stands for and speaks for itself, and all those who have spiritual ears will hear. Possibly, however, for those few readers of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine who may be a bit rusty in their French, it is permissible to supply a translation of the apt quotation from Paul Bourget, which the crafty Christopher has placed in front of the memorial to Steve O'Grady.

"It is necessary to live as one thinks, but sooner or later one finishes by thinking as one has lived.")

Desk Mottoes

Il faut vivre comme on pense, sinon, tot ou tard, on finit par penser comme on a vecu.

PAUL BOURGET.

Steve O'Grady

LOS ANGELES, July 3.—Steve O'Grady, veteran newspaper man, who had worked on leading newspapers in many sections of the country, died in the General Hospital yesterday. He was forty-six years old and a native of Kansas City.—New York Tribune.

• • • •

We could say a good deal about dear old Steve; but we intend to print his little memorial mostly in his own words. It seems to us truly representative of life that a man who never had an enemy but himself while alive should in death find his own words his best friends.

Just a word of explanation. One day in 1918 Steve blew hilariously into the office of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger and asked us if he might leave his suitcase under our desk. There it lay for the better part of two years, uncalled for; Steve himself having vanished, as was his way. When we left the Ledger, in 1920, we turned the case over to our side-kick Bart Haley, with the remark that some day Steve would turn up to claim it.

In January, 1921, Steve appeared unexpectedly at the kennel of the Bowling Green. "Well, Steve," we said, "did you ever go and get that suitcase in the Ledger office?" His face changed and he looked at us sharply. "My God," he said, "is that where it is?"

A few days later we received the following letter, which we print word for word. This is Steve's memorial.

• • • •

706 South Washington Square,
Phila., Jan. 8, 1921.
After midnight.

With only a hard pencil between me and success, here I sit in this lovely and quiet spot that you and I love so well. May the ghosts of those great and departed buried in front of me and beneath me intercede with the great God of us all to give me the strength to finish this letter as I would!

When I went up to see you on that fateful afternoon and you told me that under Bart's desk lay a suitcase of mine I couldn't believe that it was the same oblong package that contained those precious souvenirs that I had sought by money and prayers for three years. The chase had been given up. That suitcase contained the things that had warmly decorated my little old Washington Square room at 704 South in years gone by.

I continued the celebration in New York, but always with that thought in mind—they're over there—under Bart's desk. I went wild and forgot. I went up to my room in the Roaring Forties and tried to come back. I went down to Park Row only to tumble again. Roving in that ecstasy in which the dreamer roves, at odd moments the thought would pound itself back. Those precious relics, of value to no one but me—still there! ! ! After three years. In the recess of a session on William Street I wandered over to the Row. The traffic cop escorted me across in the direction of City Hall Place—near little old St. Andrew's Church. Outside this church stood an Italian with an apple wagon—a pushcart—Beyond a horse, a poor weary horse that had worked all day, and whose head drooped. I said to the Italian: "Did it ever occur to you to feed an apple to a horse? It might improve your luck?"

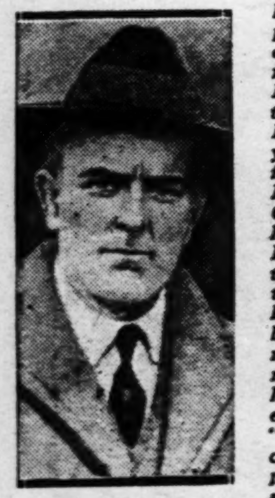
"He bite me," wildly ejaculated the Italian.

"Bite you!" I demanded. "A horse bite a man who feeds him an apple!"

I continued: "Let me show you—Give me three of your apples. There is the quarter. Now watch the horse bite me."

I took the three apples, patted the horse on the forehead and stood there and held all three apples while he ate them. A crowd gathered. Women who didn't know I was drunk stopped to admire. Men muttered that "horses sure liked apples." The Italian was in a trance.

The job of feeding the horse ended, I decided to pray and entered the chapel. It was dark and the pews empty—but as I approached the altar of the Virgin I heard, in one of the clearest coloraturas I have ever heard, the strains of Gounod's "Ave Maria." There was an organ accompaniment. I was afraid to look back. Surely no miracle—But I did look back as the ode ended. Then I realized. A dear old teacher using the organ to train one of his young singers—selecting the most deserted church in town. I didn't dare to address them from the chancel; rather I climbed the rickety stairs to the choir loft and asked her to sing it again. They were inclined to regard me as a madman. I assured them I wasn't. I said: "I'm a newspaper man, but I've been drinking, and I've just fed three apples to a weary horse and now God is rewarding me."



One of Steve O'Grady's last campaigns as a newspaper correspondent covered the investigations into the alleged Ku Kux Klan murders at and in the vicinity of Mer Rouge, La., early this year. O'Grady was there for a New Orleans daily. Born into the Roman Catholic faith, he was a life-long Catholic. At Bastrop, La., he was photographed standing beside the local leader of the Klan, holding the latter by the arm. The Klansman has been cut off in reproducing O'Grady's likeness, but it is interesting to read Steve's own "cutlines" which he penciled on the back of the picture when he sent it to a newspaper girl friend in Kansas City:

"Left to right—Stephen Beaumont O'Grady and Capt. J. K. Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the Morehouse chapter, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. In the lapel of the Captain's coat a miniature of the flag of the Confederacy. In Mr. O'Grady's necktie the monogram of the Popish Church. Note Mr. O'Grady's roll of copy paper. Regular reporter, always prepared."

"Go down," said the old teacher. "We'll sing you Gounod's 'Ave,' and anything else you want."

I did go down and got on my knees before the statue group—the Christ Crucified, the Mother at His side, Magdalene on bended knees with her red hair streaming, and St. John the Divine to the extreme left. I prayed. I knelt, and this unknown singer sang perhaps as she will never sing again—For an hour this unusual concert. People came to pray a moment and go—but always the young singer looked down on her kneeling audience during that tremendous and glorious hour—It was the end of the miracle. I got up, bowed my appreciation and left—That night I took a milk train for Philadelphia. The next morning, and it was early, the stars were shining in Washington Square, as I rang the door bell of 704. The house was empty, but in the break of the dawn an old, old lady, dressed for work, clambered down the steps—I called her—"Has Mrs. Smithers quit this house?"

"They've taken it for commercial purposes," said the old lady, "but 706 here is run by a very fine lady, and she has a front room and I know she'll be glad to rent it to a nice young man like you."

"A nice young man?" I queried. "How do you know I'm a nice young man?"

I got the room, and from this great room (Independence Hall strikes 2) I write to you at this witching hour. I am sober and keen and I have the suitcase and its contents—my mother's picture (a rare one), numerous other pictures; autographed books; old books that I loved; a crucifix that I had carried for twenty years; a pair of scapulars that are sacred only to me; a copy of Thomas a Kempis that saved me from damnation when, tempted in the dark of the night in St. Louis many years ago, I read the pages that I needed by the light of a street lamp. This is a long story, Chris, but don't forget the three apples that that horse ate and the greatest "chamber concert" that that coming young coloratura ever will render.

I've stopped here to look out at the sacred ground—all is quiet—Mr. Cyrus H. K. Curtis seems to be staying up late—all the lights in his house are lit—and the old broken tree still stands at the S. W. corner and commercialism not yet has cut down the bushes on our side of the street. Good luck and God bless you! and having delivered this I shall now turn over in my wide bed and see if this January Bookman is better than the last.

Faithfully,

STEVE O'GRADY.

P. S.—Chris:: If you want to use any part of this or all of it in any way go to it. It's all true and I'm in Washington Square, so a hell of a lot I care as to what the world thinks.

So we have used Steve's letter—as he gave us permission to do. He turns over in bed, and cares not what the world thinks.

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE ON

(In the August number of Columbia, the monthly magazine published in New York by the Knights of Columbus, appears the appended article, written by Calvin Coolidge shortly before he became President of the United States. This piece of inspirational writing shows to the American public a hitherto unseen side of the new President's intellectual and ethical life. It reveals the fact that President Coolidge possesses ethical ideals of a high order, together with a style of writing which permits him to express his deepest convictions upon matters of universal importance. The reader is urged to pay special attention to the concluding paragraph, in which the President sets forth succinctly what, in his opinion, we need and what we do not need.

The article is reproduced, in full, by special permission of John B. Kennedy, editor of Columbia.)

By CALVIN COOLIDGE,

President of the United States.

THE old ideal of educational institutions is that they are not for the private advantage of the individual, but for the public welfare of the citizen. This ideal is old, but America has made a new application of it. Formerly there was an educated class. From among their membership were drawn the magistrates and the clergymen. It was their province to furnish instruction and leadership for the people. They filled the pulpits, administered the offices, and conducted the schools. But in our country the ideal is no longer that of a highly educated few, but of a broadly cultured and enlightened people. Education is no longer the privilege of a class, but is recognized as a common duty necessary for all.

The old idea of training a few for leadership has been superseded by the modern idea of universal education to increase national harmony and unity of action. This ideal has not yet been fully realized, nor can it be for a considerable length of time. With all the resources with which America is endowed, they are not sufficient, as yet, to provide for all our inhabitants a liberal education, although they are sufficient and are providing a very general and increasingly broadening elementary training. This leaves somewhat of the old necessary duty of service and leadership imposed upon those who have been fortunate enough to secure the advantages of the higher institutions of learning.

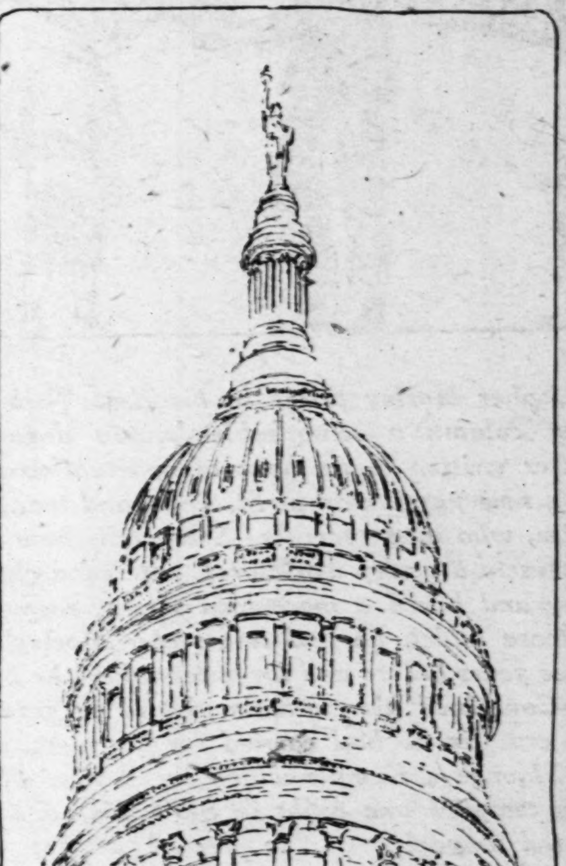
Broad as this class has now become, they are still the ones who have been selected to be foremost in advancing the cause and bearing the burdens of an enlightened civilization. They have come into the possession of an increased intellectual power. They have acquired training and skill that they might the better minister to the needs of humanity. It is this purpose lying behind all our endeavor for education that requires, first of all, that it should represent a moral training. It is not the skill of a Fagin that is sought, it is not the mere power to exist, but, rather, the wisdom of a Madam Curie, the enlightened disposition to serve. An education which does not accomplish this result is not a real education. It may provide a higher degree of cunning, a more intensified selfishness, and may add another prehensile claw with which to lay hold of the things of the world, but unless it results in the cultivation of the higher nature, unless it strengthens the spiritual power, unless it develops into real character, it will be without any final satisfaction.

No doubt the need always exists for self-confidence. That is strengthened by an exact and scholarly knowledge. But it is also desirable to be able correctly to estimate values. A comprehension of the little that we know, or can know, not only of all the universe or of our own earth, of science, of literature, of history, philosophy, or of their various subdivisions, compared with all that is to be known, is useful for the cultivation of an appropriate humility. This virtue is not thought to be overestimated by the youth of the present day. But it is only in the spirit of true humility that there is any approach to the better things of life.

After all, education is the process by which each individual re-creates his own universe and determines its dimensions. As civilization advances, the need becomes not less, but more. The present industrial methods, with all their dependence upon invention, with all their subordination to science, are yet narrowing, rather than broadening, in their effect upon the general mass of their employes. The requirement of efficiency has reduced much of modern industrial life to a mere mechanical operation. Those engaged in it are no longer able to draw an inspiration for their work.

Under more primitive conditions this was not the case. Those who were perhaps entirely untrained in the schools found ample opportunity for complete personal expression in their daily employment. Such was especially the condition in the industries of those days. The arts and crafts were what their names signified. A masterpiece was a graduating essay, by which the apprentice, after years of training, demonstrated his fitness to be admitted to the ranks of the master workmen. The skilled hand, the true eye, the designing mind, were all employed in producing the useful and the beautiful. All the faculties had daily opportunity for expression in the common employments.

These conditions were not without a marked effect on the character of those who came under their influence. At a very early date the trades people and artisans of London became stanch defenders of order and liberty. They were a people educated in no small part by means of their employment. They created a vigorous and enterprising citizenship, which made a very pronounced contribution to human welfare.



"They need to visualize, they need to see their duty."

FLASHING EXCERPTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S ARTICLE

AFTER all, education is the process by which each individual re-creates his own universe and determines its dimensions. The satisfactions of life arise from the art of self-expression.

The present great need of our country is an extension of the direct benefits of a liberal culture.

It is not in ignorance, but in enlightenment, that contentment will be found. It will be only through greater enlightenment that the work of the world can be done.

The time appears to have arrived when we may more properly look to the people, when natural laws may well be left to supplement artificial laws.

It is necessary always to give a great deal of thought to liberty. There is no substitute for it. Nothing else is quite so effective. Unless it be preserved, there is little else that is worth while.

When the people work out their own economic and social destiny, they generally reach sound conclusions.

We do not need more material development, we need more spiritual development.

We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power.

We do not need more knowledge, we need more character.

We do not need more government, we need more culture.

We do not need more law, we need more religion.

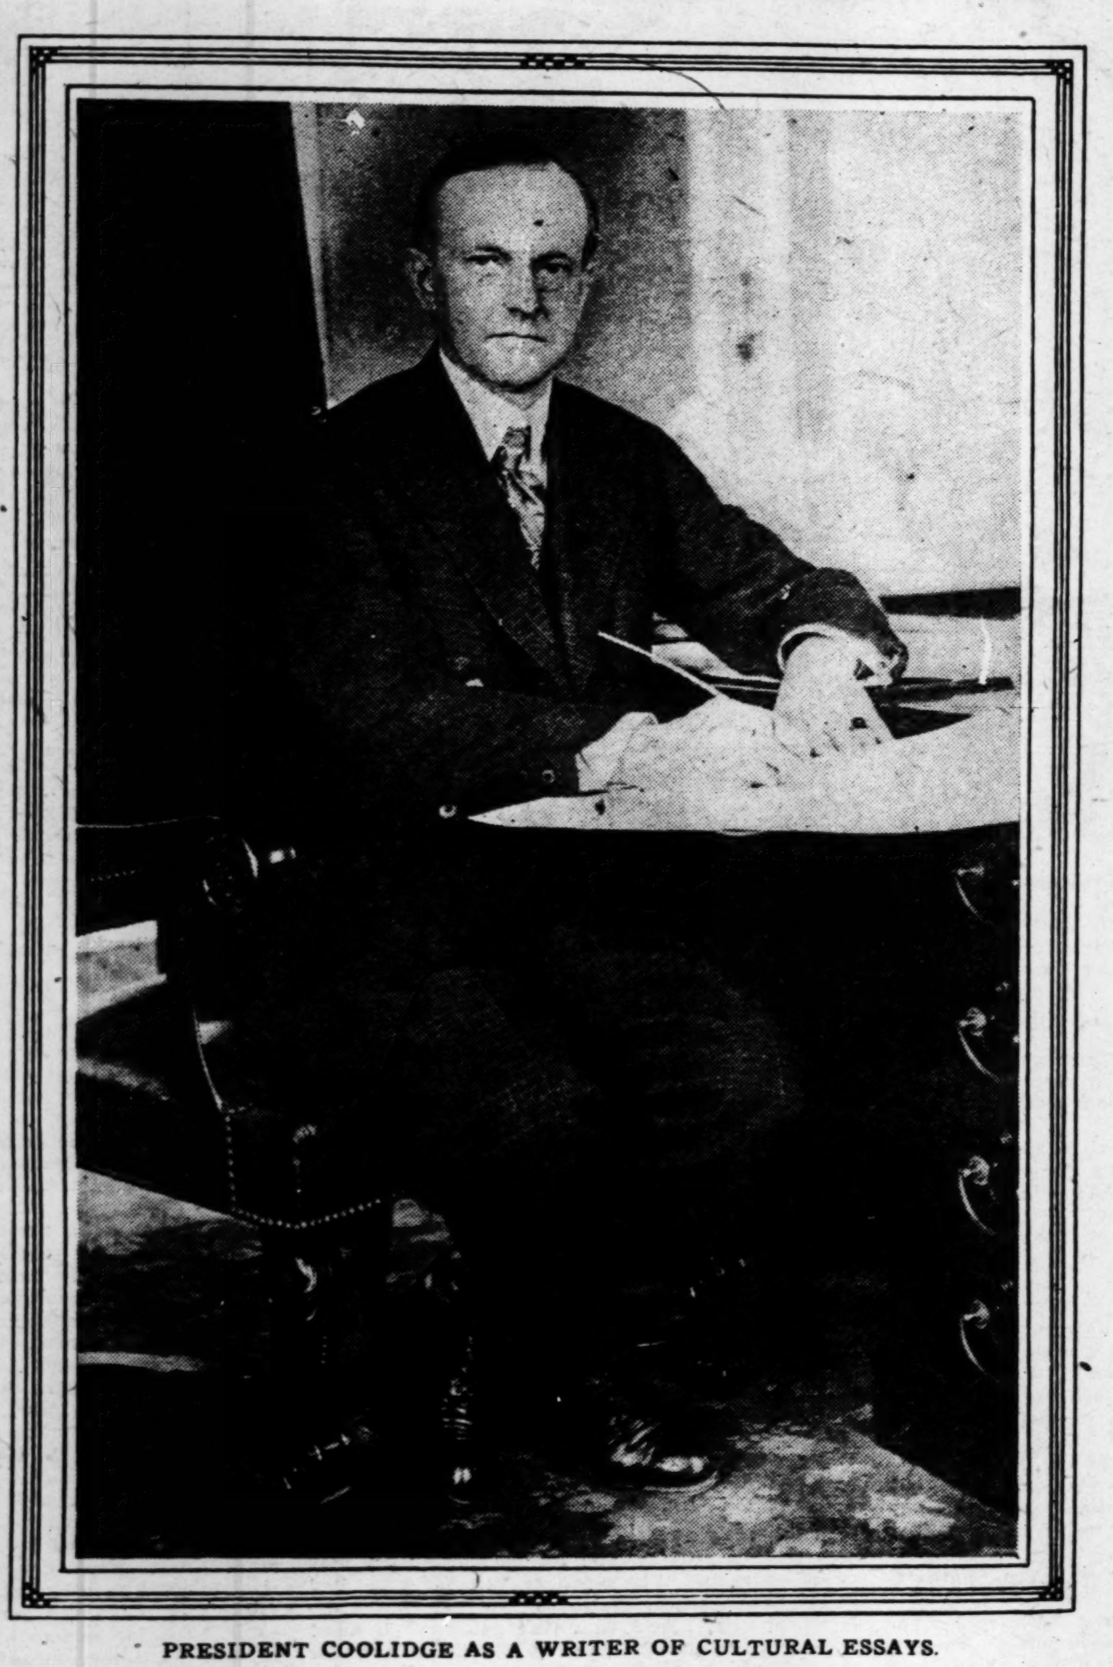
We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen.

The tendency in modern industry has been to change these conditions very materially in the direction of reducing the arts to the position of a trade. This in no degree detracts from the dignity of work, but it has produced a kind of work which is very different in its effect on the development of the individual. In addition to this, there has been introduced into our system of education the vocational and trade school. These have a rightful place and make a very valuable contribution to individual efficiency in industrial life. This whole scheme of things does not diminish, but enlarges, the requirement for a liberal education, the liberal culture which is taught in the schools, and the maintenance of the opportunities for broader culture, apart from the trades and vocations of livelihood, outside the schools. The machines of the shops have a tendency to make machines of the employes. This must be offset, it must be met by a counter tendency. There is but one, some kind of cultural activity.

Our country has very well learned the value of the results of a material prosperity derived from a narrow, but very intense, skill, and the technical use of the applied sciences. All of this has not only relocated, but has intensified, the burden of maintaining the ideals, which are the foundation of all else, upon the institutions of liberal culture and those who have been their direct beneficiaries. In a sense, it reopens the old field and restores the old necessity for active leadership, not only in the religious life, political life, and the school life, but in that which we term the everyday life of modern civilization.

The satisfactions of life arise from the art of self-expression. If these are not found in the occupational life, they must be sought and provided from some other source. Modern industry has its rich compensation. It not only tremendously increased production, which on the whole has greatly reduced prices, placing the necessaries, conveniences, and even luxuries of life, almost within universal reach, but has very much reduced the required hours of labor and, at the same time, greatly increased the remuneration. This has provided both the time and the means for the people at large to engage in outside beneficial and cultural studies and activities. The American people are nothing, if they are not energetic. They have accepted these conditions with their usual enthusiasm and used their resources in endless effort in an attempt to provide themselves with amusement, diversion and recreation, a considerable part of which takes the form of a lavish expenditure of money for many purposes, which, after a while, are no longer able to please. Carried to its logical conclusion, the end is greed and envy.

"LEARNING THE ART OF LIVING"



PRESIDENT COOLIDGE AS A WRITER OF CULTURAL ESSAYS.

One of the chief requirements of the liberally educated of the present day is that they should contribute to a better art of living. There is an enormous opportunity in this direction, by example and precept, for the educated womanhood of the land. They have the power to set a standard which would be far-reaching in its effects. In number they are already considerable. They are increasing rapidly and they have an opportunity to wield a vast influence for good.

Our country is beginning to give more public attention to the development of the fine arts. More thought is bestowed upon the architecture of public buildings, the laying out of streets, with a provision for public squares and parks with suitable statuary and appropriate adornment. More attention is being given to the beautifying of private residences and grounds, to formal gardening, and the more artistic use of flowers, shrubberies and trees. While these things are taking place out of doors, there is a corresponding movement inside. The art of home-making is being cultivated. Under trained supervision and guidance, there is coming to be harmony of decorations and furnishings as a result of more cultivated taste. Good pictures are more and more appreciated. Music, which has the power of making such a universal appeal and arousing such instant response, is being taught in the public schools, studied under private direction and developed as a community activity. There is a periodical literature of high quality and great profusion, which reaches into every corner of the land. The use of library books is increasingly large. The possibilities of the moving picture are just beginning to be realized. Even the automobile by contributing to a much wider range of vision, may gradually remove whatever was left of a shut-in provincialism. The increasing membership of seasoned fraternal and patriotic societies shows the desire to fulfill the requirements of a more intimate social relationship. The American people are starting to supplement a mechanical age with artistic expression.

All of this is an indication of the direction in which future, progress and development lie. In these outside activities and interests, those who are engaged in the industries have every opportunity for artistic expression. It is along these avenues that they can employ their latent talents and find a more satisfying existence. It is in the leadership of this social side of life that there is an especial opportunity and requirement for those of liberal education and culture.

It will readily be observed that all of these activities, all of the service and leadership which they require, partake of the nature of a charity. That is always a necessary requirement. The higher and better things of life, without which existence would be altogether vain and empty, can neither be bought nor sold. Unless they are done because they ought to be done, without any direct remuneration, they will not be done at all. In its nobler aspect, like eternal life, civilization is a gift. We cannot say we have more merit or are more worthy than those born to the darkness of ignorance and barbarism. We did not acquire our position through our own individual efforts. We were born into it. It is the gift conferred by the sacrifices of past generations. It can only be maintained by the sacrifices of this generation.

Yet it is not possible to receive its higher benefits passively. It is only by active co-operation, it is only by intense application, that the individual comes into the enjoyment and possession of the heritage of civilization. It is in this sense that there must be a re-creation. The wonders of civilization do not exist for us unless we make them our own. All the science and art, all the mathematics and literature, all the discoveries of nature and the truths of philosophy are not for us, unless we appropriate them. We learn of each other through the contact of mind with mind. There has never been any system of education that did not require teachers, there has never been any system of religion that did not require clergymen, there has never been any system of government that did not require magistrates and leaders.

It is on this side of life that the liberally educated should apply themselves. They have been given the power to hold up the torch that lights the way. It has always been through their efforts that civilization was created. It will always be through their efforts that it will be maintained.

This is in nowise a limitation of the American ideal; rather, it represents the chief application of it. This ideal does not diminish the recognition of the usefulness and necessity for learning and culture, but, from the earliest days, has been most careful to provide for it, to cherish it, and to admonish all those in authority to maintain it. This has been written into the fundamental laws of the land. It has been adopted in the provisions of our constitutions by the people and enacted into statutes by our legislatures. The American ideal requires that learning and culture should be extended to all the people. In broadening the old theory of a privilege to be held by a few, into the new theory of a right that it is necessary to supply to all, it does not pull down education and culture, but undertakes to raise the people up to their standards.

It is in this direction that America exhibits its greatest incompleteness, for it is readily recognized that the direct benefits of a liberal education are very far from reaching all the people. The indirect benefits, of course, are universal, and more than sufficient to justify public support. They speak from every schoolhouse and every pulpit, and from every learned profession in the land. They set up and maintain the ideals which provide the standards of all conduct. They are the source of liberty, enlightenment and civilization. But the present great need of our country is an extension of the direct benefits of a liberal culture.

It has sometimes been said that education unfits people for the ordinary tasks of life. This does not appear to me to be the case; rather, it is ignorance that unfits them for carrying on their ordinary vocations. It is not dissatisfaction with our work, but dissatisfaction with ourselves that is the cause of the unrest and discontent which is always manifesting itself in one form or another. We think we want to change our employment, when we really want to change ourselves. It is a lack of ability to appreciate the real dignity of any useful occupation, to realize that it is an integral part of the greater whole that is necessary for promoting the welfare of civilization that makes some think of their daily task as poor and mean and sordid. Unless the coal be mined, the Northern schoolhouse will close. Unless the sewers be dug the public health will suffer. Yet the man in the mine or sewer does not recognize himself as one who is ministering to the cause of education and of health, as in some degree a teacher and a physician; he thinks he is only a shoveler of coal and a digger of ditches. They need to visualize, they need to see their duty. It is not ignorance, but a greater enlightenment, that reveals to us the true nobility of all toil which contributes to the conduct of the necessary activities of the world. It is not in ignorance, but in enlightenment, that contentment will be found. It will only be through greater enlightenment that the work of the world can be done.

This era has come to be recognized as the scientific age. The world has come into the possession of more discoveries and inventions than ever before existed. They have combined to place in the hands of mankind a power they never had before. It is scarcely too much to say that the elements have at last been conquered. It was only the other day that a man flew from New York to San Francisco in about 24 hours. A reproduction of the human voice has been sent by radio from Schenectady to England. There are in the world today more people with a scientific training, ranging all the way from a workman pursuing his trade at the bench, up to the genius of an Edison, than at any other period. On this side of life the world is wildly alive and thoroughly interested. It is making larger and larger demands of the schools, of the press, and of every other avenue that provides greater technical skill and scientific knowledge.

Yet when success in this direction is not secured, or, being secured, it fails somehow to satisfy, there is a tendency to begin to criticise our institutions and

How Often Have You Been Gimmicked

But the impossible happened, for the ball swung free of the pins and came back, completing its round trip without touching either.

An expert describes how the innocent bystander is relieved of his pocket change, piece by piece, without knowing he has been cheated—Science and invention combine to give the enterprising concessionaire at the amusement parks and street fairs certain mechanical contrivances that look honest but are distinctly otherwise — Even the "try-your-strength" machine sometimes is loaded for bears who are really babes in the wood—Read this and remember what you learn, next time you are tempted to try your skill at a grifting game ::

SPEAKING of fools and their money being soon parted, let us all have a look-in at the merry "grifter" and his no less merry (before taking) gulls. We now are in the midseason of the grifter's glory. The grifter, if you are asking, is the person who operates the take-a-chance or try-your-skill concessions at the street fairs or carnivals, the picnic or bathing resorts, the Coney Islands, big and little, throughout the country.

That there is something scientific about the business of grifting is indicated by the appearance in the Scientific American for August of an article dealing with "Invention and the 'Grifter,'" wherein Edward H. Smith describes how the foolish dimes and heedless dollars are gathered in at the summer amusement parks. His findings are applicable to St. Louis or anywhere else. He describes at the outset a trick known as a gimmick, or gouge, that being a generic term for many grifting games.

A pair of gulls that got gimmicked at Coney Island a Sunday or so ago looked happy until it was all over and the young man discovered that he had been playing a game and letting his best girl play it, that didn't seem to give the players a fair run for their money. But the youth, as he walked away fuming, probably had not the slightest suspicion that the innocent-looking outfit which he had tried to beat was a scientific invention designed specifically to catch and curry such poor, unthinking jackasses as himself.

The young fellow was dressed flashily; he was even ahead of the fashions in some points. The girl he escorted was a sweet-looking little thing, with bobbed hair and her own complexion. Her skirts were of regulation length, 1923 notion. She had a blue-eyed baby stare, and she told her "company" that she just loved dolls. They stepped up to a concession that looked different from anything they had seen. Suspended from the roof of a little kiosk was a bowling ball that swung on a chain. Back on a table which it would pass in its swing were two big tenpins, set close together. The grifter was singing out:

"Step right up, ladies and gents, and try yer luck! It's as easy as pie. You swing the ball, it knocks down the two tenpins, and your lady gets her selection of a nice new doll or a big box of delicious candy. Who's next?"

The flashy youth handed in his dime and clutched the big ball. He pulled it back and let go. There wasn't one chance in a million that it would miss the tenpins. They were right in the ellipse the ball must cut. Impossible to fail! Easy as pie, as the grifter had remarked.

But the impossible happened, for the ball swung free of the pins and came back, completing its round trip without touching either.

"Pretty close, friend!" cried the grifter. "Try it again, and you'll win. But first watch me do it. Just swing the ball right past this pin here on the right—bingo! Now, see 'em both go down? Merely a matter of skill."

The second dime was paid in. The young fellow felt absolutely certain of success this time. Little sweetheart could help herself to the darlingest doll in the collection. The grifter had set up the pins with exceeding care, so solicitous was he that they should be exactly in line for the customer's next swing—perhaps! The swing was another miss. Red tinged the cheeks of the youth. He was getting determined now. He'd beat that game or go bust! For the third time he gave up his money and saw the ball miss the pins. He felt for another dime.

"Oh, le' me, le' me!" cried the fair maiden. "I'm just certain sure I can do it."

"Why, sure you can," agreed the grifter. "Just this way, see, young lady?"

She saw, and she did it just that way, but she missed. The ellipse the ball described under her pilotage was almost a circle.

"Try again, and I'm sure you can do it if you follow my advice. Don't swing it so wide. Just cut past the shoulder of the pin here. Le' me he'p you."

The dime-collector picked up the right pin, gave it a half turn in his hand, set it down quite carefully. Guiding the girl's shot, he let her send the ball past the pin almost in a graze. It swung back and brought down both pins. The merry maid selected the best-looking doll in the bunch, worth perhaps 30 cents.

"Now win another doll—why not?" the grifter invited.

The girl glanced at her escort, who plunged pocketward for another dime. She tried, missing. Half a dozen times she tried, always missing. Then the young man, getting madder every moment, spent 30 cents more in three vain efforts to bring down the pins himself. He had lost about $2 and his temper when he quit.

"That right pin," Mr. Smith explains, "had been carefully slanted off on the bottom, so that when the grifter set it up for his trade it leaned away from its fellow perhaps half an inch at the top. That was sufficient to send the ball into an ellipse wide enough to miss invariably. But when he wanted someone to win, in order to encourage further play, he merely turned the pin half around so that it now leaned a full inch nearer its mate. Now the ball, sent just past the in-leaning pin, came almost directly back and winning was unavoidable."

So, as you see, the game was a fake, fixed for the grifter, the pins being stacked, so to speak, against the customer. That particular "grift" is known as plum bobbing.

We learn that the grifting profession has a language of its own. Having no space here for a glossary, we shall limit present use of this new vocabulary to a few terms. It appears that there is a considerable number of manufacturers engaged in the business of making games and devices employed in pursuit of gain in the outdoor amusement world. If a customer orders a device he describes as "square," the manufacturer supplies one that will give the customer a square deal. If a "strong" device is desired, the grifter gets one that is guaranteed to cheat. A booth where the customer gets fair play is called a "square joint." One of the other kind is a "strong joint." The plumb-bobbing booth is a strong joint, one of the strongest.

It is revealed that the operator of a strong booth nowadays can work successfully without a partner. In other times virtually every such outfit required two men. One stood by as owner or operator, the other lost his identity in the crowd. The man who was supposed to belong to the innocent bystanders' group was in on the game and shared the ill-got gains. His job was to win now and then, just to freshen the fading courage of those who were losing, or to induce newcomers to pay their money and take their medicine. Now, as in the case of the plum bobbers, one man can serve as the whole crew and obviate divided profits, the manufacturer having fixed the outfit for one-man operation. When the game is a two-man grift, the extra hand is known as the shillaber.

Mr. Smith gets down to the base of the gimmicking business when he mentions "the old and ever-popular hoopla." Do you happen to know what the hoopla is? You do, in part, if ever you have visited a summer amusement park or garden or a carnival show.

"This," explains our expert, "is the generic term for all forms of games where the aim is to throw a ring or hoop over an object to be won or a base on which this object rests to which it may be attached. The old cane rack is a good example."

Now, at once, the hoopla appeals to everybody and his uncles, his cousins and his aunts; for anybody who knows not the old cane rack must have been born blind. Continues our benevolent guide:

"The oldest and crudest gimmick used on the cane or umbrella rack was to have the rings a trifle too small to go over the heads of any but the tawdriest and cheapest articles. However, the grifter always had in hand a few rings which were larger, but not perceptibly so, seen with the naked eye at a little distance. When the crowd became restive at repeated losses or poor winnings, the shillaber, now commonly called shill, stepped up and was, of course, given some of the larger rings. He immediately won the finest cane or umbrella in the rack, laughed raucously at the mock-discomfited grifter and strolled away with his prize. The crowd, of course, surged forward to take advantage of 'a turn in the luck.' But the gentleman behind the counter wasn't passing out any larger rings just then."

It is diverting to follow the hoopla grift in its various ramifications. We find that some hoopla games belong to the order known as "flash and slum joints." "Flash" means the big, showy prizes offered. "Slum" signifies the worthless small wares.

"Thus in the Japanese roll ball game to be seen along every boardwalk in the land, the big showy pieces of Satsuma, the expensive sets and large vases are the flash. The little match trays and ash receivers are the slum. In this game as in all others, no one wins the flash without paying from three to 50 times its value. However, in these roll-ball games the big pieces can be won if one has patience and money enough to stick to it.

"In the 'flash and slum' hoopla booths, on the other hand, the big prizes are never won by any but the shillabers. Watches are much used in these places: and the cleverest grifters use fine American movements in solid gold or even platinum cases, watches worth up to $200. But on the rack with one or two of these fine timepieces are many cheap watches, brummagem stickpins and the like. This game is gimmicked in one of two ways. Either the base under the desirable watch is a little too large for any of the rings to encircle or there are only a few rings large enough to do the trick. In the former case nothing but the slum is won; in the latter only a shillaber is allowed rings large enough to do the trick. 'You pays yer money and you takes yer medicine.' "

When the late Mr. A. Pope wrote that "a little learning is a dangerous thing," he meant for the accent to be on the "little." In this study of the genial, gentle, gimmicking grifter one is almost delighted at discovering that our old friend the village cut-up, the community smart Aleck, the know-it-all fellow, frequently gets generously gimmicked because of the danger incident to the littleness of his learning. Again we quote:

"There is always about all carnivals, parks and street fairs the kind of man known to the inner circles as a half-wise boob, one who can be duped most easily because he has that little knowledge which is so dangerous. For the humiliation of this kind of man, the grifter has various mechanisms containing a double gimmick. The 'wisenheimer' is acquainted with the first but not with the second."

Mr. Smith tells us that he was standing in an amusement park at Chicago when a youth of the know-it-all type strolled up to a booth where a well-known grifter was operating a little trick pool game. The fellow tried to interest the young man in that sport, but met with this swaggery retort:

"Wotcha try'n ta do? Kid me? I'm wise, Bo!"

"All right, son," said the grifter, who immediately pulled out a knife of curious design. He opened the blade and began carving a bit of wood. The smart Aleck's eyes followed the knife. He made some smart comment.

"Betcha a quarter you can't close it," snapped the grifter in an offended tone.

"The devil I can't!" snapped back the smarty, his breast swelling with injured dignity.

The bet was made, the knife handed over. The victim tried his best to close the blade. It would not budge. Loudly laughed the grifter as he pocketed the poor boob's quarter. Then, in a fatherly way, he showed his new young friend the secret of that particular gimmick—a little catch, obvious enough, that kept the blade from closing. This delighted the sucker, who tried the catch several times. When he felt cocksure he understood it, he offered to buy the knife.

"The grifter, of course, refused to sell. At this moment a stranger came wandering along and stopped to gape at the pool game like any countryman. The sucker, who still had the knife in his hand, as per arrangement, immediately attracted the intruder's attention and offered to bet he couldn't close it. Again a 25-cent wager was posted and the stranger lost. The gimmick was shown him, and he, too, studied the thing carefully. Suddenly he said to the wise young man, using a rustic speech:

" 'Aw, this is easy. I bet I kin close it an' you cain't open it.'

"The wise young man, of course, received such a proposition with derision.

" 'How much'll you bet?' he demanded.

" 'Fifty dollars.'

"The grifter, seeing from the wisenheimer's attitude that he didn't have that much, nudged him and whispered inquiringly how much he was short.

" 'I only got $40,' said the dupe.

" 'Bet him,' urged the grifter, under his voice; 'I'll take the other $10.'

"So the bet was made, the newcomer closed the knife, the grifter held the stake and the clever young dupe tried to open the blade. He tried till he was blue in the face and couldn't stir it. Then the grifter regretfully paid the bet to the stranger, who went his way rejoicing.

The grifter has simply touched a little control which warps the track-wire slightly, and though you were Hercules and Samson no blow of yours could ever ring the bell. This obtains in cases where the hammer machine is used for prize winning.

OUT in Arizona, what may prove to be the greatest treasure hunt in all history is under way. The name of Arizona is closely associated with subterranean riches. The mining of both gold and silver was begun there by the Spaniards, whose first invaders marched up from Old Mexico in 1539, seeking yet more of the precious metals which they had wrung from the hapless Aztecs. And Arizona has produced vast quantities of copper.

However, the present search is not for copper, nor for gold or silver, although they may be found incidentally. Mining experts hope to find something which will be worth more even than high-grade ore—something of fabulous value. Scientists hope that new facts will be discovered about a subject which now is one of the mysteries.

Nothing less than diamonds glitter enticingly in the dreams of the men who are furnishing the money for this Arizona enterprise—and not only diamonds, but other gems, imagined not so definitely but marvelous and alluring, just the same.

Some geologists are of opinion that, besides the diamonds, other jewels will be discovered—black gems and yellow and transparent ones, of prodigious size, "of purest ray serene" and incalculably valuable. The possibility has been hinted at that gems of a ravishing splendor, the offspring of events unique, and of a kind never seen before by man, may reward a successful search.

In a word, these treasure hunters are boring down through the arid soil and the stubborn rocks of Coconino County, Arizona, in search of the hugest of all known meteorites.

The monstrous mass fell from the sky untold ages ago, dealing the earth's surface a blow of such terrific and inconceivable violence as to make there a hole, or crater, more than 1000 feet deep and 4000 feet across, surrounded by a "splash" of rocks and earth 160 feet higher than the surrounding plain!

Today, after the winds and rains of countless centuries have been at work filling up the crater, it still shows an average depth of 570 feet. As a result of studies on the spot, it is believed that originally the crater's lowest point was 1150 feet below the surface of the ground.

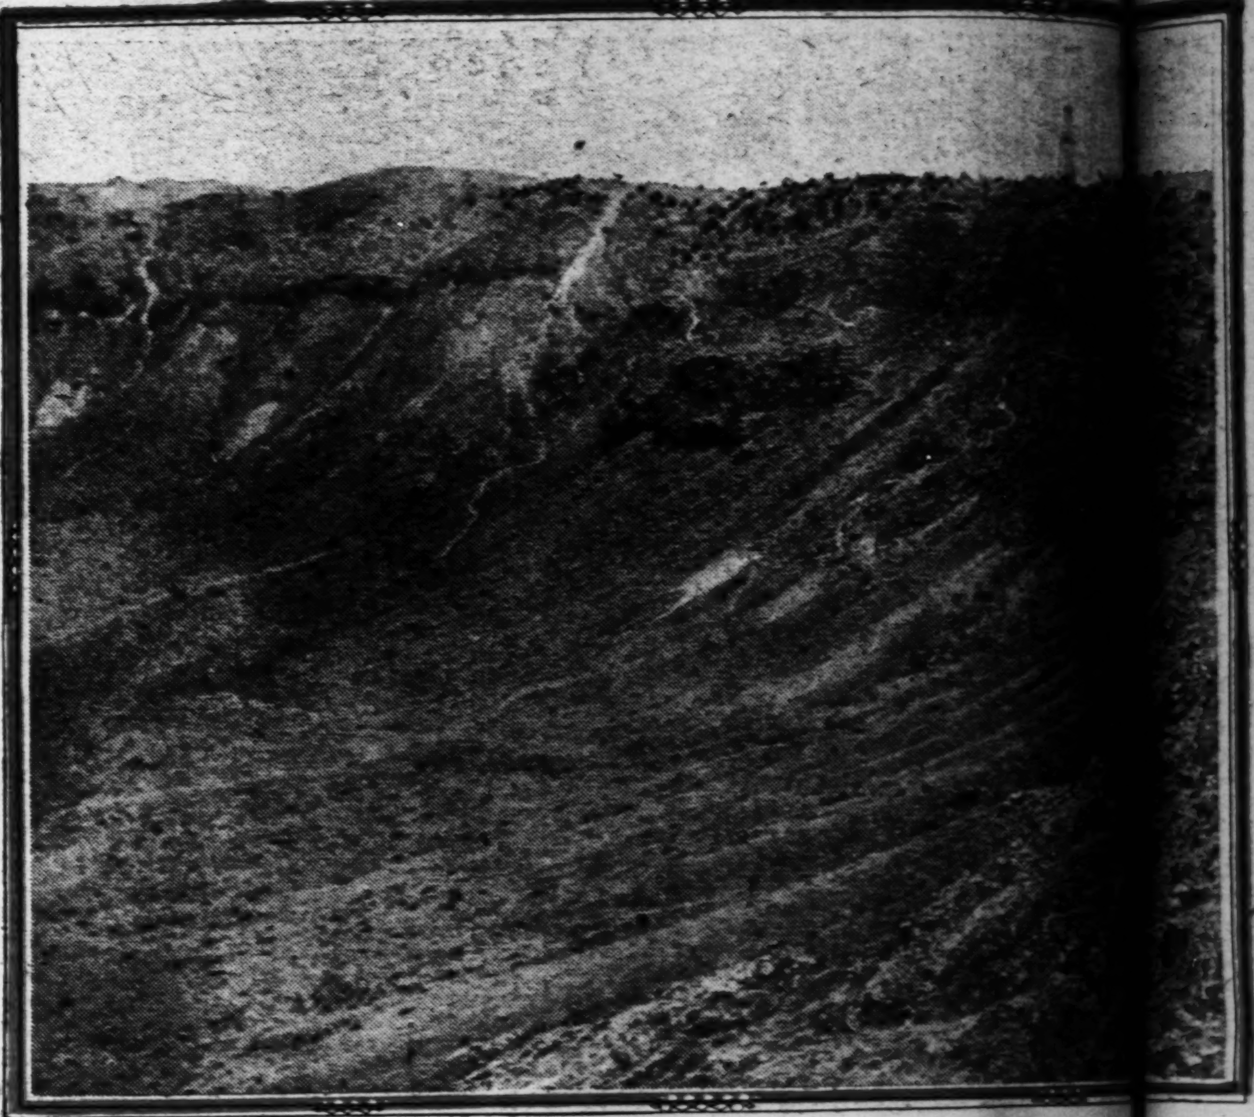
The meteorite, of course, is buried deep. One look at the accompanying photograph of Meteor Crater, Canyon Diablo, makes that fact evident. The picture also attests the buried mass's colossal size among meteorites, and the head-long, savage force with which it crashed down, so long ago.

Persons interested in the treasure hunt have estimated that the meteorite must be at least 300 feet in diameter, and that it weighs 1,000,000 tons. Some of the experts, we are told, would quadruple these figures, assigning a diameter of 1200 feet and a weight of 4,000,000 tons. But the smaller estimates are amazing enough.

Small wonder that this awful projectile from the outer spaces tore a hole four-fifths of a mile long and one-fifth of a mile deep before it came to rest at the spot for which search now is being made.

It was not the whole meteor, probably, which wrought the havoc, gouging out the crater and throwing up the great "splash" around it. For miles around Meteor Crater there are meteorite fragments, thought to have been thrown off by the main body of the gigantic mass as it fell. When ordinary meteorites strike the denser portion of earth's atmosphere they generally explode and fall in a shower of fragments. This was an extraordinary meteor, but doubtless underwent a series of explosions and only its largest fragment scooped out the great crater. Specimens from the vicinity of Meteor Crater figure in most of the world's big museums.

From time immemorial the crater had been known to the Navajo Indians, who regarded the place as sacred. From father to son they had handed down a dramatic legend about its origin. White men knew the legend, but they did not find the place until 1891, when an explorer familiar with the traces left by meteorites recognized the immense circular cavity as a meteoric crater—the greatest one known in the world.



A portion of Meteorite Crater, from a recent photograph. Notice the "splash," which averages 160 feet in height, along the rim. At right may be seen the drill derrick. The white patch, about half way down, marks the dump of the tunnel cut to retrieve a bent drill.

According to the Navajo legend, which is interesting for several reasons, the crater was attributed to three of their gods. These deities, seeking endless repose, rode to earth from the stars on clouds of roaring blue flame, which spread farther than the eye could see, alighted amid thunder that shook the mountains, threw the rocks to the winds as dust and buried themselves in the plain.

Strangely enough, the ancient and vivid legend accords well with the phenomena which have been recorded of large meteorites. Multicolored streamers of fire, loud explosions, even thunder and lightning, have been described frequently in connection with the fall of "fire-balls" and meteorites.

Can it be possible that ancestors of the Navajos, in the dim past, actually witnessed the fall of this huge meteorite? That, having viewed the awe-inspiring spectacle with the terror which it would have inspired in anyone's heart and being ignorant of its real nature, they interpreted the marvel as a coming of their gods and passed the story of it along to posterity?

If men did see the fall of the greatest of all known meteorites, we may be sure that they fled in panic and did not return to the neighborhood where the terrible scene had occurred until many hours, or perhaps days, had elapsed. And when they saw that the very face of the earth had been changed, over nearly a square mile, how they must have marveled, even as men marvel at the dimensions of the crater today.

Whether the meteor fell in the day time or at night can only be conjectured. At night, or during the hours of twilight or early dawn, the spectacle must have been magnificent. Meteorites do not fall vertically, as if dropped from a point straight above the place which they strike. Instead, they come at an angle, somewhat as though fired from a tremendous long-range gun.

Thus the spectacle is prolonged and rendered much more impressive. For example, the fireball which appeared at night over Yorkshire, England, in 1888, was observed as it fell from the height of 78 miles to that of 47 miles. Its luminous train was 18 miles long. Those who described it afterwards said the fireball flashed, "like vivid lightning," and left behind it a streak which lasted for three minutes.

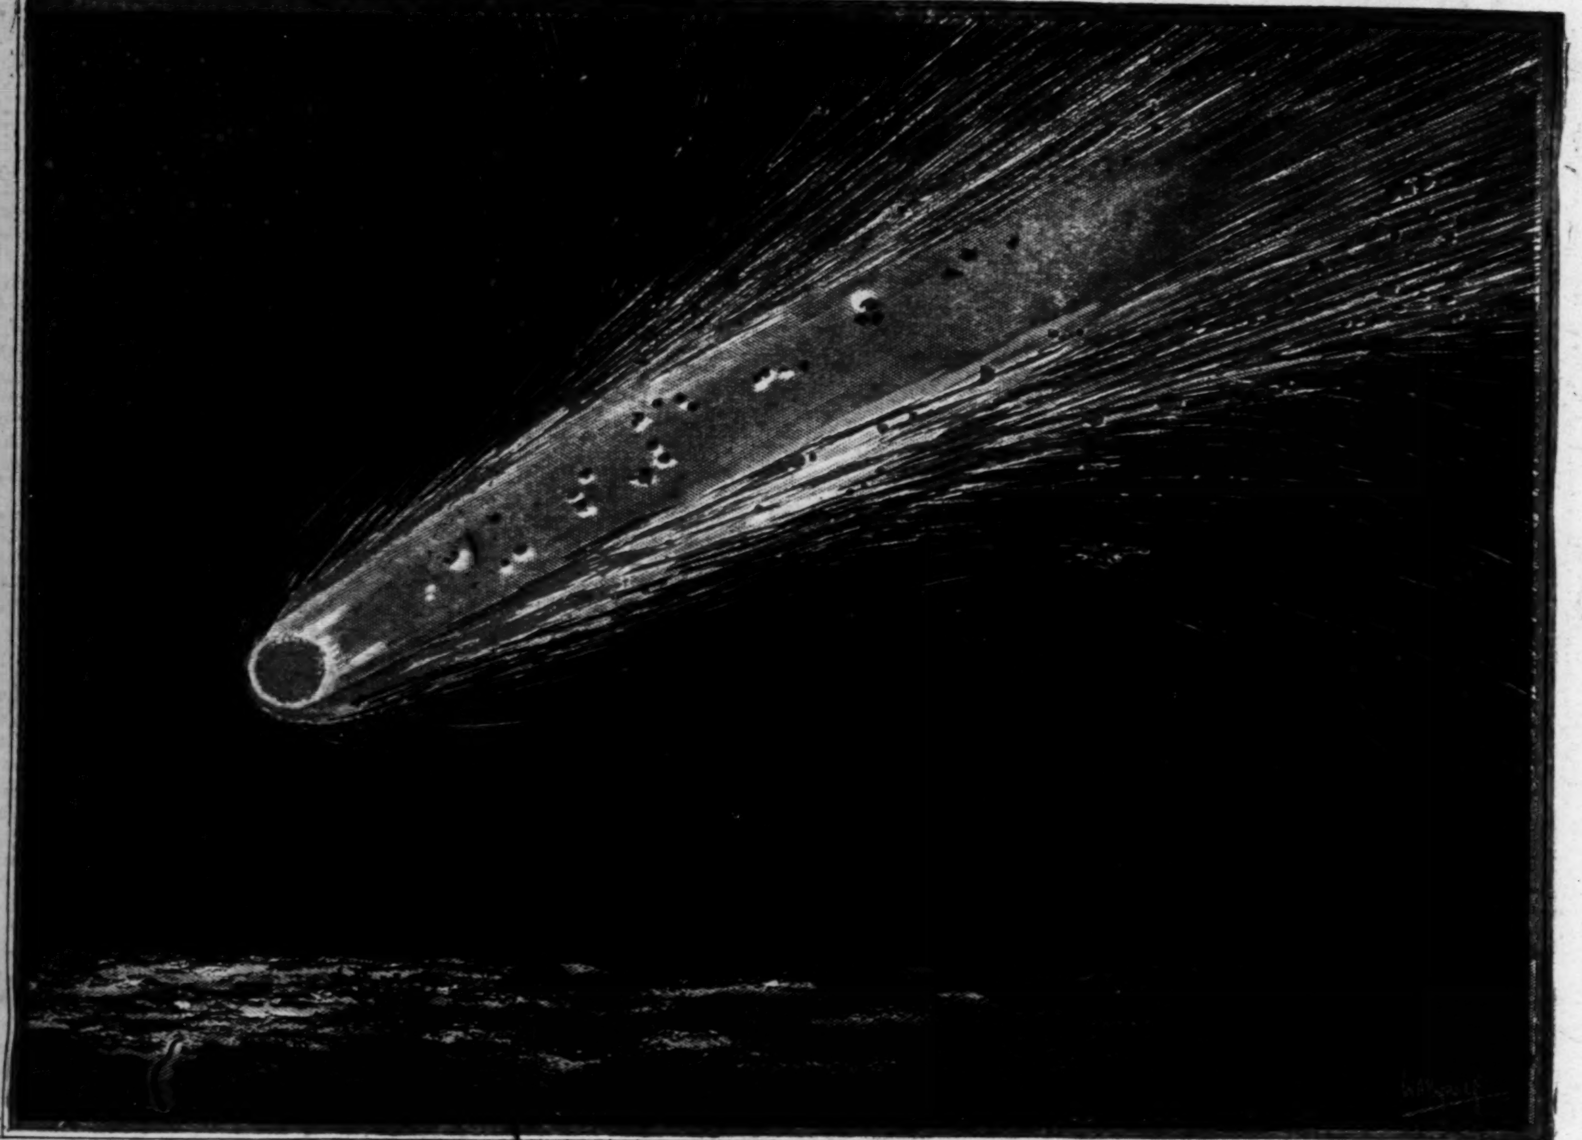
HUNTS MILLION-TON METEORITE, WHICH BURIED TSELF UNTOLD AGES AGO, CONTAINS WHAT?



The friction of the meteorite's passage through the air generated an intense degree of heat. First the flying mass began to glow, then the outermost and hottest portions were a mass of flame, leaving trails of sparks and fire behind them. Presently terrific explosions, louder than the sound of the loudest thunder, followed one after the other. Great masses thus dislodged from the main body of the meteorite continued earthwards, illumining the pathway with their own radiance, then themselves burst with re-echoing roars into smaller masses which sped onwards, tracing gorgeous, fiery patterns of different hues in the air. . . . The climax of the dreadful drama was reached when the main body of the meteorite hurled itself upon the earth in a sweeping, sideways blow.

the mountains," as the Navajo legend said, the nearby hills leap with terror.

At the same time, the smaller pieces were pattering down, over an area of miles, but they would have seemed insignificant to anyone who witnessed the fall of the parent mass. Then, as the pieces lay in their new resting places, the larger ones giving off heat for hours before they cooled sufficiently to be touched, the debris in the bottom of the crater slowly settled. Loose rock and dirt ceased to trickle down the sides of the crater, and the pandemonium was succeeded by silence.

Rocks to the extent of many hundreds of thousands of tons had been ground to dust by the impact of the meteorite. The powder can be seen now, in the crater and nearby. The Indians called it "sacred dust."

The "long-range" direction of the meteorite's path explains why the searchers are not digging in the bottom of the crater, but are sending down a drill at one side, where experts believe it now lies, at a greater depth than the original crater bottom.

The first drill, when it had reached the 350-foot level, was "turned" by encountering some very hard substance, and rather than sink another drill-hole the treasure hunters drove a tunnel through at the same level from the crater side to the drill hole, which is said to be a new feat in such operations.

From fragments found in the vicinity, and which came from the big meteorite, it is estimated that the mass contains 90 to 91 per cent of pure iron of fine quality, 8 per cent of nickel and 1 ounce of platinum to each five tons, besides a small percentage of iridium and microscopic diamonds.

The presence of diamond in fragments of the Canyon Diablo meteorite is noteworthy, since it is a constituent but rarely found in such arrivals from the outer void. The unprecedented size of the meteorite may have had something to do with this and where there are small diamonds there may be large ones, the promoters argue.

Also upon the unusual size of the meteorite, and an assumption of its unusual origin or history, the backers are basing their hopes of finding other gems of great value, if they locate the meteorite. There is little evidence to support the hope, in analyses of ordinary meteorites, which have fallen elsewhere in the world.

But this meteorite is in a class by itself, and while science cannot be said to support the probability of finding a fabulous treasure, neither does it deny the possibility. Some mineralogists, at any rate, believe the gems are there, embedded in the buried meteorite. And 900,000 tons of pure iron of fine quality would be a nice enough morsel for most syndicates, even undecorated with diamonds and strange new gems.

Aluminum, magnesium, nickel, phosphorus and silicon are said to be fairly plentiful in their occurrence in ordinary meteorites. Less frequently, and in smaller quantities, there occur antimony, arsenic, chlorine, chromium, cobalt, copper, manganese, strontium, tin, titanium and vanadium. Traces also have been found of gold, gallium, helium, iridium, lead, platinum, rubidium and silver. In addition, 14 other constituents have been found in meteorites, but never among the minerals of the earth's crust.

Whether or not the financial backers of the enterprise are rewarded, in case they find the giant meteorite, men in several different fields of science hope that it may bring nearer the solution of an old problem—namely, the origin of meteorites. It is only certain that they have nothing to do with comets, whereas shooting-stars, or meteors, are regarded as cometary debris. Fire-balls often accompany a shower of shooting stars, and have a relatively slow motion.

There have been various theories about meteorites. Among the sources suggested have been the moon, the planets, the planetoids, the sun, interstellar space and the earth itself. The latter idea assumes that earth, perhaps when it was younger and more vigorous, ejected them by volcanic action which imparted a velocity sufficient to carry them beyond the earth's attraction. Thereupon they began to circle the sun in regular orbits and sometimes encounter the earth at the point where their orbits and that of earth intersect.

Says Mgr. Martin S. Brennan, priest-astronomer of St. Louis:

"Mineralogists seem to regard their origin as volcanic; but where the volcanoes are located is the kernel of the difficulty."

Perhaps that grim crater in Canyon Diablo will give the answer to a question which interests astronomers, mineralogists and geologists especially, while the general public also would like to know

The Voice on the Telephone

by

Arthur Somers Roche

"JACKASSES are queer creatures," announced Jerry Tryon. Jimmy Pelham, the consulting partner of the head of the Tryon Detective Agency, looked quizzically across the table.

"You are acquainted with the habits of the animal you mention, Jerry?" Pelham asked mischievously.

"Enough," said Jerry loudly, "to know that you can't tell 'em by their ears. You can't always tell 'em by their bray. Sometimes they put on pants and boiled shirts, and get into restaurants like this, and try to listen to conversation not meant for them."

His voice rose with each syllable. A gentleman at an adjoining table flushed. For a moment he tried to meet the fiery glance of the ex-lieutenant of police. Then he looked quickly away.

Pelham grinned. The eavesdropper, rebuked by Jerry's innuendo, signaled his waiter and asked for his check.

"After all, Jerry," Pelham said chidingly when the recipient of Jerry's rebuke had departed, "you're a famous man."

"Famous! There ain't a chance in the world of you and me ever getting famous with the Gray Ghost at large," growled Jerry. "Anyhow, I hate nosy folks."

Pelham chuckled. "Imagine a detective making that remark."

"Well, we're nosy in the line of business," said Jerry defensively.

"And in another minute we'll be deep in the discussion of business," said Pelham. "And digestion is ruined by too much thought."

But not until they had finished their dinner and were parting, on a near-by corner, did Jerry again refer to anything bearing even remotely upon business. Then his bushy brows wrinkled. "Suppose that nosy guy was somebody sent by the Gray Ghost?" he suggested.

Pelham shook his head. "The Gray Ghost knows that you and I don't discuss business in public, Jerry."

Jerry shrugged his thick shoulders. "Guess you're right, Mr. Pelham. That fellow kinda got my goat, I guess."

Pelham slapped his coadjutor on the back. "Go home and sleep off that grouch, Jerry," he laughingly advised.

He was still smiling as he let himself into his apartment. Good old Jerry!

Presently, in dressing gown and slippers, and seated in a deep arm chair, he stared at the fire which Dickenson, his man of all work, had lighted against his return.

As he thought of that archcriminal who defied society, and preyed upon it, his lips hardened and his eyes matched the glow of the flames in the fireplace.

But worry would get him nowhere. He dropped his cigarette upon an ash receiver, and, leaning back farther in his comfortable chair, closed his eyes.

Dickenson awakened him. "Hate to wake you, boss," said the former Maine guide, "but Mr. Tryon's on the telephone—long-distance—and says he must talk to you."

Pelham crossed the room and was speaking into the phone. Dickenson heard his tones of mild surprise change to excitement. There was a rapid-fire exchange of questions and answers, and then Pelham hung up. He turned to Dickenson.

"You heard what I've been saying?"

"Mr. Tryon's out in the country near Portchester, on the Gray Ghost's trail, and wants you," replied Dickenson.

"Get the roadster and bring it around while I'm dressing," ordered Pelham.

"I'm going with you," stated Dickenson. There was a flat finality in his tone.

Pelham chuckled. "You bet your life you are," he agreed. "Hustle!"

When Dickenson returned, at the wheel of a speedy-looking two-passenger car, Pelham was waiting impatiently on the sidewalk outside his apartment house.

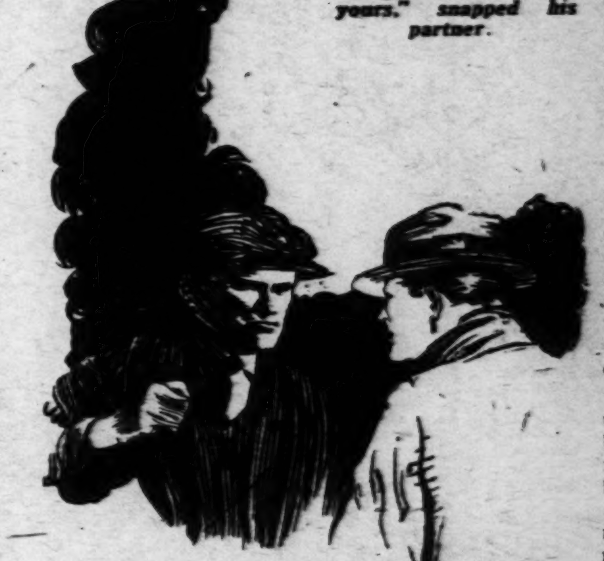
Pelham climbed into the seat beside Dickenson. "Shoot over to Riverside Drive," he said. "Tryon is waiting for us somewhere between White Plains and Portchester; we'll make it quicker that way."

Dickenson slipped in the clutch, and the machine started. There was little conversation during the next forty-five minutes. Once Dickenson asked, "Why did Mr. Tryon start off on a stunt like this without telling you that he was going?" he demanded.

"Said he was afraid that he was on a blind lead, and didn't want to bother me needlessly," explained Pelham.

Dickenson frowned. "Don't sound sensible to me," he argued. "And it don't seem any too sane him telling you not to bring anyone with you."

Kings could not have bought the services of Slim Dickenson unless he liked them. He was more than a servant; he was an intimate friend, and even, at times, a highly valued counselor. So Pelham did not rebuke, even in his thought, the comment of Dickenson. As a matter of fact, he agreed silently that Jerry was a bit reckless. They did not speak again until after they had passed White Plains. Then Pelham ordered Dickenson to slow down.



"And I certainly thought that I knew yours," snapped his partner.

"I don't know just where Mr. Tryon will meet us. Keep your eyes open for a car drawn up alongside the road, just beyond a cross street and around a curve."

"Right," said Dickenson. And half a mile beyond, rounding a curve, he threw out the clutch and applied the brakes, swerving in toward the high bank that bordered the road.

Pelham was out of the car and approaching the shadowy bulk of another machine almost before the wheels ceased moving. A dark figure detached itself from the gloom and approached him. "Mr. Pelham?" It was Jerry.

"Jerry?" Pelham replied.

"What's the big idea?" asked Jerry.

"What do you mean?" Pelham felt a sinking sensation in the pit of his stomach.

"Mean? I mean now that we're here, why are we here?" demanded Jerry. "You were so mysterious over the phone—"

"I was? You mean you were! Waking me up and telling me that you had followed the Gray Ghost out here and didn't want me to bring anyone—"

"Why, that's what you told me when you called me up," cried Jerry.

Pelham stared at him. "I haven't phoned you tonight, Jerry," he declared.

"Quit kidding! I talked with you," said Jerry.

"Of course; when you telephoned me to come out here," retorted Pelham.

"I didn't telephone you," protested Jerry.

"And I didn't telephone you," said Pelham.

"But I ought to know your voice," argued Jerry.

"And I certainly thought that I knew yours," snapped his partner.

Perplexed, bewildered, they stared at each other. Jerry, less acute than the younger man, reacted to the situation more slowly than Pelham.

So, when a big touring car, its brakes shrieking, stopped in the road beside them, and one of occupants leaning out of the car, asked " there? Tryon there?" Jerry Tryon answered the affirmative before Pelham could stop him. from the touring car came instantly flashes of and the loud reports of revolvers.

Pelham grasped Jerry and dragged Jerry's car. Slim Dickenson it was who turned tide of battle.

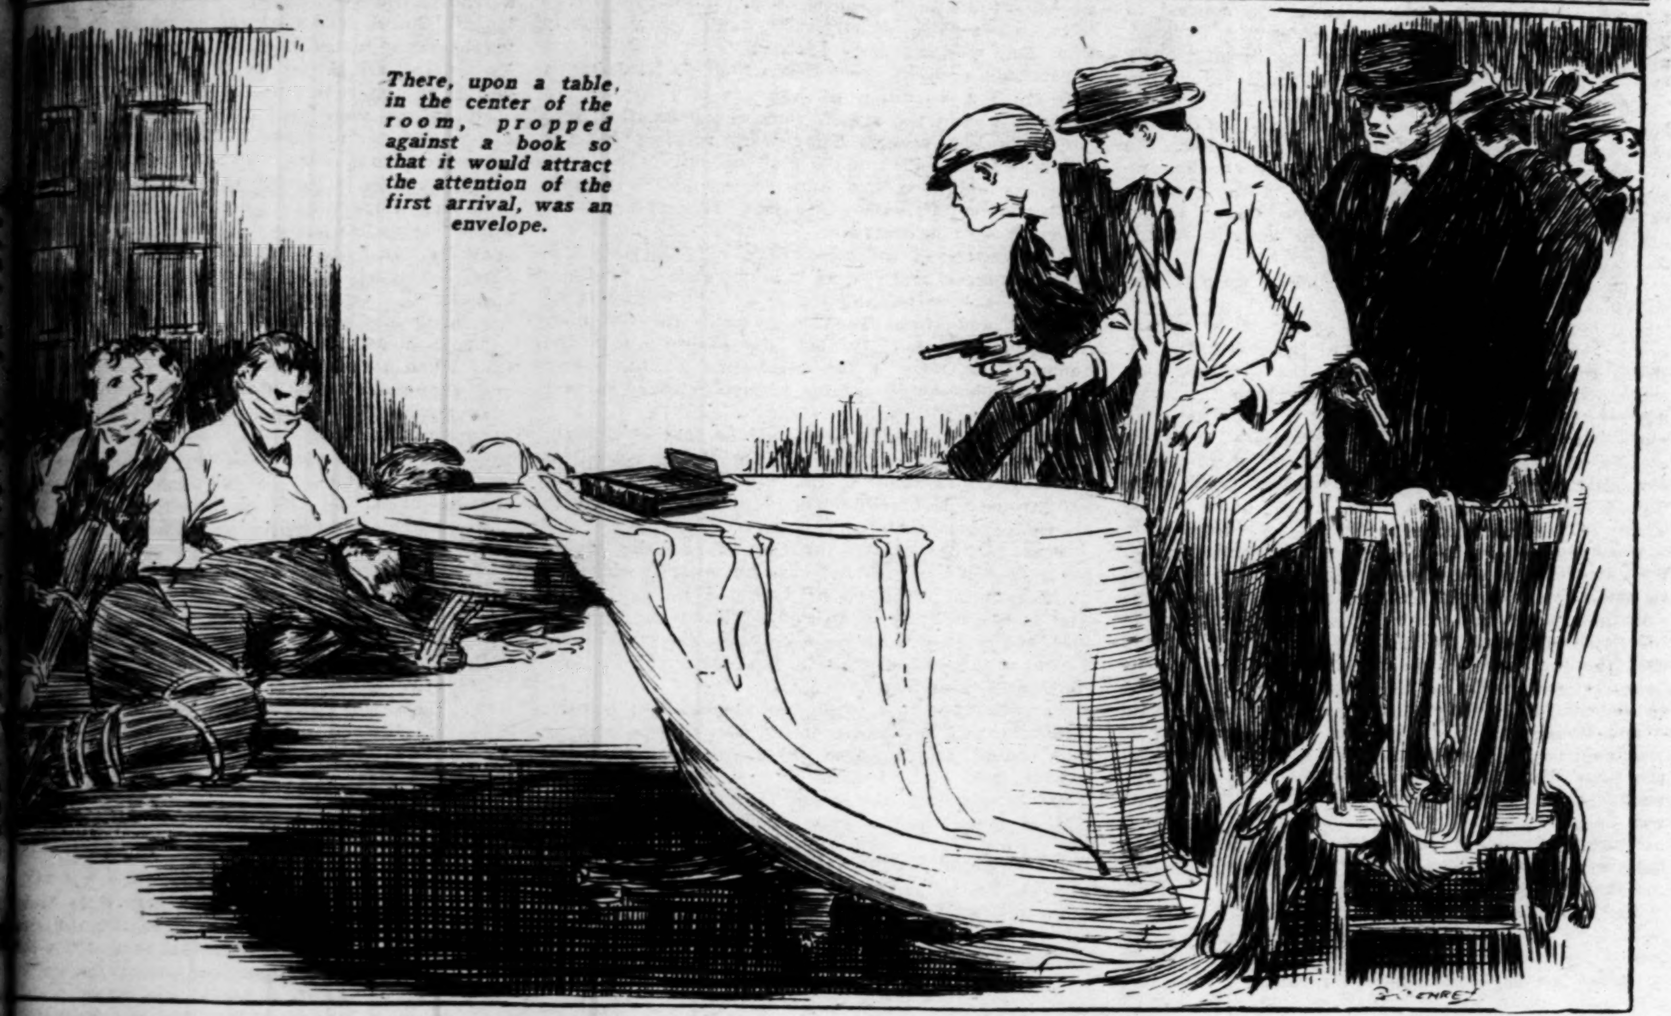
Matching Wits With The Gray Ghost



There, upon a table, in the center of the room, propped against a book so that it would attract the attention of the first arrival, was an envelope.

afternoon papers wasted no time in coming conclusion that the robbery was the Gray
's handiwork. And when reporters acked Slim son, who received the men of the press, in ence of Pelham, how it was that his em-had not noticed the strange activities only rods from his rear windows, Slim resented es of the questioners. It seemed to him that ered. So he blurted out the tale of the ruse whereby the Gray Ghost's great opponents had been lured away.

Slim had meant to defend his beloved employer from cynical aspersions. He failed lamentably. The morning newspapers not merely jeered at Pelham and Tryon; they sneered.

Pelham was not extraordinarily sensitive. Nevertheless, on the following day, he felt averse to meeting people whom he knew.

He lunched at his club. But his fellow members, even as they congratulated him on his escape from death two nights ago, were unable to hide their mirth at the manner in which he had been outwitted.

He dined alone, at a shabby little restaurant where he knew he would meet no acquaintances. He would not, though misery loves company, permit Jerry to accompany him. He said that he wanted to study the situation by himself. But, long before he had eaten dinner, he confessed to himself that this was merely an excuse.

After dinner he strolled aimlessly uptown, into the theatrical district. To kill the evening, he entered a vaudeville house.

Bored though he was, he sat through the program. And finally there came upon the stage an entertainer who was billed, outside the theater, as "An Added Attraction." And at the moment of his entrance, Pelham lost his boredom. For the man happened to be the gentleman who, two nights ago, had been so extremely interested, at the restaurant, in the speech of Pelham and Tryon. And on that billboard, outside the theater, beneath the name of "Samuel Bozell, the World's Greatest Ventriloquist," had been the line of invitation: "Come In and Hear Him Imitate Your Voice."

Eagerly, from the first moment of recognition, Pelham watched the man's act. It began with the usual banalities between Bozell and the dummy figure which he held upon his knee. But it ended with his offer to imitate the voice of anyone in the audience. Half a dozen people accepted his challenge. Immediately he would utter the words that had just left their mouths with an uncanny simulation of their voices.

Slim Dickenson was reading a book entitled, "Memoirs of the Wickedest Court in Europe," by a "Well-known Nobleman," when his employer burst into the apartment.

"Slim," began Pelham, "didn't you tell me the other day that an old friend of yours, a Maine guide like yourself, was doing an act in vaudeville?"

"Sure did," replied Slim. "Lem Higgins, from my own town of Juno. He's playing at the Castle this week. Comes on the stage all rigged up in the fanciest huntin' clothes ever I see, and begins imitating the voices and sounds of animals and birds. Shows how to call a moose. Has a real moose there that he's trained. Sure, I know him. Why?"

"I went to the Mirror vaudeville house tonight. A ventriloquist was on the bill. Two nights ago Tryon rebuked the man for trying to listen to our conversation in a restaurant."

"A ventriloquist, eh?" said Slim. "And a little later, someone with a voice just like Tryon's calls you up on the phone—"

"Slim, you're the quickest man I know. It doesn't sound crazy to you?" asked Pelham.

"There ain't anything sounds foolish to me if it has to do with the Gray Ghost," Slim declared. "But what about Lem Higgins?"

"Go to see him tonight, if you know where he lives. He must know Bozell—that's the ventriloquist. Get him to introduce you to Bozell. After that—Well, I leave it to you."

Lem Higgins had finished his act by the time that Slim arrived at the Castle Theater, but the stage doorkeeper obligingly informed the questioner that Mr. Higgins could probably be found at the Headliners' Club, that modestly named association of variety artists. The stage doorkeeper was correct; Lem Higgins was finishing a late supper when his old friend sent in his name. He came out to the hall, slapped his visitor on the back, and almost dragged him into the dining room and to his table. But Slim resisted Higgins' insistent desire to make Slim known to vaudeville's elite.

"There's only one guy in the world that you can introduce me to, Lem," he told the guide-actor. "Do you know a ventriloquist named Samuel Bozell?" He's playing at the Mirror this week.

Higgins eyed his friend curiously. "Now what interest have you in Sam Bozell?" he asked. "Your boss send you?"

"What do you mean by that?" demanded Slim.

Higgins' weather-beaten face took on a shrewd expression.

"Well, Mr. Pelham's a detective and Bozell's a crook. That ain't putting two and two together; it's easier than that; it's adding one and one."

Dickenson stared at his old friend. "Lem, you didn't use to be the gabbiest guide in Maine."

"I can keep my mouth shut now, if that's what you mean," grinned Higgins.

"I believe you," said Slim. "You just forget that, after I've left, that I ever mentioned Bozell. Now tell me what you know about him."

"It ain't much," said Higgins. "But he has a reputation all over the circuit of being crooked. Gives bad checks, trims his friends, you know. And lately he blossomed out with a new car, chauffeur and everything. Now you can't do that sort of thing on the salary you get in the four-a-day houses. He must have some phony game."

Slim whistled. "I want to meet him."

"That'll be easy," stated Higgins.

It was easy; on the following day Higgins introduced his friend to the ventriloquist. Slim—he called him Mr. Jonas Perkins—was a State of Maine man like Higgins. Higgins' success had made Mr. Perkins desirous of investing some of the capital that he had laid away, in a few good vaudeville acts. He was especially interested in building up Bozell's act until it became a complete evening's entertainment. He had good suggestions, too, as to how this could be accomplished.

It took less than an hour to convince Bozell, always on the lookout for easy money, that Mr. Jonas Perkins was the most gullible backwoodsman that ever breathed. Even the low cunning that Mr. Perkins showed, in demanding that Bozell put up an equal amount in financing the new production, did not change the ventriloquist's estimate of the mentality of his new acquaintance. He agreed to put up the equal share demanded by Mr. Perkins and to prove his ability to do so, he ostentatiously showed the new "angel" his bank book.

Slim took a mental note of the name of the bank. Next day Pelham was permitted by the bank officials to examine the account of Samuel Bozell. He discovered that Bozell had deposited checks, recently, which had not been earned in the practice of his profession. Those checks were traced to another bank; Pelham discovered the address of the J. H. Johnson who had drawn them.

The house wherein J. H. Johnson resided was watched by two operatives of the Tryon Agency. They were accompanied by the owner of the vacant house behind the establishment of Bennett & Darius. From the recesses of a taxicab the landlord saw entering the watched house a man whom he immediately identified as the agent of the novelty company to whom he had rented his premises. At eight o'clock that night, Bozell, under the third-degree examination to which Pelham and Jerry Tryon quite unwarrantably submitted him, broke down. He admitted that he had been engaged in several criminal transactions with a group of men whose names he gave to the detectives. He said that he had imitated the voices of Pelham and Tryon over the telephone. He said that he had not yet received his share of the proceeds of the fur robbery, stating that the furs were in the building now watched by Tryon's operatives, that there had not yet been time to dispose of the stolen property. But he also said—and no amount of cross-examination could make him change his statement—that he had never met the Gray Ghost, and did not believe him to be the master hand behind the group with which Bozell was associated.

"You see," said Tryon, after the man had been led away, "they'll tell anything except where to find the Gray Ghost."

Pelham shook his head. "Bozell is scared to death; he'd surrender his own mother to the gallows. He doesn't know."

"Mean to say that the Gray Ghost's followers can be in on half a dozen jobs and not know they're working for him?" grunted Tryon incredulously.

Pelham sighed wearily. "I don't know exactly what I do mean, Jerry. Let's go."

They motored to the house which J. H. Johnson had entered a couple of hours ago. Outside, in shadows across the street, were the operatives who had seen him enter. They were reinforced by a dozen other men in plain clothes, but these were members of the police department, acting temporarily under Pelham's orders. The surrounding streets were also guarded.

At a muttered order a group of detectives followed Pelham and Tryon up the stoop. Pelham rang the bell. He rang it again. He waited three minutes and then gave a command for the door to be battered in. He led his followers into the house, with Jerry Tryon struggling at his elbow for the lead, fearful that his beloved younger partner might suffer injury.

Just beyond the threshold, at the foot of a flight of stairs, he paused. The silence of the place was uncanny. The noise of the assault upon the door had aroused the neighborhood; it should have aroused the inmates of this house.

Perhaps they waited at the top of the stairs, ready to kill. . . . In that case he must be the first to face them. And so he bounded up the stairs. And at the landing he paused. The strangest sight that had ever—in his knocking around with Jerry Tryon, in his experiences in the war—met his eyes confronted him now.

For the door to a large room was open; electric lights burned brilliantly in a chandelier. And in that room, beneath those lights, lay the bound and gagged bodies of 15 men!

He strode into the room, Jerry and the plainclothes men behind him. There, upon a table in the center of the room, propped against a book so that it would attract the attention of the first arrival, was an envelope. It was addressed to Pelham. He picked it up, tore it open and read the note inside.

"My dear Mr. Pelham," he read. "I am an artist, not a bungling thief. I cannot see how you could imagine that I would be guilty of leaving a trail. And yet, according to the newspapers, believe that I, who deal only in money and would annoy myself with so clumsy a booty You will find the property of Messrs. Darius in the rooms upstairs.

"I resent your stupid assumption that I never fail in anything I undertake, should attempted your death without success. more strongly I resent the inefficient who have impersonated me, who have dared tempt to use my methods. And so I am them to you. It would not do for you to them. You will understand that it is necessary I make the vermin of the underworld that my name is not lightly to be used.

"And please be assured, my dear Mr. that when I decide that you are dangerous and should be removed, you will be removed."

It was signed "Peter Ballantyne," the guerre of the Gray Ghost. But threatening the tone of the epistle, Pelham laughed antly as he turned to Tryon. The Gray Ghost still at large, and yet he grinned.

"I knew all along it wasn't a Gray job," he cried.

Tryon was amused at this exhibition of the part of his coadjutor.

"Well," he said, pointing at the prisoners the floor, "that's a Gray Ghost job."

"And a good one, too," said Pelham.

He frowned as a thought came to him. Gray Ghost had happened to turn his talents detection instead of the commission of would have been without a rival. Still without a rival now. . . .

Dispiritedly he joined Tryon in searching finding, the method of egress, through a across the roofs, and down another the Gray Ghost's followers.

Would he always be a little too late? now, the Gray Ghost laughed at him. But best who laughs last. He could wait for laugh.

This American Artist Sits on the Sea's Bottom and Paints Picture

YOU would like to visit the bottom of the sea. You have said yourself many times that you should vastly love to fascinate your eyes with the fantastic marvels of the ocean's bed, with the glow of strange colors, the subtle emerald green of the all-surrounding waters, the brilliant red of submarine forests, the dark grandeur of submerged cliffs and hillsides. You have envied the diver, that fellow of perils, who plies his trade amid the splendors of the undersea.

There is a diver who transcribes these splendors for the delectation of the land folk. He brings up with him no drab black and white photographs, nor yet does he in a convenient studio, try to reproduce the color-burning grandeur of the ocean depths. He takes easel, canvas, paints, palette and brushes down into the hidden reaches of the watery chasm and there, with the gorgeous land of Neptune about him, paints with fresh and vivid duplication.

He is Zarah Pritchard, American artist, born in India of British parents and reared to the fascination of the southern ocean. Having become a painter, his mind reverted to the strange beauty of the sea, and above all to the hidden magnificence of the depths. He became a diver to familiarize himself with the underwater and finally devised paints mixed with special oils and special canvases soaked in linseed oil, so that he was able to descend with his artist's paraphernalia—the easel made of iron—to depths of from 16 to 50 feet, with his canvas and paints out in the water, put brush to canvas almost as efficiently as if he were smoking his pipe in a high and dry studio.

Put yourself into this artist-diver's clothing and helmet. You stand intently scrutinizing a weird submarine tree through the glass at the front of your visor. You breathe easily, as pure air flows constantly through the tubes from the boat above. You are 30 feet down, sitting on a sandy bottom. The from the airy regions above the sea shines clearly with a curious greenish gleam.

the standards of society, as though they were in some way to blame. Sometimes this goes so far as to advocate a complete change in the attitude of the Government towards property rights. More generally this takes the form of some proposal for extended Government control and regulation, and a radical change in the theory of taxation. The fundamental purpose sought in these proposals is said to be more equal distribution of the results of industry. Our country is an exceedingly good example of the fact that if production be encouraged and increased, then distribution fairly well takes care of itself. Other countries, by their actions in stopping production, in penalizing industry and economy, and rewarding indolence and extravagance, have been able to bring about a very general and equal distribution of misery, but no other country ever approached ours in the equal and general distribution of prosperity. The tendency, at the present time, is all in the direction of distribution of industrial income among the employes, rather than retaining it as an accumulation of capital or distributing it to stockholders. Perhaps it is well to remember that some of the greatest fortunes in America have been voluntarily given away and dedicated to charitable purposes. Our institutions all seem ultimately to function in the direction of charity, in the direction of civilization.

It is not on this side of our life that we need to put the emphasis at the present time. We had our day of laying the foundation of modern industry, the consolidations, and the intense stimulation of production, in the closing decades of the last century. We had our day of bringing these great agencies under public control and regulation, in the opening decades of the present century. We have looked to our industries. We have looked to our Government. We may well let a season of adjustment and experience disclose the results of the theories which have been adopted in the past 40 years. Present appearances would indicate that there is little more to be hoped for by extending our course in that direction.

The time appears to have arrived when we may more properly look to the people, when natural laws may well be left to supplement artificial laws. It is necessary always to give a great deal of thought to liberty. There is no substitute for it. Nothing else is quite so effective. Unless it be preserved, there is little else that is worth while. In complete freedom of action, the people oftentimes have a more effective remedy than can be supplied by Government interference. Individual initiative, in the long run, is a firmer reliance than bureaucratic supervision. When the people work out their own economic and social destiny, they generally reach sound conclusions.

This is by no means saying that we have reached perfection in any province, it is merely a consideration of some of the things that the liberally educated ought to do to promote progress. We have reached the antithesis of the asceticism of the Middle Ages. There is no tendency now to despise self-gratification or to hold what we call fairs in contempt. This is dangerous. the balance of this age we must seek another We do not need more material development, more spiritual development. We do not need intellectual power, we need more moral power. do not need more knowledge, we need more ter. We do not need more government, more culture. We do not need more law, more religion. We do not need more of the that are seen, we need more of the things unseen. It is on that side of life that it is to put the emphasis at the present time. side be strengthened, the other side will of itself. It is that side which is the all else. If the foundation be firm the ture will stand. The success or failure ucation, the justification of its protection couragement by the Government, and of by society, will be measured by its ability to this great cause, to perform the necessary to make the required redeeming sacrifices.

Reflecting no heaven, nor even the room
Have you thought of me, a weary peace,
A servant in the house of God,
A heart dissolved in gospel love?
Now I lived in poverty, upon the bounty
Visiting the sick, comforting the oppressed,
Counseling love, forgiveness, charity, the

A shepherd of men to the fold of heaven.
Then brought to this humble grave and Lost in the deep and sunken earth of fifty
Do you know who I was?

The fatal hilarity of the Sunday excursionist.

THE SUNDAY EXCURSIONIST.

SOMEBODY—who he was doesn't make any difference—has said something like the following: "There is something grand in the grief of the Common People, but there is no sadder sight on earth than that of a Philistine enjoying himself."

If a man would realize the truth of this, let him go on a Sunday excursion.

The male Sunday excursionist enjoys himself as the darkeys say, "a-gwine and a-comin'." No other thing on earth can hold quite so much bubbling and vociferous joy. The welkin that would not ring when the Sunday excursionist opens his escape valve is not worth a cent.

Six days the Sunday excursionist labors and does his work, but he does his best to refute the opponents of the theory of the late Charles Darwin. He occupies all the vacant seats in the car with his accomplices, and lets his accursed good nature spray over the rest of the passengers. He is so infernally happy that he wants everybody, to the brakeman on the rear car, to know it. He is so devilishly agreeable, so perniciously jolly and so abominably entertaining that people who were born with or have acquired brains love him most vindictively.

People who become enamored of the Sunday excursionist are apt to grow insanely jealous, and have been known to rise up and murder him when a stranger enters the car and he proceeds to repeat his funny remarks for the benefit of a fresh audience.

The female Sunday excursionist generally accompanies him. She brings her laugh with her, and takes a turn in the pauses of his low comedy work. She never by any accident misplaces her laugh or allows it to get out of curl. It ripples naturally and conforms readily to the size of the car. She sits on the male Sunday excursionist's hat, and he sits on hers, and if the other passengers are feeling worse than usual, they sing "The Suwanee River." There is enough woe and sorrow in the world without augmenting it in this way.

Men who have braved the deepest troubles and emerged unscathed from the heaviest afflictions have gone down with a shriek of horror and despair before the fatal hilarity of the Sunday excursionist. There is no escape from his effects.

NOVEL ADVICE.

(Which might have been written .—terday.)

SOMEBODY tapped on the door of the editorial rooms yesterday with a parasol, and the sporting editor, who always puts on airs when the literary editor is out, called out: "Ong tray!"

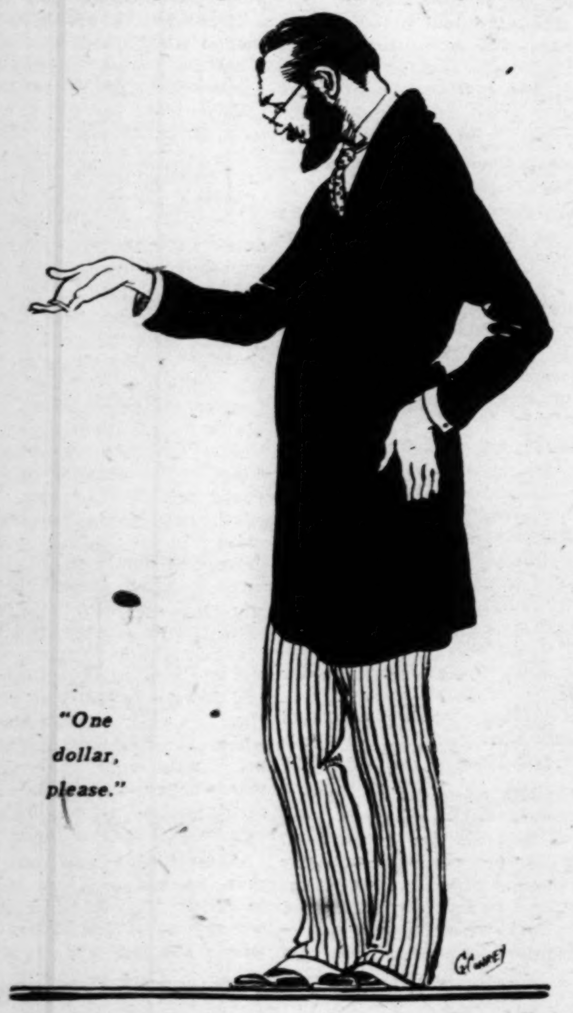
A lady entered, with a tripping gait, and fluttered over to his desk.

"Are you the young man who passes on contributions?" she asked.

"No miss," said the s. e. "But I have traveled around some trying to get contributions, on passes. If that tightly rolled MS. you have there now is a sonnet, stating that November's chill and spectral hand is on the withered globe, I am afraid that you will have to talk to the business manager and have it entered at u. r., which means usual rates. You see, we ran a great deal of spectral hand and withered globe and dying roses business during October. If it was something, now, a little livelier we could use it very nicely.

"Oh, but it is not a poem, it is a love story," said the young lady.

"That is quite different," said the s. e., frowning a little and putting his feet against a picture of Maud S. on the wall. "Does the heroine begin to feel that she has vague longings for some more congenial spirit—someone who can understand the caprices and mysterious, unfathomable intricacies of a woman's heart in the first chapter, or toward the last? And about what part in the narrative does she come to the conclusion that her husband is a sordid; sore-eyed chump, without a soul above groceries, mortgages and onions, and pine for a handsome, cynical man, who sneers at virtue and has a sad, restless way of skinning a potato that reminds her of Lord Byron?"



"One dollar, please."

"The heroine is not married, and she bears a holy and pure love for a young man who is faithful and true to her."

"Well, I am afraid she can't trot in the same heat with the fillies the public wants to bet on nowadays. What the average reader wants now is something about a lurid, passionate heroine, who, after marrying a cold, reserved man, who can not satisfy the cravings of her heart and breathes in his glass while drinking, gets a divorce by telegraph, and in the last chapter falls with a restful sigh into the arms of a man who is an agnostic, with calm, clear-cut features, a past, and who keeps a private shaving cup in the barber shop. Couldn't you introduce a plot of that kind in your story, and still preserve what our dramatic editor calls the unities when he writes up a show he hasn't seen?"

"I'm afraid my story could not be changed so much. I will call again and see the literary editor."

"Oh, you stand a much better chance with me than you would with him at present. Somebody has written and asked him to publish a comparative estimate of the characters of Cinderella, Trilby and Socrates, stating all points on which they differ, and why, and he has gone down to the roller mill to grind his teeth. However, you may come back and see him tomorrow. Don't mention it. Glad to have been of service to you."

A LITTLE DAMP..

AS the steamer reached Aransas Pass a Galveston man fell overboard. A life buoy was thrown him, but he thrust it aside contemptuously. A boat was hurriedly lowered, and reached him just as he came to the surface for the second time. Helping hands were stretched forth to rescue him, but he spurned their aid. He spat out about a pint of sea water and shouted:

"Go away and leave me alone. I'm walking on the bottom. You'll run your boat aground in a minute. I'll wade out when I get ready and go up to a barber shop and get dusted off. The ground's damp a little, but I ain't afraid of catching cold."

He went under for the last time, and the boat pulled back for the ship. The Galveston man had exhibited to the last his scorn and contempt for any other port that claimed deep water.

HOW VOLCANOES SAVE THE EARTH FROM "SUICIDE

ETNA, the "burning mountain," recently active after several years of comparative quiet, is Europe's biggest and most dreaded volcano. It is 10,800 feet high—150 feet lower than it was 50 years ago—and measures no less than 91 miles in circumference at its base.

Although volcanoes are often referred to as burning mountains, in reality they do not burn at all. Neither are they mountains in the true sense of the term. The scientific definition of a volcano is "an opening in the earth's crust, through which heated matter is thrown up from the earth's interior to the surface, where it usually forms a hill, more or less conical in shape, and generally with a hollow or crater at the top."

Where eruptions frequently occur, the heated materials forced upwards pile themselves to heights which cause them to be classed as mountains.

What looks like fire belching forth is merely the reflection of the molten lava on the clouds of steam which hang over the crater. The steam itself is often wrongly spoken of as smoke.

The cause of volcanic action is not known. The most popular theory is that it is brought about by water getting into the white-hot furnace below the earth's crust. In support of this the fact is cited that nearly all the most active volcanoes are close to the sea.

Volcanoes are really safety valves. Without them we could hardly have existed at all, for scientists say it is due to volcanic action that the continents emerged from the sea. Earthquakes, which are usually more terrible in their effects than volcanoes, would occur much more frequently but for these safety valves.

Between 600 and 700 volcanoes have been counted in various parts of the world, and of these 270 are still on the active list. Vesuvius was silent for over 2000 years before it suddenly woke up and, in a few hours, destroyed Pompeii. Etna is known to have been active as far back as 500 B. C. In 1186 it destroyed 15,000 people, since when, at varying intervals, it has been the scene of a number of disasters.

In Italy and in some of the volcanic islands of the Pacific the steam power issuing from volcanoes has been harnessed for engineering purposes. The people of the Tuscan town of Lardello light their streets, heat their homes and do their cooking by means of volcanic steam pressure, which generates enough heat to cook a joint in less than half an hour.

In another district in Italy volcanic energy is exploited for the purpose of making electricity, which is supplied to many towns, some of them more than 50 miles distant. The steam is carried through pipes to huge boilers, where its heat converts water into still more steam which drives the dynamos and provides central heating in many houses. Similar installations are being erected in other parts of [illegible] and the future may see that country become [illegible] electric power station, supplying electricity to [illegible] Europe.

The great spectacular volcano of Kilauea, [illegible] waii, is to be made to justify its existence [illegible] same way. The crater of Kilauea is a vast [illegible] molten lava, and this will be harnessed to supply [illegible] Hawaiian community with light, heat and [illegible]

The time may be not far distant when the [illegible] and most active volcanoes, instead of being a [illegible] ed menace to the safety of man, will contribute [illegible] terially to his happiness and comfort.

How Often Have You Been Gimmicked?

"'Darn it!' said the grifter, when the other man had gone. 'That guy knew more'n I did. I didn't think there was a double gimmick on that knife.'

"The stranger, needless to say, had been the grifter's shillaber. Such ingenious little instruments of fraud are being invented and manufactured constantly, and discarded in favor of newer ones as they become too widely known."

Our Mr. Smith goes on to describe the game known to the grifting fraternity as "huckery buck" or "huckely buck." Your eye is caught by the man with a series of little tin cans, buckets or tubs, or a triangle of little wooden barrels. The trick is to make three balls, tossed into those receptacles at short range, stay there.

"All of us have tried it again and again. It looks extravagantly simple, but the balls always bounce out again. Let one toss them ever so gently, out they pop and the prize is lost. But the fellow next to us makes them stick. How come?

"This game is called huckery buck or huckely buck, depending on whether one talks to an Eastern or to a Western grifter, and it is managed in a hundred fashions. It is one of the classics of parkland. Of course, it is gimmicked. Last summer at one of the principal parks I saw a mellow old grifter, a man who had come through all the imaginable splendors and vicissitudes of life with a faint, sad smile, playing live chickens or ducks against the dimes of the innocents. No one won until I stepped up under the arm of a famous old gymnast. The grifter recognized us instantly and invited us to play. My friend did so, and soon won four ducks.

"'Keep 'em for me until I come by, will you?' he asked.

"'Surest thing, old man,' said the grifter, without the slightest hint of unusual familiarity. And then, turning to the crowd:

"'These four ducks belong to the gentleman there. Please remember they are reserved—not to be played foah! Anything else is yours, my friends. Step right up and win the fresh, unkilled poultry!'

"The huckery buck game is gimmicked in a very simple manner. Buried in the earth under the kegs or buckets are a number of stiff wires which lead to taps, plunges or buttons in several parts of the grifter's lair. These control the false bottoms of the various receptacles. If a friend strolls by, the grifter neglects to touch or step on any of these controls and the spring bottom does not rise. Naturally, the friend wins. But let the sucker come by with his money, and instantly the grifter steps on a control and there is no winning. The ball hits the springed bottom and out it pops."

It is somewhat encouraging to the ethical enthusiast to learn that the games played in summer parks and along boardwalks are verging gradually toward commercial honesty. "Perhaps 50 per cent of all games now permitted are what the grifter calls 'percentage rackets.' By that he means that the operator of the booth gets a high price, or 'percentage,' but does no fixing or gimmicking.

"For instance, in every park and on every boardwalk today are various race horse, balloon inflating, automobile racing and similar mechanisms. Upon a mechanical board are the balloons, horses or motors; before the player is a circular disk which he rotates. This turned wheel controls the movements of a certain balloon, horse or car. There are usually from 10 to 20 such mechanical controls for players. Each player pays 10 or 15 cents. Thus a 10-wheel game, at 15 cents a place, was operated all last summer in a resort where I was stopping, for prizes of fancy basketware. Every time the grifter started his mechanism he took in a dollar and a half and gave out an ornate basket whose wholesale price was and is less than 50 cents.

"But though these percentage games grow in favor, the old tricks survive and the public seems to give them unwavering affection. There is the strength-testing sledge machine. You strike a plunger and shoot a weight up a wire line to ring a gong at the top of a tall beam. The number of pounds of supposed pressure is registered on the sides of the upright column. All day long some lusty-looking shillaber stands there and sends the weight to the top at every blow of his mallet. But when you step up—ah, the difference! The grifter has simply touched the little control which warps the track-wire slightly, and though you were Hercules and Samson no blow of yours could ever ring the bell. This obtains in cases where the hammer machine is used for prize winning. Where there are no prizes there is likewise no gimmick and ringing the bell depends solely on a square and honest blow."

After telling how, one day this summer, he lost his own money in trying to buck the familiar cat-rack game, where you knock down a row of cats with a baseball—if you can, though you can't, because the game is gimm[illegible] Mr. Smith concludes:

"The grifter's cry taunted [illegible] the pavement. To such devices [illegible] inventive spirit of man devote [illegible] the same spirit that lifted [illegible] Parnassus. What can one expect [illegible] good old summer time?"

varicators and lies of all kinds, white, variegated and black.

So strongly was he affected and in such fertile ground did the seed sown by the great evangelist fall, that the Houston man, who had been accustomed to occasionally evade the truth, determined one morning he would turn over a new leaf and tell the truth in all things, big and little. So he commenced the day by scorning to speak even a word that did not follow the exact truth for a model.

At breakfast, his wife said:

"How are the biscuit, Henry?"

"Rather heavy," he answered, "and about half done."

His wife flounced out of the dining room and he ate breakfast with the children. Ordinarily Henry would have said: "They are very fine, my dear," and all would have been well.

As he went out the gate, his rich old aunt, with whom he had always been a favorite, drove up. She was curled, and stayed, and powdered to look as young as possible.

"Oh, Henry," she simpered, "how are Ella and the children? I would come in, but I'm looking such a fright today I'm not fit to be seen."

"Yes," said Henry, "you do. It's a good thing your horse has a blind bridle on, for if he got a sight of you he'd run away and break your neck."

His aunt glanced icily at him and drove away without saying a word.

Henry figured it up afterward and found that every word he said to her cost him $8000.

BACHELOR PAINTER WHOM MANY WOMEN LOVED

"I COULD not lose the honor this opportunity affords me of going down to posterity on the hem of your garment," said Sir Reynolds, whose bicentenary was ated recently, to Sarah Siddons, eat actress. He had finished that masterpiece "The Tragic Muse"— recently came to America for as thousands as the artist received —and inscribed his name in the ing on the fringe of the actress' mantle.

Joshua, who was born on July 16, was a general favorite with the although he lived and died a , and he painted all the great of his age. His name has often coupled with that of Angelica una, one of the original members Royal Academy, and he always her "Miss Angel." But if Reyn ever had a real romance, it was bly centered with Fanny Burney, brilliant author of "Evelina," as s of a very entertaining "Diary." ynolds confessed to Dr. Johnson had he thought of matrimony, was no one of whom he had "so fear as little Burney." Gainsborough, on the contrary, had no "com- manners." When he was painting "Mrs. Siddons," one of the glories English National Gallery, he kept ing her large nose and then painted it out again. "Bother your nose, madam!" he exclaimed; "there is no end to it."

Boswell's "Life of Johnson" included many stories told by Reynolds to the author. Reynolds was always doing someone a good turn. A son of an old friend was prevented by illness from going home to Plymouth on his sixteenth birthday. "Never mind," said Reynolds, "I will send you to your father," and he there and then painted a portrait of the youth and sent it to his home as a gift.

Reynolds was very deaf, and invariably carried an ear trumpet. He also had a split upper lip, which came very near to "spoiling his beauty." He and his horse fell down a precipice in Corsica when he was a young man, and he almost miraculously escaped death.

He painted his own portrait scores of times, and his record of finished works is only surpassed by Turner. Yet he found time to hobnob with Garrick and Johnson and Burke and Goldsmith, and was one of the best hosts of his time. His painting room was crowded with women who wished to be transmitted as angels and men who wanted to appear as heroes and philosophers.

He painted his old friend Dr. Johnson at least seven times. When he painted him reading, Johnson resented the fact that he was shown with the book very close to his eyes, saying that he would never allow himself to go down to posterity as "Blinking Sam." But the portrait in the English National Gallery is one of the finest in the world.

Reynolds lies in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. His greatest memorial, other than his art, is the Royal Academy, which he founded and of which he was the first president.

Much to his surprise, his fellow townsmen of Plympton elected him Mayor of Plympton. On his election he visited the little place, and later sent a portrait of himself for the Town Hall.

When this portrait arrived, one of the Councillors suggested that it should be placed between "two old oil paintings which will serve as a foil." The two "old paintings" proved to be early ones by Sir Joshua himself!

"Government is a very simple thing, after all," said Mr. Harding before he was elected President. No doubt he learned otherwise before he died, as Woodrow Wilson, shown here in his automobile when calling at the White House to express his sorrow because of President Harding's sudden death, learned long before he completed his eight years in what he called "the lonesomest job on earth" and probably found to be the most complex. —Copyright, United News Pictures

The news value of this picture, taken Sept. 16, 1919, lies in the fact that it embalms the incident that made Calvin Coolidge President. A coal strike this winter would give President Coolidge much concern, but it wouldn't bother the President's father, who burns wood exclusively in his Vermont farmhouse. The elder Coolidge saws and splits his own firewood, and is seen here on the job. The picture at the right, above, shows that Mrs. Coolidge also came from a humble home. Is Your Skin as Smooth as Rose-petals?

By MME. JEANNETTE

YOUR powder puts the little exquisite finish to your skin and gives the look of freshness and youth to cheeks and chin and brow. But you must select a good pure powder.

And then you must elect to use this powder at all times, for it is not advisable to use different kinds during the same season.

Pompeian Beauty Powder adds a velvety quality to your skin and gives it a radiant clearness.

It is delightful in its consistency—and is not so light and fine as to come off easily, nor so heavy that it cakes and makes your powdering obvious.

Use after applying Pompeian Day Cream (a vanishing cream made especially as a foundation for this powder). You will find that your powder goes on more smoothly and adheres longer.

Pompeian Beauty Powder gives you the opportunity to select your own correct shade—it comes in Naturelle, Rachel, Flesh, and White.

After you have generously patted your powder on, and deftly smoothed it off, you should add the suggestion of roses to your cheeks. Pompeian Bloom gives that desired touch of color which adds new beauty to the eyes.

It comes in Light, Medium, and Dark shades, and in the Orange tint, the latter blending most naturally with the Rachel and Naturelle shades of powder.

Now the captivating touch of Pompeian Lip Stick to accent the characteristic lines of the mouth, and to complement the rose tint of your cheeks.

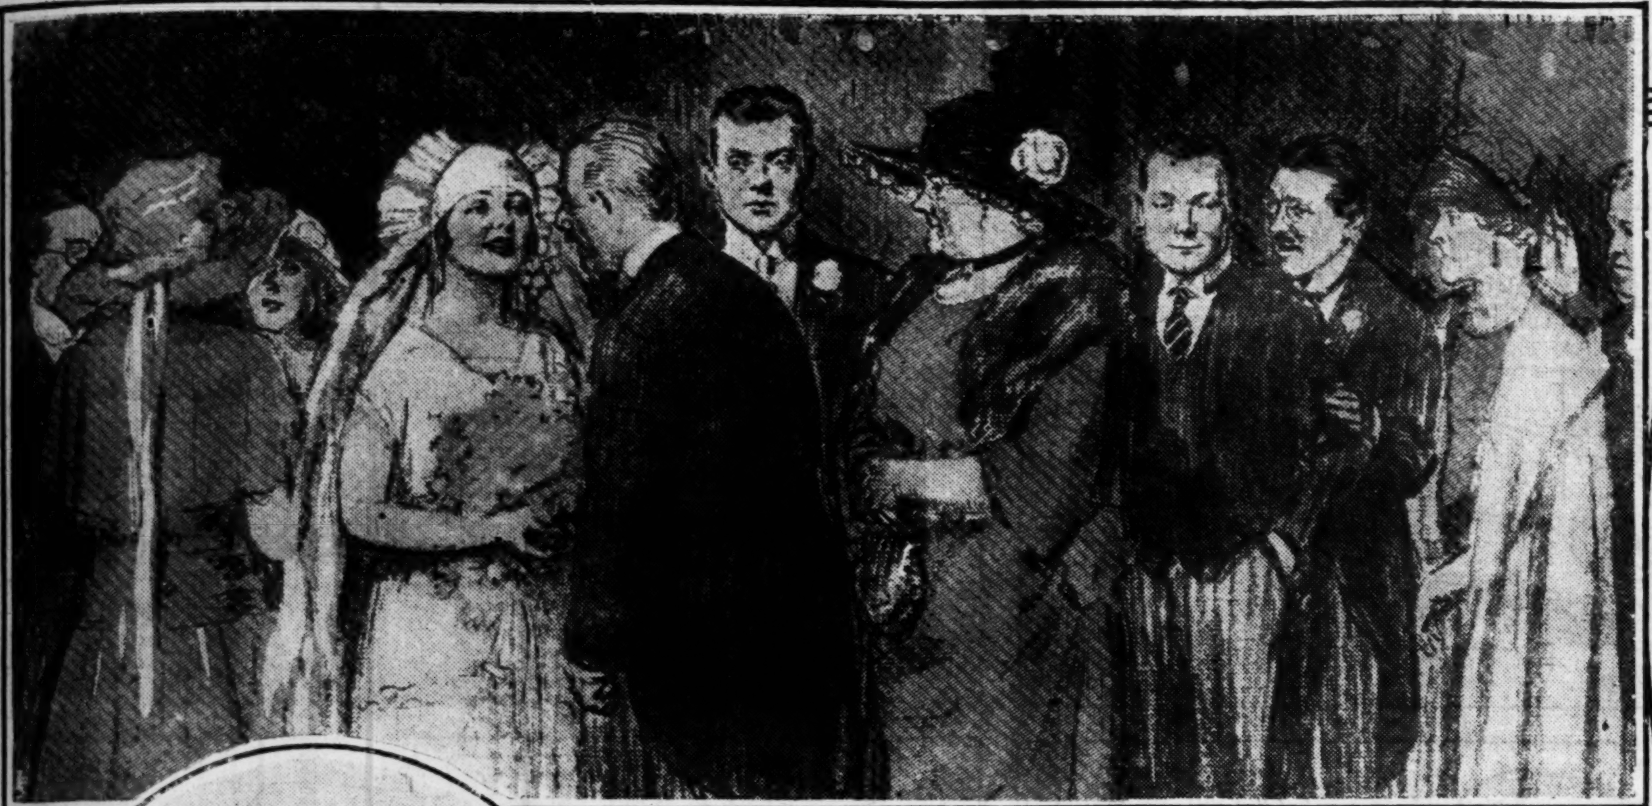
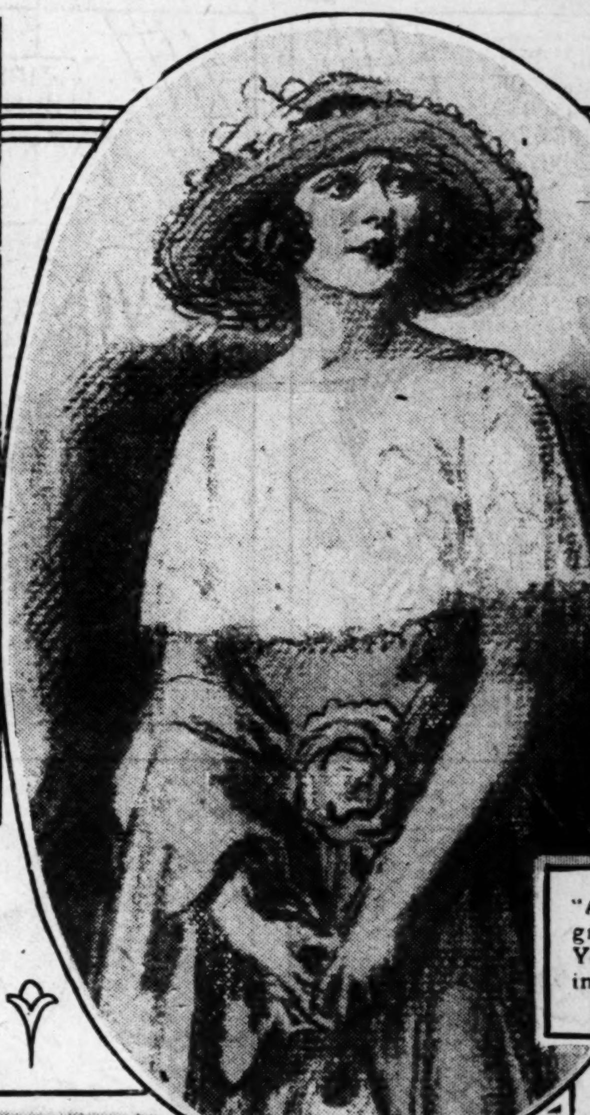
THE WEDDING GUESTS

(Copyright)

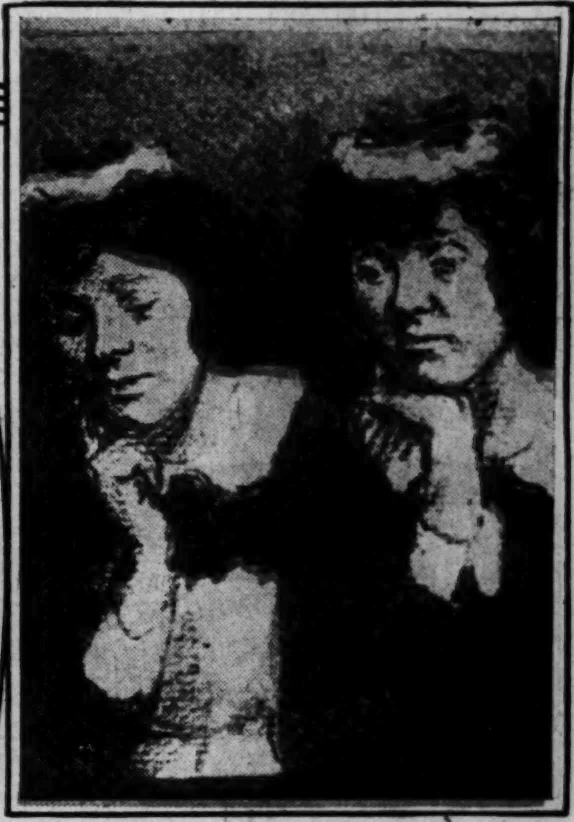
BY E. W. HILL



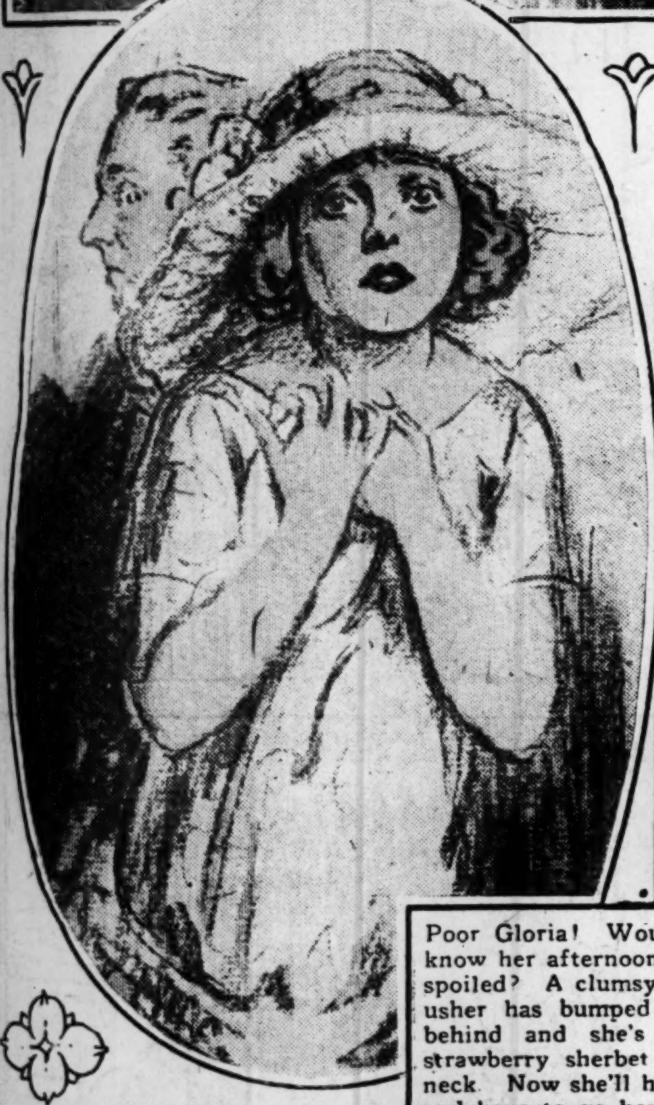
Cousin Clarkson has just given the bride the moistest kiss of the afternoon, and the happy bride is saying "Oh, Cousin Clarkson (pause to make sure whether it was a gravyboat or a teaball), I can't begin to tell you how pleased Joe and I were with the darling little teaball you sent us! We'll think of you whenever we use it. And you must come and HELP us use it just as soon as we're at home!" The large lady behind Cousin Clarkson is going to kiss Gertrude on both cheeks and then say, "May I?" and kiss the blushing bridegroom. Following on the heels of the large lady are two friends of the groom, planning some deviltry, no doubt.



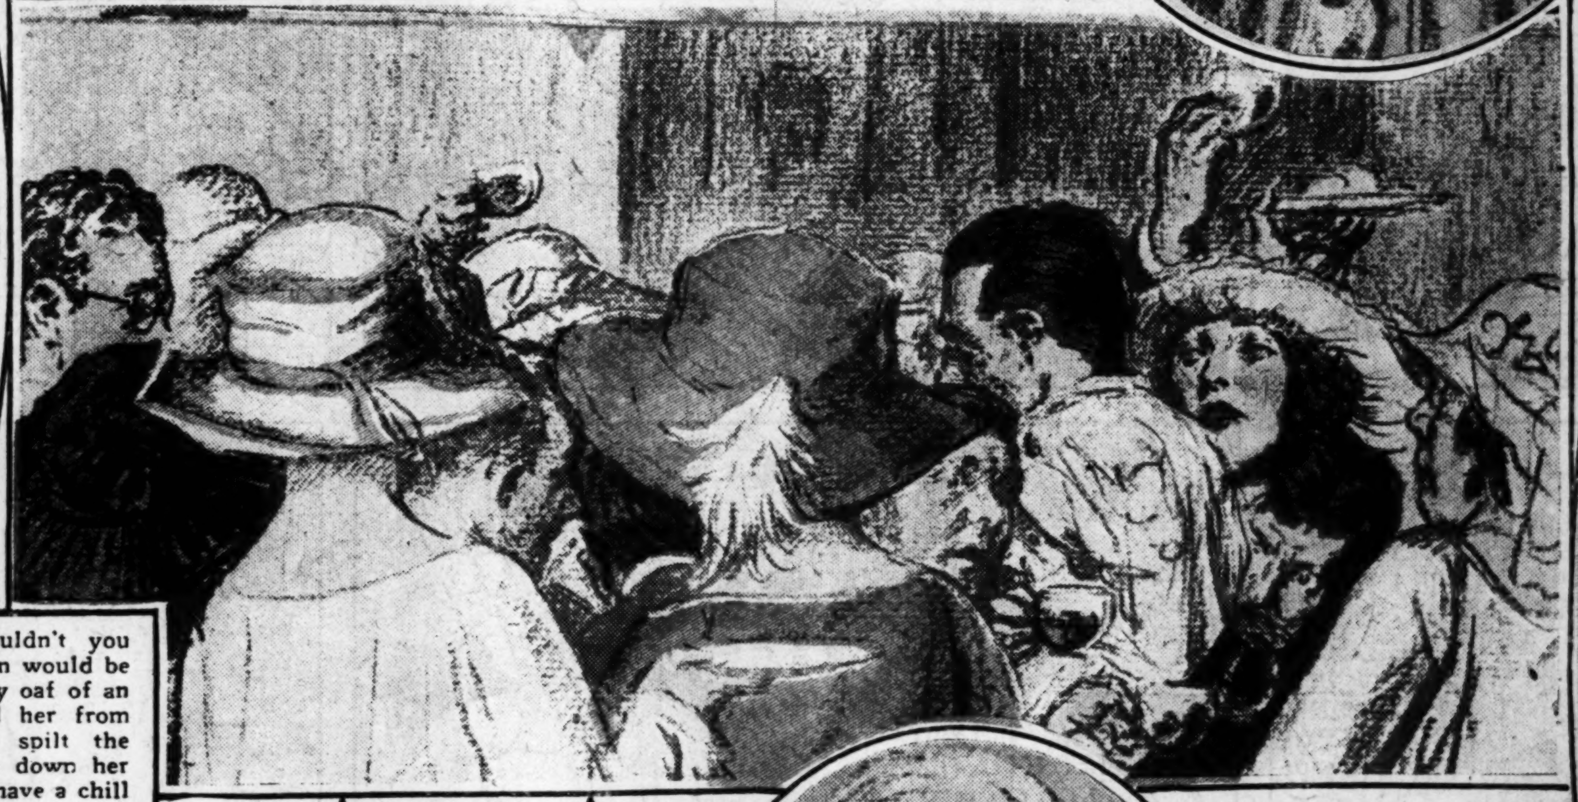
"Aren't they going to give out confetti?" Young lady guest trying to start something.



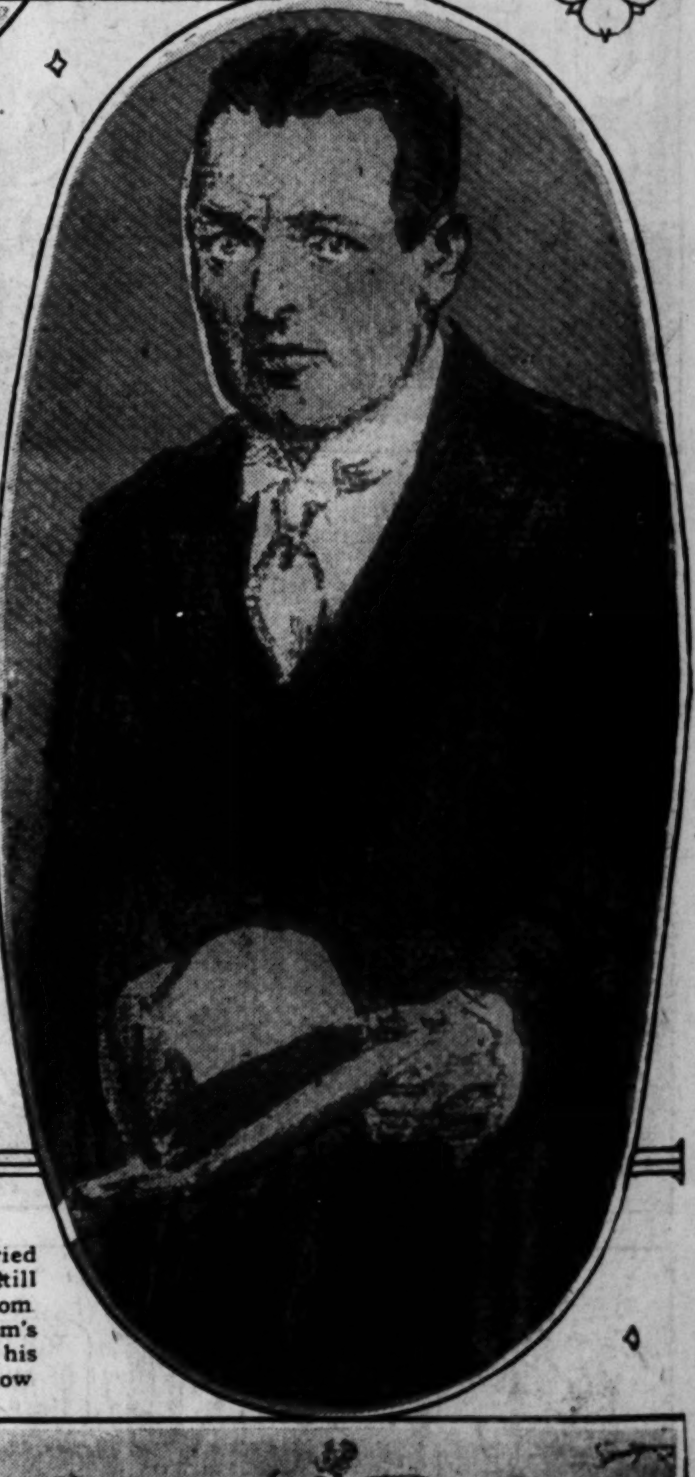
The maids on the upper landing.



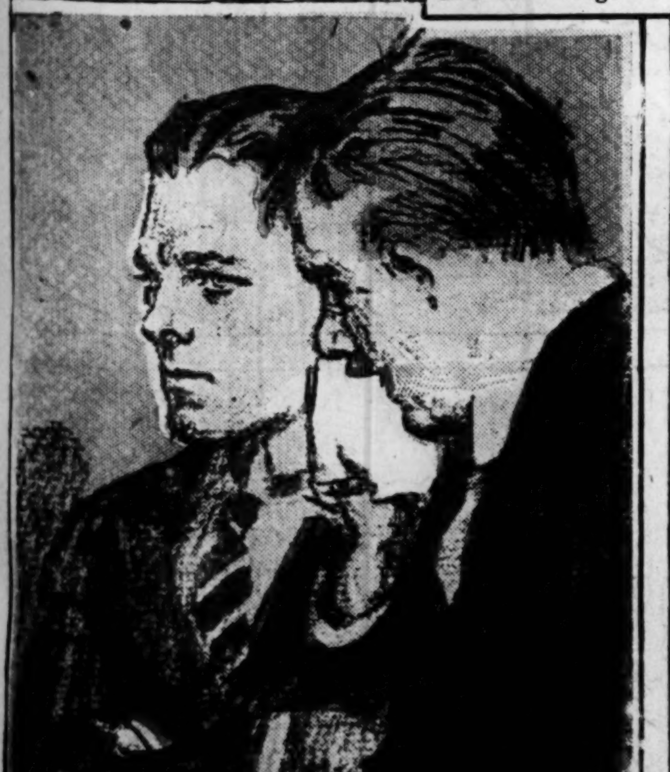
Poor Gloria! Wouldn't you know her afternoon would be spoiled? A clumsy oaf of an usher has bumped her from behind and she's spilt the strawberry sherbet down her neck. Now she'll have a chill and have to go home!



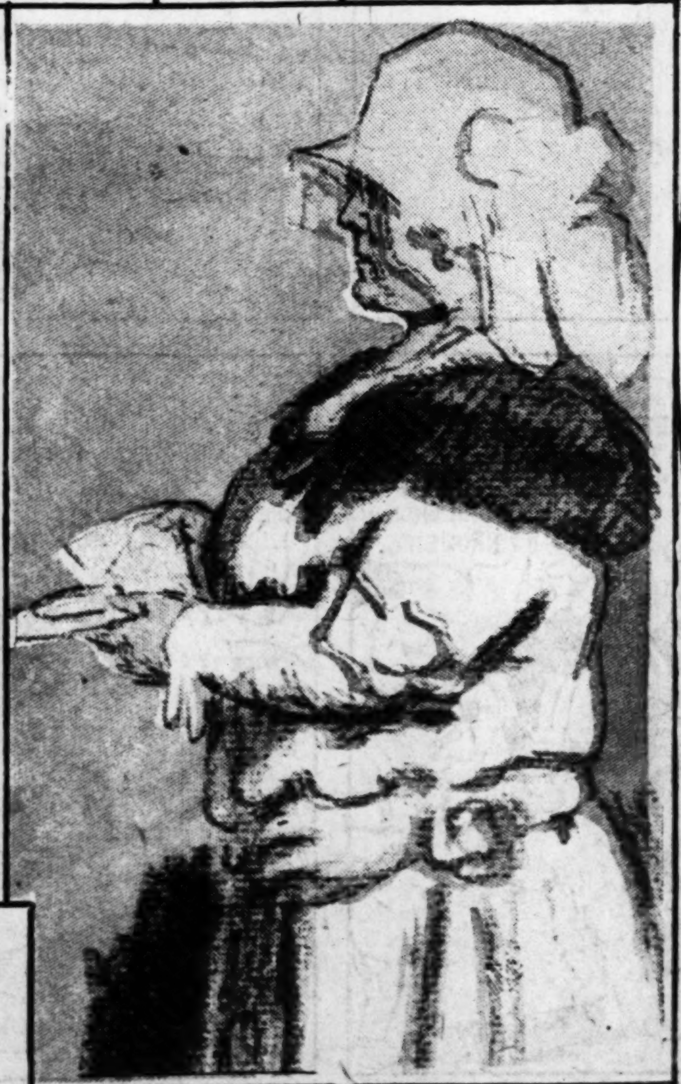
Around the punchbowl. Exactly one minute after the ceremony. The guests at a home wedding know from experience that it won't be the same old stick if they wait for the second filling.



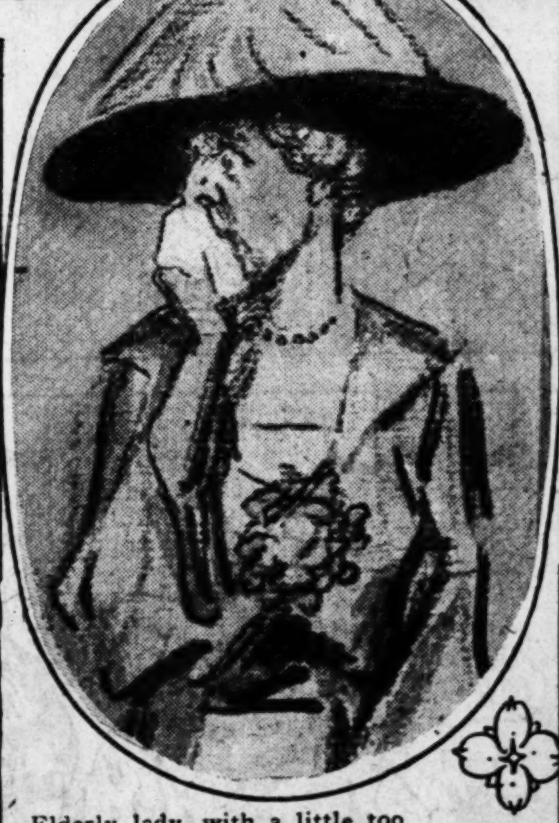
Very much worried best man on a still hunt for the groom. He has the groom's traveling bag and his going-away hat in tow.



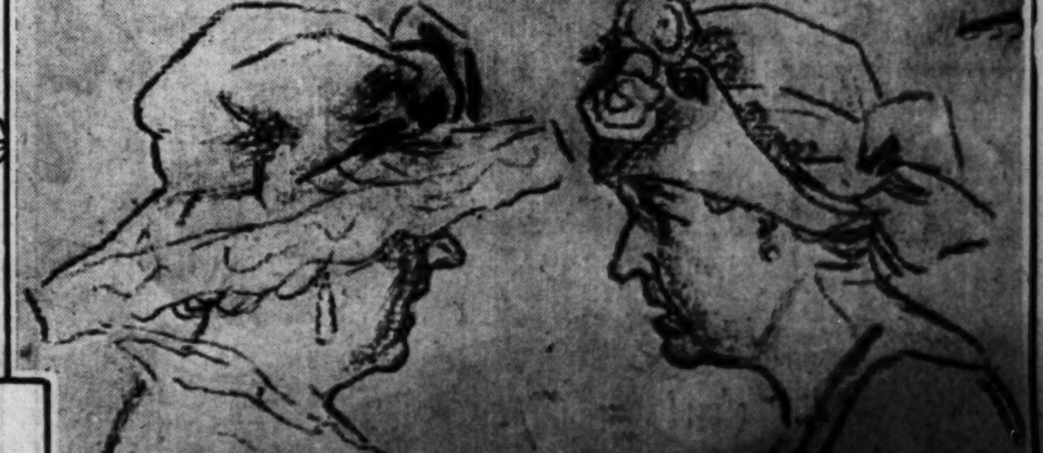
Bibulous guest, weeping into the ear of an unsympathetic usher. The punch has brought it home, all too late, that the bride is the only girl he ever loved.



Wedding guest in far corner, stranded with a plate, a little napkin and a dry roll.



Elderly lady, with a little too much punch, crying softly. She has kissed the bride three times. As the caterers' servitor has remarked to the upstairs maid, "It's the elderly ladies who get after the punch!"



Two friends of the bride talking over the groom's family in no uncertain terms.
